

Chapter 177-7

After the script passed review, Gu Yixue quickly assembled her team, preparing to enter a new round of casting and filming.

Apart from the role Gu Yixue planned to save for Liang Shi, the rest would be cast through open auditions.

But unexpectedly, as soon as the news of "Sharp Edge" being adapted for screen came out, the book fans exploded, pushing several hashtags onto the trending searches.

[Frankly speaking, are there no screenwriters left in the entertainment industry?]

[I don't want to see "Sharp Edge" made into a drama. No one can play the Qiao Wenyu in my heart, and no one can play my Jiao-jie either.]

[No matter who it is, they can't film it well. Don't ruin the book.]

[I'm just curious about one thing—even if this drama gets filmed, can it pass censorship?]

Indeed, "Sharp Edge" touched on many social issues.

Such as child trafficking, such as domestic violence, such as the absence of law at the family level.

But it was precisely because of this that Gu Yixue was even more interested.

It was also the reason everyone loved this novel.

Dark enough, and thrilling enough.

The suspense was maxed out, and so were the emotions.

As long as it was filmed well, it would definitely be a hit.

Gu Yixue didn't care what the book fans said—she never read online comments anyway.

It wasn't until someone said Gu Yixue was directing and the original author Wenchuan was serving as screenwriter that the book fans' uproar finally calmed down a bit.

When casting was halfway done, Gu Yixue suddenly sent Liang Shi a message one day: 【How unlucky.】

At that moment, Liang Shi had just finished packing up her camera and was about to go out to film a Vlog about sanitation workers.

Liang Shi replied with confusion: 【?】

Gu Yixue: 【The platform wants to insert someone.】

Liang Shi understood instantly: 【Sharp Edge?】

Gu Yixue: 【Guess who they want to insert?】

Liang Shi: 【No idea.】

Gu Yixue: 【Guo Xinran.】

Liang Shi: 【...】

That really was unpleasant news.

Gu Yixue complained: 【The last movie already made me very unhappy. Are they crazy?】

Liang Shi: 【So what did you say?】

Gu Yixue: 【Refused.】

Liang Shi replied that she had backbone, then went out to film her Vlog.

After she finished filming and picked up Xu Qingzhu from work, she found that Gu Yixue had sent her a message: 【This role was saved for you.】

Liang Shi: 【?】

Liang Shi: 【It's fine if I don't act in it.】

Liang Shi: 【You deal with that side first.】

Most importantly, Liang Shi didn't want to fight.

Going up against Guo Xinran would inevitably mean going up against the Liang family and Qiu Zimin.

It really put her in a bad mood.

But Gu Yixue replied: 【The original author thinks so too. The role of Qiao Wenyu can only be played by you.】

Liang Shi: 【...Alright.】

At the same time, Gu Yixue sent her the script for "Sharp Edge."

A twelve-episode script in total. The volume wasn't large, but the content was very substantial. The structure of each episode was arranged very tightly, and not a single character had a wasted line.

While Liang Shi was reading the script, Gu Yixue had already gone to fight with the platform people.

She sat in a chair in her room, playing with a silver lighter in her hand. Her phone was on speaker, placed on her lap. She casually reached for the pack of cigarettes on the table, her slender fingers pulling out a cigarette and placing it between her lips.

Her red lips held the cigarette, her long hair cascading loosely over her shoulders—anyone who saw her would think she was full of allure.

She was still wearing a tight cropped top, her waistline exposed, looking very beautiful.

She brought the silver lighter close to the cigarette, lit it carelessly, then exhaled a puff of smoke, her voice cold: "The lead has been decided. Go insert your people into other productions."

"Director Quella, this person is really very suitable. Do you remember the video about that girl searching for her parents? Even official media reported on it." The platform's person in charge said. "She's a copy of Qiao Wenyu. Choosing her definitely won't be wrong. She also has the highest public support online right now."

"So what?" Gu Yixue scoffed. "When I agreed to collaborate with you, I already said everything would be decided by me. Whether it's the platform or the investors, don't interfere with my choices, understand?"

"Director Quella." The other party, a grown man, actually started wheedling disgustingly. "Haven't we stayed out of everything else? This is your film—you direct it, we won't say a word. But Guo Xinran is definitely suitable. Trust me."

"Bullshit." Gu Yixue sneered. "Are you directing or am I? I told you I've already chosen someone. Do you not understand?!"

The other party was silent for two seconds. "The money this time is from Dongheng—a hundred million. It doesn't make sense not to use Guo Xinran as the female lead. Director Quella, we're all in this industry, so you should understand—sometimes sentiment isn't that important, don't you think?"

"I said no, and I mean no." Gu Yixue's attitude was firm. "Nobody is inserting anyone into my crew."

The other party was momentarily speechless, not knowing how to persuade Gu Yixue.

After a moment, the other party's tone became slightly harder: "Their attitude now is that you have to use this female lead whether you want to or not. If you don't, then don't start filming."

"Tell them to withdraw their investment." Gu Yixue said. "They can take their money and their person and get lost. I can still start filming on that day, and I can still finish it."

The other party: "..."

"A hundred million." The other party frowned. "Quella, where are you going to get that much money?"

Gu Yixue: "None of your business. I filmed so many productions before they ever invested. Where do they get off?"

The other party was rendered speechless and hung up the phone in a huff.
