

Chapter 192 - Part 2

Extra 14-2

Shen Fenghe returned home three days later.

She had gone abroad on a business trip to negotiate a very important project.

The process was difficult, but the result was still satisfactory.

At least the negotiation was successful.

Because the project head's daughter was good friends with Gu Chunmian, Shen Fenghe borrowed Gu Chunmian's influence.

But fundamentally, it was Gu Chunmian who came to provoke her first.

The reason was that Gu Chunmian sent her a text message asking to borrow fifty million.

Shen Fenghe's first reaction was whether she'd sent it to the wrong person.

Then Gu Chunmian called her, saying she could exchange a secret about Gu Yixue for these fifty million.

At that time, Gu Yixue was still sleeping. Shen Fenghe tiptoed out of bed to answer the phone, her first words sharp: "Did the Gu family go bankrupt?"

Gu Chunmian: "..."

"Gu Chunmian." Gu Chunmian said: "I'm making a deal with you."

Shen Fenghe was silent for a few seconds.

Gu Chunmian couldn't hold back, saying in a low voice: "Fifty million, I owe you a favor."

"Your favor is worth fifty million?"

"And Gu Yixue's secret."

At that moment, Shen Fenghe looked through the white gauze curtain at Gu Yixue sleeping soundly, her gaze softening somewhat.

Shen Fenghe said coldly: "There are no secrets between me and my wife."

Gu Chunmian: "..."

Having hit a wall, Gu Chunmian was unwilling to give up and continued: "Don't you want to know what Gu Yixue went through after marrying you?"

"She ruined the wedding back then." Gu Chunmian laughed softly, carrying some contempt, "Do you think the Gu family just let her off?"

Shen Fenghe immediately corrected her: "You ruined the wedding."

Gu Chunmian: "...That's not important."

After a pause of a few seconds, Gu Chunmian said again: "Right now I need fifty million. My parents won't give it to me. Shen Fenghe, consider it a loan."

"A loan is a loan." Shen Fenghe said coldly: "What do you mean by 'consider it'? Miss Gu, you're being very ambiguous with your words now."

Gu Chunmian: "..."

It was also later that Shen Fenghe found out Gu Chunmian wanted to break up with that woman.

The fifty million she borrowed was the breakup fee for that woman.

Shen Fenghe scoffed lightly: "She's really thoroughly enjoying being a kept woman."

Gu Chunmian said nothing.

Shen Fenghe had someone transfer the money to Gu Chunmian, but made her write an IOU.

To Shen Fenghe, Gu Chunmian wasn't anyone important.

From a young age, she'd mingled in business circles and dealt with many people, so naturally she wouldn't care about such matters.

Moreover, Gu Chunmian might be the next president of the Gu family.

Perhaps because Mr. Gu had done too many immoral things, aside from Gu Chunmian and Gu Yixue, all the younger generation of the Gu family had either died or been injured—none could shoulder responsibilities.

Compared to Gu Yixue, the Gu family would naturally support Gu Chunmian more.

It was because Gu Chunmian didn't marry into the Shen family that the Gu family became a laughingstock in elite circles, and Mr. Gu could still manage, so he wanted to punish Gu Chunmian.

These past few years, Gu Chunmian had been working at the bottom level of the Gu family company, earning the lowest wages and doing the most work. Her princess syndrome had been worn down quite a bit.

Shen Fenghe had also thought about fighting for the Gu family and giving it to Gu Yixue.

But clearly, Gu Yixue preferred being a director and screenwriter.

And Shen Fenghe quite liked when Gu Yixue filmed. Every time Gu Yixue's work premiered, Shen Fenghe would book out theaters to watch.

Sometimes the latest showing, sometimes the earliest.

Shen Fenghe didn't ask Gu Chunmian what Gu Yixue had paid to marry her.

She felt it would be a very heavy topic.

If Gu Yixue didn't tell her, it proved Gu Yixue didn't want her to know.

She had to give Gu Yixue some personal space.

However, that night Shen Fenghe stood on the balcony for a long time. When she returned to bed, her body was already cool. As soon as she got in bed, Gu Yixue fell into her arms, bringing warmth.

Gu Yixue liked wearing short tops—even her pajamas were short.

There was nothing covering her waist. Shen Fenghe liked to casually rest her hand on her waist.

After Shen Fenghe returned home, she first took a shower, ate the breakfast the auntie made, then went back to her room planning to adjust to the time difference.

Having been gone for nearly a week, she and Gu Yixue hadn't been in much contact.

However, before returning, she'd sent Gu Yixue a message saying she was coming back.

Gu Yixue sent an OK hand gesture and said nothing more.

Shen Fenghe thought she was busy filming, so didn't take it to heart.

Just stared at the screen briefly, feeling a little bit disappointed.

As soon as she got in bed, she saw documents at the bedside. The words "Divorce Agreement" were quite conspicuous.

At first, Shen Fenghe thought it was Gu Yixue's script. But after reading two lines, she suddenly sat up. The drowsiness she'd been building up to adjust to the time difference instantly vanished.

Shen Fenghe read through the script expressionlessly.

Then she picked up her phone to call Gu Yixue, but when she called, she could only hear the cold mechanical voice: The number you have dialed is powered off.

Shen Fenghe got up and changed clothes, having her assistant check Gu Yixue's location.

After a while, the assistant found out Gu Yixue was discussing a collaboration with an investor and had gone to the capital. She'd be back on tonight's flight.

Shen Fenghe sent her a message: [Let's talk.]

Gu Yixue didn't reply.

The message seemed to sink like a stone into the ocean.

Completely different from before.

In the past, Gu Yixue could always reply to Shen Fenghe's messages instantly.

And one reply would be many messages.

If Shen Fenghe's phone vibrated seven or eight times in a row, it was definitely Gu Yixue sending her messages.

It had become a pattern.

But now, Gu Yixue no longer replied to her messages.

Thinking more carefully, it seemed like it had been a long time since she'd received those long strings of messages from Gu Yixue.