

Chapter 127-6

//

After Liang Shi woke up and saw Xiao Bai, she still hadn't processed everything.

It was only after a few days that she asked Xiao Bai why she hadn't gone to work.

Xiao Bai said she had been waiting for her to come back.

This news surprised Liang Shi, because Xiao Bai had just graduated the year before last and came to work for her right after graduation. Her previous assistants had either left for better opportunities or wanted to switch to a different industry.

So she had hired the freshly graduated, energetic Xiao Bai.

At the time, Xiao Bai had been rejected by dozens of companies. Because her education wasn't impressive, her appearance wasn't outstanding, and her grades in school were mediocre—in this city where you could casually pick up any resume dropped on the ground and it would belong to a graduate from a 985 university¹, Xiao Bai had no advantages whatsoever.

Her becoming Liang Shi's assistant was also an extremely coincidental matter. At the time, Liang Shi had just finished shooting a magazine insert. On her way back, she saw Xiao Bai squatting by the roadside crying her eyes out.

Liang Shi handed her a tissue.

Xiao Bai said: "I recognize you—you're a beautiful jiejie."

Liang Shi's assistant at the time had just submitted her resignation. After learning about Xiao Bai's situation, she let Xiao Bai come try out.

This decision was firmly opposed by Wang Zhaozhao. An artist's assistant would have close contact with the artist's life—if she was a spy sent by a rival, they'd be done for.

But Liang Shi asked back: "Is there anything about me worth digging up?"

That question stumped Wang Zhaozhao completely. Wang Zhaozhao then argued from another angle: "She doesn't know anything—she's a blank slate. How much effort would we have to spend to train her? It's too exhausting."

"Who doesn't go from not knowing to knowing?" Liang Shi said gently. "We'll just teach her slowly."

Though she was clearly only a few years older than Xiao Bai, her manner of speaking was that of an elder.

A very kind elder.

And so Xiao Bai was kept on.

At first, she was indeed quite clumsy, with a careless personality and a loud way of speaking—not a very likeable personality in the workplace.

Wang Zhaozhao wanted to replace her several times.

But Liang Shi just smiled and said to her: "Don't you think she's very energetic? Even after going out to shoot all day and coming home at two in the morning, she's still full of energy. How much joy has she added to our lives?"

Wang Zhaozhao was helpless against her.

Yet unexpectedly, the Xiao Bai she had least confidence in back then had now become the person who stayed by her side all along.

What shocked Liang Shi was that she could no longer pay Xiao Bai's salary here, so what was Xiao Bai's source of income?

Her company had terminated her contract after helping her clean up that mess.

Xiao Bai had previously been paying her own salary out of pocket, but now Xiao Bai hadn't gone out to work for months, spending all her time here with her—how was she supposed to live?

She still had a long road ahead of her.

Yet Xiao Bai smiled and told her: "I do part-time work! During the day when there's a caregiver here for you, I go work as a cashier at a convenience store. At night, I switch shifts with the caregiver."

Liang Shi was shocked beyond words at the time.

She had thought she would be abandoned by this world, that no one would remember she existed.

She was like a gust of wind on the internet—once it blew past, it scattered.

But Xiao Bai, in order to take care of her, had been doing a job that barely counted as work.

She had asked—that part-time job paid two thousand yuan a month. In this city where every inch of land was precious, that could only rent a single room.

Xiao Bai said: "I saved a lot of the salary you paid me before. I'm someone with savings now."

Moreover, Xiao Bai was now living at Wang-jie's place.

Even so, it was enough to move Liang Shi deeply.

Wang-jie had not taken on any new artists after her. Her contract with the company happened to expire, so she left the company directly. Now she didn't have much to do either.

When Liang Shi asked her about it, she said she had earned enough money and was retiring early.

The two of them always maintained an attitude of nonchalance, but Liang Shi could hear the warmth between the lines.

After she woke up, her body was clean, she was staying in a quality private room, and even her hair was soft and smooth.

So during the time she was unconscious, the people who had put aside everything to take care of her were these two.

Liang Shi really wanted to give them a hug and tell them: Don't worry anymore.

On the day of her discharge, the three of them went to eat hotpot.

When ordering, Liang Shi briefly thought of Xu Qingzhu, and so she ordered a devil's spicy soup base.

This action startled both Xiao Bai and Wang-jie.

Wang-jie was always strict and scolded her: "You don't want your stomach or your face anymore?"

Liang Shi shrugged: "It's not like I need to film anyway."

She wasn't someone who could handle spicy food well, and this body's constitution was such that eating spicy food would definitely cause breakouts.

To withstand the camera lighting, she usually ate bland and plain food.

Wang-jie gave a light huff and tacitly accepted her behavior.

The old her couldn't handle even a bit of spice, but now—perhaps because she had eaten devil's spicy food with Xu Qingzhu several times—she could now handle this restaurant's devil's spicy level.

When she ate it, she didn't even furrow her brows.

Xiao Bai and Wang-jie watched with their jaws dropped.

When they went back that night, Wang-jie bought her stomach medicine.

Liang Shi sat in the back seat and chuckled softly. "It's really not that exaggerated."

"Just in case," Wang-jie said seriously.
