

Chapter 117-5

.....

Late at night like this, Liang Shi was truly powerless.

The slightly more reliable answers were: Say nice things to her, like: "Baby, don't be angry, it's all my fault."

Or: "Come here, let me hold you, okay?"

Or again: "Tell me what I did wrong, okay? I promise there won't be a next time."

And yet again: "Hold her and kiss her passionately, kiss her until her legs go weak and she'll forget about being angry."

.....

Liang Shi nervously clicked in, then shakily clicked out.

None of them seemed very reliable.

She irritably put her phone back on the nightstand and stared at that closed door in a daze.

Xu Qingzhu wouldn't really be outside crying, would she?

Liang Shi perked up her ears to listen—it seemed like there was the sound of water.

Then she was truly sinful. Why did she have to be fierce with her for no reason?

Liang Shi recalled her smile from earlier. Honestly, it was a rarely seen kind of beautiful.

The dim yellow light shone on her, the light orange silk pajamas made her skin appear even whiter, that flawless face was like a gift from the Creator, with nothing that didn't make one's heart flutter.

Her soft hair spread out on the light-colored sheets like seaweed, naturally enchanting.

Around her neck she wore a silver necklace, with a galaxy pendant in the middle—pure and romantic.

Purity and seductiveness combined perfectly in her.

One bit more would be excessive, one bit less would be insufficient.

Even now, recalling it made her want to trace her fingers lightly across that collarbone.

Liang Shi somewhat regretfully patted her forehead, her heart growing even more conflicted.

A few seconds later, she finally couldn't hold back, threw off the blanket she'd covered herself with when angry, and resignedly got out of bed.

It's just an apology.

It's just being laughed at by Xu Qingzhu.

Either way was better than making Xu Qingzhu cry.

If she cried, she would also be punished by the misfortune value system.

Mm, she was only going to avoid punishment.

Moreover, she had been wrong earlier too, so she should go coax her.

Xu Qingzhu had coaxed her so many times, coaxing her once wouldn't hurt.

After giving herself enough psychological preparation, Liang Shi didn't even put on shoes and walked out barefoot.

The floor in late autumn was very cold, and the autumn wind mercilessly beat against the window frames, making even the room seem devoid of warmth.

Not like when the two of them had been together.

Liang Shi had just taken two steps when the door handle turned. The instant the door was pushed open, Liang Shi flew back to the bed and covered herself with the blanket again, simultaneously closing her eyes.

Clearly she had already built up her psychological preparation, yet still couldn't face it proactively.

Only Xu Qingzhu's bedside lamp remained on in the room, with not much light.

As Liang Shi lay there, her heartbeat drummed like thunder.

She heard Xu Qingzhu's footsteps sound in the room, and heard those footsteps coming toward her.

That cool voice seemed to have just drunk ice, carrying several notes of coldness: "Asleep?"

Liang Shi pressed her lips together, not knowing how to respond, her hand covered by the blanket scratching at the sheets a few times.

Xu Qingzhu gradually drew closer, carrying a slight chill on her body.

Liang Shi's eyes weren't completely closed. In the hazy lamplight, she saw an orange figure and smelled the fresh scent of oranges mixed with the fragrance of strawberry Baileys.

It smelled slightly intoxicating.

Liang Shi gently held her breath, her eyelashes trembling slightly, not knowing how to maintain her usual composure.

A few seconds later, Xu Qingzhu suddenly exhaled. Unlike the heat from before, it carried several notes of coldness.

"Still pretending?" Xu Qingzhu's cool voice sounded by her ear, and then Liang Shi felt her ear being enveloped by alternating hot and cold wetness.

It was just a brief touch, yet it still brought her tremendous impact.

Xu Qingzhu called to her: "Liang Shi, you dropped an eyelash."

Liang Shi: "....."
