

Chapter 20-2

//

The room still looked the same as before.

That day was Xu Qingzhu's heat period, and she had tossed and turned on the bed for a while, so the white sheets were wrinkled.

The entire room had a very luxurious style, even the chandelier was gilded.

The luxurious carpet was soft underfoot, in light colors. The room's decoration style was actually quite nice.

This was the only time Liang Shi approved of the original owner's taste.

After closing the door, Xu Qingzhu went to collect the bedsheets. Her movements were fairly swift, but when it came to putting on new sheets, she seemed less skilled.

Liang Shi immediately stepped forward to help.

She was someone who wasn't used to letting others interfere in her life, and had lived alone for many years.

Now suddenly having to share a room with someone else felt quite awkward.

Even though the other person was a stunningly beautiful woman.

Perhaps that's why her resistance wasn't so strong, though she felt a heavy psychological burden.

How would they sleep at night?

Most likely she'd have to sleep on the floor, right?

Liang Shi glanced at the carpet - it was barely clean enough.

But this kind of thing that people stepped on, no matter how visually clean it looked, would still have many bacteria.

Her cleanliness obsession wouldn't let her accept it.

It would be better to remove the carpet and lay out bedding.

While thinking this, she helped Xu Qingzhu finish making the bed. After finishing, Xu Qingzhu was somewhat tired and sat on one side of the bed, breathing slightly heavily.

She wore a high-necked, form-fitting black sweater. Her fair face had a faint camel-pink tint, her eyes were bright, and when she lowered her lashes, the thick eyelashes cast heavy shadows under her eyes. Her hair was casually tied into a bun with many loose strands at her forehead, but it didn't look messy at all.

Whether it was because she had too many worries or due to her personal constitution, she was very thin.

Even wearing a tight sweater while sitting, her lower abdomen showed no excess flesh.

She stepped barefoot on the soft carpet, her white toes seeming to form a natural painting with the carpet.

"Sorry," Xu Qingzhu said after recovering some strength. "I broke my word. I couldn't persuade my sister to go back. I'll be troubling you these next few days."

"Ah?" Liang Shi had been inadvertently lost in thought watching her, and when she came back to her senses, she only caught the word "troubling."

Liang Shi lowered her head, somewhat embarrassed. "What did you say?"

"Sorry." Xu Qingzhu patiently repeated herself, using her cool, clear voice that was like snow water from a glacier, yet it failed to cool Liang Shi's body temperature. "I'm troubling you. My family's situation isn't good right now, so I can only impose on you."

"Ah, it's fine," Liang Shi said. "These are all small matters, and besides... we're family. Your family is also my family."

Xu Qingzhu looked up at her.

She had just licked her lips, making them glisten as if sprinkled with glittery powder like jelly.

Liang Shi turned her face away, not daring to look anymore.

"Xu Qingzhu." Liang Shi felt she needed to reiterate. "What I said before in the hospital room was all true."

"Mm?" Xu Qingzhu asked softly, her voice carrying a cool, clear intimacy. "Which things?"

"Those words about not hurting you anymore - I meant them all sincerely," Liang Shi said. "No matter what wrong things I did to you before, they're all in the past. I know I can't have the nerve to ask you to forgive me, after all, harm is irreversible."

"But..." Liang Shi paused, saying sincerely: "I will change. This isn't just empty words."

Xu Qingzhu looked at her and suddenly smiled.

Her lips curved in just the right arc, her eyes half-closed, her fair face looking pink and tender, like cherry blossoms falling gracefully.

In that moment, Liang Shi even seemed to smell the scent of spring.

She felt like Xu Qingzhu had some kind of enchantment on her.

She immediately turned her face away.

But Xu Qingzhu said in a low voice: "I believe you."

Her ending tone still rose upward, like a small feather, specifically tickling people's soft spots.

"But... sorry still needs to be said," Xu Qingzhu stood up. "It's politeness."

"Alright," Liang Shi breathed a slight sigh of relief. "I just wanted to make it clear that from now on, this is your home. You can arrange things as you wish without needing to ask my opinion. Of course... if..."

She coughed lightly. "If you're in a good mood, you could occasionally listen to my opinion too."

Xu Qingzhu was silent for a moment, then laughed softly.

"I'll try my best," Xu Qingzhu said. "The food should be about ready. Let's go downstairs to eat."

"Wait." Liang Shi stopped her.

"What's wrong?"

Liang Shi stared at the carpet and asked: "Do we have new carpet? Or could we remove the carpet?"

She really couldn't stand sleeping on a carpet full of bacteria.

"We do have some," Xu Qingzhu said. "Let's change it after we eat."

"Okay." Liang Shi readily agreed.

She reached out to open the door. Xu Qingzhu was right behind her, and moved slightly forward, once again getting extremely close to her.

Afraid of being overheard, Xu Qingzhu lowered her voice and said: "You sleep on the bed tonight."

Liang Shi: ".....?"
