

Chapter 139-5

//

Liang Shi and Xu Qingzhu's life had completely gotten on track.

She didn't know when Lu Jiayi from the original book would appear. Even though she already knew the original story, many things had already been disrupted now, so it had no reference value.

Liang Shi convinced herself to cherish the present.

Even if Lu Jiayi appeared later, she could still put up a fight.

So what if she was a perfect paper character?

As long as Xu Qingzhu didn't like her, no amount of perfection would be useful.

Liang Shi had contacted Gu Yixue. "Heart's Journey" would begin preparations for filming in a week.

As for "Erta Light," due to the issue with the female lead, setting a new date was indefinitely postponed. After all, Zhao Ying had already joined the next production crew and was also doing promotions for two dramas.

While waiting for "Heart's Journey" to start filming, Liang Shi went to see Yang Jiani.

There wasn't much to say. She only asked about what happened with Qiu Zimin back then, which counted as collecting some testimony for the original owner.

Even though this had happened to herself.

After meeting with Yang Jiani, she contacted Chen Mian.

Chen Mian had stayed in Haizhou City to prepare for an art exhibition, but these were all matters for the organizers—she wasn't very involved.

She had simply stayed in Haizhou City. It was hard to say whether she was waiting for Yang Jiani's verdict or trying to find traces of Qi Jiao's existence in this city.

This time they didn't meet at a café. Chen Mian directly sent her a location near a middle school.

Liang Shi drove there following the navigation and found it was the middle school the original owner had attended—also Qi Jiao's alma mater.

Chen Mian's home was on the fifth floor, with no elevator.

It was a rather old building, which surprised Liang Shi quite a bit.

Liang Shi had bought fruit when she went. When Chen Mian came to open the door and saw the fruit in her hands, she frowned.

Liang Shi asked what was wrong.

Chen Mian said very bluntly: "I don't like apples."

Liang Shi: "....."

The furnishings in Chen Mian's home were somewhat simple. Sky-blue walls, just a sofa on the floor, no coffee table. The kitchen was semi-open, and there was a studio, a bedroom, and a bathroom.

For one person living alone, it was still fairly spacious.

Before Liang Shi came in, Chen Mian had probably been painting.

She was holding a paintbrush in her hand, and there was paint on her black T-shirt.

But after Liang Shi entered, Chen Mian set the paintbrush aside.

The only thing the two of them could talk about was Qi Jiao, though Chen Mian asked about her previous coma.

The words "Qi Jiao" were right on the tip of her tongue, but Liang Shi didn't know how to bring it up.

She couldn't decide in that moment which would be crueler for Chen Mian—that Qi Jiao had passed away, or that Qi Jiao was living well in another world but the two of them would never see each other again.

So Liang Shi didn't mention it.

Without mentioning Qi Jiao's current situation, Liang Shi felt her trip here was completely meaningless.

She and Chen Mian weren't exactly close friends or confidants who could share heartfelt words.

When neither of them spoke, it felt very awkward.

Though it was probably only Liang Shi who felt awkward.

Chen Mian showed no reaction.

After a while, Chen Mian went to the studio and came back with two artistically designed tickets, handing them to her. "This Wednesday at the city art museum."

Liang Shi was startled: "Huh?"

They were tickets to Chen Mian's art exhibition.

Chen Mian said: "I remember you have a younger sister who also studies painting. She should be interested."

Liang Shi glanced at the tickets: "Than—"

The words "thank you" suddenly got stuck in her throat, because she saw written on the ticket

"Joint Exhibition of Thirteen 'Eccentric Geniuses' Including Chen Mian, Qin Lishuang, Guan Zhi, and Others."
