

Chapter 128-6

//

"I didn't cry." Xu Qingzhu brushed away Sally's hand. "Can you stop being annoying?"

Sally scoffed lightly. "Then what's with your eye bags? Please, Liang Shi is in a coma, not dead... ah..."

Lin Luoxi stepped on Sally's foot. Facing Sally's puzzled gaze, Lin Luoxi revealed a death smile. "If you don't know how to speak, you can shut up."

Sally: "..."

Xu Qingzhu, who was nearby, chimed in: "I agree."

It had been half a month since Liang Shi fell into a coma. The weather in Haizhou City was getting colder and colder. People on the streets had already put on down jackets.

Although snow hadn't fallen yet, the temperature had plummeted.

Xu Qingzhu, Lin Luoxi, and Sally took advantage of their lunch break to sneak out and eat hot pot lamb.¹

The warm restaurant was filled with rising steam everywhere. Sally's words were unpleasant to hear, and she was called out by the other two. She then tried her best to express her accurate thoughts in Chinese: "What I mean is, Liang Shi will be fine."

Lin Luoxi rolled her eyes. "I really don't know how you've survived these years in China. Your Chinese is this bad."

Sally: "Hm?"

She didn't understand again.

Lin Luoxi was speechless. Xu Qingzhu chuckled softly. "Isn't it because you spoiled her? Ever since you two started dating, you've always been speaking English to accommodate her."

Lin Luoxi: "..."

After a moment, Lin Luoxi had no choice but to admit: "You're right."

She gritted her teeth resentfully. "I don't even know what I saw in her back then. I must have been blind."

Sally understood this. She immediately retorted: "Baby, I'm pretty."

Lin Luoxi: "...Get lost. Stop disgusting me."

The two began another round of bickering.

Xu Qingzhu sat across from them holding her cup with both hands, treating it like watching a crosstalk performance.²

There was a smile on her face, but it seemed fake.

These days she had returned to normal, going to work as usual every day. After work, she would go to the hospital to see Liang Shi. Even though both Xu Guangyao and Su Zhe had advised her that she could return to the company later, she still completed her discharge procedures after staying in the hospital for three days and went to the company almost without stopping.

Chen Liuying's actions could be classified as intentional injury and attempted murder, with aggravated kidnapping circumstances. On the day she was arrested, public officials were also injured, which was all counted against her.

Su Zhe intended to push for a life sentence. Getting a death penalty here was somewhat difficult. Unless it was someone like Yang Jiani, that perverted serial killer, the maximum sentence would be life imprisonment.

Su Zhe wasn't without connections either. Once Chen Liuying was locked up, making her suffer a bit would be the most normal thing.

As for Yang Jiani's case, it was also going through the process. Gu Xingyue had been staying in the hospital ever since she was admitted. After learning that Liang Shi had fallen into a coma, she couldn't sleep all night and finally couldn't help but go to see her.

She saw Xu Qingzhu outside the hospital room.

That was also the first time Xu Qingzhu met Gu Xingyue. The two didn't speak, only nodded simply.

Then they passed each other by.

Both Liang Xinzhou and Liang Xinhe learned about Liang Shi's coma and came to visit several times during this period. Liang Xinzhou even brought in foreign specialists for Liang Shi, but after thorough examinations, there were no findings.

A coma of unknown cause was the most terrifying.

For the moment, they were at a loss. Her heart rate was normal; it was just that her cerebral cortex wasn't active. All they could do was wait.

Zhou Li brought Rainbow to visit too. Rainbow and Ling Dang sat side by side in front of Liang Shi's hospital bed.

Ling Dang asked Rainbow: "When do you think my aunt will wake up?"

Rainbow shook her head. "I don't know."

The two children sat there. Ling Dang said: "I want to become a doctor in the future, so I can save my aunt."

Rainbow said nothing.

A few seconds later, Ling Dang changed her mind: "Forget it, you should become a doctor instead. You're smarter."

Rainbow: "?"

"Is that not okay?" Ling Dang said. "Will you become a doctor?"

Rainbow was silent for a long time, then said firmly: "Yes."

"Then you have to become a really, really amazing doctor, so you can wake up my aunt." Ling Dang said.

Rainbow nodded.

Liang Shi's hospital room also had a constant stream of visitors, but everyone tacitly understood that the time after Xu Qingzhu got off work belonged exclusively to Xu Qingzhu.

Xu Qingzhu would often sit in a daze by her hospital bed, her thoughts scattered.

At night, she would occasionally sleep in the hospital room, but most of the time she would go home.

After all, home and the hospital weren't far apart.

Xu Qingzhu's life consisted of three points in a line: home, company, hospital.

She actually didn't really want to go back to that home. It was cold and empty when she returned.

As for how her eyes got swollen, she didn't know either.

She definitely didn't cry before going to sleep.

She seemed to often cry in her dreams. Every morning when she woke up, her eyes looked like they had been washed with water.

She had gotten used to this kind of life.

"Used to"—what a terrifying phrase.

She would occasionally tell Liang Shi stories by her ear, hoping she would wake up after hearing them.

But she never did.

Even Zhou Yi'an came to see Liang Shi once. She even asked Xu Qingzhu: "Will she come back?"

Xu Qingzhu was startled, not understanding why Zhou Yi'an would ask such a question.

But Xu Qingzhu just shook her head sincerely: "I don't know either."

Who would know about such uncertain things?

Meanwhile, on the other side of the city, Sun Chengcheng completed her task and unlocked the second capture target character card.

She chose without hesitation—the investor with a discerning eye.

Soon, the character card's information appeared before her.

1. Hot pot lamb (涮羊肉, shuàn yáng ròu): A Chinese hot pot dish where thin slices of lamb are quickly cooked by dipping them in boiling broth. It's a popular winter dish, especially in northern China. ↵
 2. Crosstalk (相声, xiàngshēng): A traditional Chinese comedic performance art, typically performed by a duo who engage in witty banter, wordplay, and comedic dialogue. Xu Qingzhu is comparing Lin Luoxi and Sally's bickering to watching a comedy routine. ↵
