

Chapter 112-4

//

Driving from Gulang Pavilion to Minghui took only about ten minutes.

But the road was completely clear, and Liang Shi drove fast, arriving downstairs at Minghui in just eight minutes.

Liang Shi parked the car by the roadside and sent Xu Qingzhu another message: 【I'm here, come down.】

In less than two minutes, Xu Qingzhu's figure appeared downstairs at Minghui.

She also quickly spotted Liang Shi's car.

Xu Qingzhu opened the door and got in, her movements smooth and fluid.

She probably found her hair troublesome, so she had clipped it up with a white hair clip, leaving a few strands of hair on either side, making her hair look thick and full.

Today she wore a white fitted base layer top, black high-waisted wide-leg pants, and five-centimeter high heels. As soon as she got in the car, she took off her coat and tossed it in the back seat, only to discover that Liang Shi hadn't turned on the heater.

Xu Qingzhu rubbed her hands together. "Why didn't you turn on the heater?"

Liang Shi: "It's not that cold."

While saying this, she turned on the car's heater and naturally reached out to hold Xu Qingzhu's hand.

Ice cold.

Liang Shi frowned. "Have you seen a doctor? It's not even winter yet—what are you going to do when winter comes? Your hands and feet are this cold every day."

Xu Qingzhu said while fastening her seatbelt, "I've seen doctors. They all say it's a constitution issue and doesn't affect my health."

Liang Shi tried to warm her hands but found that no matter what, she couldn't warm them up. She asked where she wanted to go eat, and after asking, she muttered under her breath, "I'll have to buy you a hot water bottle to keep on hand from now on."

Xu Qingzhu named a Japanese restaurant that was nearby, just around the corner.

Liang Shi drove while Xu Qingzhu sat in the passenger seat, pretending to ask casually, "Are you feeling better now?"

"Much better." Liang Shi said, "I'll show you her diary when we get back tonight. Focus on work for now."

Xu Qingzhu acknowledged with a sound, then glanced sideways. Liang Shi was driving attentively.

"Did you take Wanwan back to school?" Xu Qingzhu asked again.

Liang Shi nodded. "Yes, right after I dropped off Wanwan, Qi Jiao called me."

Saying this, she suddenly remembered, "I might be back a bit late tonight."

"What for?" Xu Qingzhu asked.

"Big Brother asked me to bring Ling Dang back to the old residence." Liang Shi was a little excited talking about this. Even though the battle hadn't started yet, it was as if she could already see the dawn of victory. "To get justice for Ling Dang."

"Alright." Xu Qingzhu said, then added an assessment, "Big Brother is really dependable."

He could take care of everyone in the family. Everyone else thought children's matters were trivial and wouldn't pay much attention to them.

It was just being wrongly accused and suffering a bit of grievance—not a big deal.

But once Liang Xinzhou found out, he wouldn't let this matter go easily. When you think about it, she was just a niece. Whether he stepped up or not was up to him, but he would firmly stand in front of the younger generation.

Having such an elder was very reassuring.

"Oh, right." Xu Qingzhu said, "Uncle and I are going to join forces."

Liang Shi asked in surprise, "Join forces?"

"We're going to turn Haiwei Jewelry from rivals into friends. Uncle has been mentoring me recently." Xu Qingzhu said.

After reuniting with Su Yao, Xu Qingzhu hadn't been hiding things as much. She had heard so much about the history between Su Yao and Sheng Qinglin that she held a certain reverence for Su Yao.

And the reason Haiwei Jewelry had been able to develop so strongly over these years was largely thanks to Su Yao.

Su Yao, the genius designer once hailed as a "rising star" in the design world, had won awards in world-class competitions in her twenties, becoming a source of pride for Chinese people.

Although she had faded into obscurity under a hidden identity, over these years she had continuously produced designs.

She was Haiwei Jewelry's mysterious designer.

Minghui was too fragile right now, completely propped up by its former reputation. Never mind Haiwei—even a company with just a bit of a name, as long as they concentrated their firepower on Minghui, Minghui would have gone bankrupt and been liquidated long ago.

Even though things had improved somewhat after Xu Qingzhu joined the company, it wasn't something that could be changed overnight.
