

Chapter 24-4

//

The white Porsche drove out of Huayue International and merged into traffic.

The car became quiet, so quiet that only their breathing could be heard.

Even Xu Qingya and the designated driver's breathing became shallow.

Only Xu Qingzhu's somewhat rapid breathing remained.

Liang Shi sat there as Xu Qingzhu actively leaned toward her. Her body was too hot, desperately seeking something that could cool her down.

The person beside her was the most suitable.

Even her hands were the most suitable.

Her face also radiated coolness.

Xu Qingzhu's hand fell on Liang Shi's waist, moving from left to right. She couldn't find any pattern—she simply wanted to tear away this obstructive clothing.

Liang Shi couldn't help but press down on her hand, saying in a low voice, "Bamboo, hang in there a little longer, okay?"

She didn't know what type of aphrodisiac Xu Qingzhu had been given.

But in this world, every drug had an antidote.

However, Xu Qingzhu lifted her head, and tears suddenly fell from those slightly red eyes.

Like pearls with a broken string.

When she cried, it carried no emotion—she was simply crying.

She didn't even make sobbing sounds.

Even Liang Shi, who had acted in countless crying scenes and was often praised by marketing accounts as having the best crying scenes in the industry, was shocked.

If this was acting, sending her to win an Oscar wouldn't be excessive.

"Don't cry." Liang Shi hurriedly looked for tissues, finding a pack in her pocket. She pulled one out and handed it to her, but Xu Qingzhu wouldn't take it.

Liang Shi could only fold it and wipe her tears, gently coaxing, "Bamboo, don't cry anymore. We'll be home soon."

After saying this, she handed her phone to Xu Qingya. "Call the butler and have the family doctor come over."

Xu Qingya took the instruction and complied, turning back to glance at her sister.

Nothing much to say—just despair.

Heaven knows, in their family, they never let her sister touch alcohol.

Since childhood, the number of times her sister had gotten drunk could be counted on one hand. In those few instances, she would completely black out after getting drunk.

From the moment she got drunk, she had no idea what she was doing.

Xu Qingya was completely resigned at this point.

A married daughter is like spilled water¹—let her wife deal with this mess.

Liang Shi felt like she was about to be driven crazy.

Xu Qingzhu said nothing, just cried. Her tears simply wouldn't stop, and Liang Shi could only keep handing her tissues.

After a while, Xu Qingzhu suddenly let out a small burp.

Her tears stopped instantly.

As if there was a switch.

This left Liang Shi greatly impressed.

"Do you need to throw up?" Liang Shi asked.

Xu Qingzhu rested her head on her shoulder, leaning close to her ear, and suddenly bit down gently.

In that instant, Liang Shi got goosebumps all over.

Her whole body felt like it had been struck by electric current—numb.

"Do you think I don't know anything?" Xu Qingzhu licked the tip of her tongue, that moist sensation landing on Liang Shi's ear, making her ear twitch slightly.

But her heart tightened.

Know what?

"You slept with Miaomiao² on our wedding night, didn't you?" Xu Qingzhu's voice was very low, carrying a trace of desolation and resentment.

Like a basin of cold water poured over her head.

Liang Shi instantly sobered up.

So Xu Qingzhu was talking about the original body.

What kind of feelings did she have for the original body?

Love?

Or dependence?

Liang Shi wasn't clear.

The book didn't elaborate. It only mentioned that later, when Xu Qingzhu was with her true destined Alpha, she had described her feelings for the original body like this: "She was like a piece of driftwood I grabbed onto while floating alone at sea. Later when I reached shore, she became useless. I was once very grateful that she saved my life, but later I discovered she was broken and rotten, worse than a pile of junk. I could only discard her as quickly as possible—that was the most correct choice. I tried to carve her into an exquisite wood sculpture, but she wasn't worthy of my expensive carving knife. So when you ask if I ever loved her, I can only say—I don't know."

This was a rather literary way of putting it.

But it accurately described Xu Qingzhu's feelings for the original body.

Boiled down to three words—"don't know."

All of Xu Qingzhu's previous behavior seemed to weave a net, quickly pulling Liang Shi into an illusion.

It gave Liang Shi a brief misconception and misunderstanding about her own emotions.

But thinking carefully, they had only known each other for a few days.

How could she possibly fall for someone in just a few days?

Perhaps it was because the system had forcibly bound the two of them together, and she had pieced together her entire life through fragmentary details.

That's why she had the illusion of having known her for a long time and being very familiar with her.

In reality, they were just roommates who were slightly familiar with each other.

They couldn't even be called friends.

Having figured this out, Liang Shi's heart finally felt less blocked.

And Xu Qingzhu continued speaking.

"And a month ago, you lied to me about going on a business trip, but actually went to the Dia Hotel with Cheng Ran. You all played there for three days and nights." Xu Qingzhu enunciated clearly. "There were seven of you sleeping together, weren't there?"

"That day there were two Omegas and two Betas. How was it? Were they all prettier than me, with better figures than me?" Xu Qingzhu laughed softly, pulling Liang Shi's hand to place it on her own softness, with only a thin tank top between them.

The pure cotton material felt very nice to touch.

Slightly round, somewhat soft.

Liang Shi froze in place, not daring to move.

Xu Qingzhu said, "And three months ago, you went to Cheng Ran's birthday party. That night you slept with a celebrity, didn't you? She even sent me photos of you two—on the bed, wearing nothing."

She suddenly grabbed Liang Shi's collar. "Do you think I'm an idiot? That I don't know anything, so I deserve to be deceived, I deserve to be played by you?"

"Because our family took money from the Liang family, I deserve to be humiliated by you? I have to do whatever you tell me to do. I clean the 300-square-meter house³ by myself, make you breakfast, and even have to change the sheets after you've rolled around with other women. Every time you bring a bunch of people home, when you bring women into our room to sleep, I have to give up my place for you. Is it all because I won't let you touch me?"

Xu Qingzhu spoke through gritted teeth by the end, staring at her intently.

"I just won't let you touch me." Xu Qingzhu said quietly. "Liang Shi, I find you disgusting."

"If I hadn't thought I liked you back then, why would I have married you?" Xu Qingzhu was drunk, but her speech logic was perfectly intact. It even seemed like she was using her drunken state as an excuse to vent her dissatisfaction.

But if Xu Qingzhu weren't drunk, she would never say these things.

"Don't you know how dirty you are?" Xu Qingzhu patted her face. "Even now when I feel so uncomfortable, so uncomfortable, I know I've been drugged, but I still don't want you to touch me. I'll do it myself—I don't need you."

Liang Shi grabbed her hand and said softly, "Bamboo, you're drunk."

"Yes, I'm drunk." Xu Qingzhu sneered, her head leaning back on her shoulder, sounding lazy as she made a seductive sound.

Liang Shi now felt like she was maintaining her composure despite temptation⁴.

After hearing what Xu Qingzhu had just said, no one would have any reaction anymore.

Footnotes:

¹ A married daughter is like spilled water: Chinese idiom meaning that once a daughter marries, she belongs to her husband's family and can no longer be reclaimed by her birth family

² Miaomiao: A woman's name, likely one of the original body's lovers

³ 300-square-meter house: Approximately 3,230 square feet, indicating a very large home

⁴ Maintaining composure despite temptation: Reference to the Chinese idiom about Liu Xiahui, a legendary figure known for his moral integrity and ability to resist sexual temptation