

Chapter 33 Part 2

...

That period of memory was too painful. For Xu Qingzhu, extracting those memories thread by thread was an extremely agonizing experience.

But she still remembered those words.

Over the years, it was those words that supported her through one difficult day after another.

It was the person in her memory who kept encouraging her, telling her not to be afraid.

So Xu Qingzhu often told herself: don't be afraid, everything will get better, we will surely have lots of love, and then we'll love others without reservation.

When Liang Shi initially said she wanted to marry her, she was overjoyed.

She thought she was marrying that sister from back then, that gentle sister who would always encourage her to live on and tell her not to be afraid.

But she never expected that while the memories hadn't changed, the person in those memories had long since become different, and had even forgotten the things that happened between them.

For a long time, Xu Qingzhu couldn't speak. She didn't know how to interact with people. Seeing big yellow dogs would trigger her stress disorder, seeing black cloth would trigger her stress disorder, and even entering rooms without windows would trigger her stress disorder. At that time, her doctor had said that if she continued like this, they could hypnotize her to erase that segment of memory.

Because it was too painful, she could lose those memories.

After they met again, Xu Qingzhu had always thought she had lost her memory and, through the passage of time, had become vastly different from before.

But now she would smile with the same curve as when she was little, and would say—life will definitely get better, because we will surely have lots of love.

The current her retained the same habits as when she was young. Was this Liang Shi?

Which personality of hers was this?

The water glass accidentally slipped from her hand and fell onto the carpet. The glass didn't break, but the water soaked the carpet.

Liang Shi was already curled up on the bed.

Xu Qingzhu suddenly pounced on the bed and grabbed her, "Liang Shi, tell me, who exactly are you right now?"

Liang Shi drowsily opened her eyes, her voice carrying a dreamy quality yet still retaining some childlike innocence, "I'm Liang Shi, sister~"

She frowned, her trailing tone almost swallowed, speaking in a light, soft, and coquettish manner, "I want to sleep."

"Tell me who you are first?" Xu Qingzhu asked, "Are you a second personality? Or are you not you, but someone else?"

"It's me." Liang Shi sighed, her eyes couldn't open at all, "It's always been me. What's wrong with you? Sister~ let me sleep, okay?"

Xu Qingzhu: "..."

Liang Shi leaned back, directly pulling Xu Qingzhu down with her.

Xu Qingzhu was only a few centimeters away from her. Her hand even fell from the collar opening directly onto her collarbone, and with a light slide of her fingers, she could feel her delicate skin.

An Alpha's skin would be slightly rougher, but Liang Shi was an exception.

Liang Shi's skin was like cream—white and smooth. Although not as white as Xu Qingzhu's, it was still outstanding among Alphas.

The warm yellow light cast the shadows of both figures in an ambiguous and dreamy way, carrying a hint of allure.

Their breaths intertwined. Liang Shi lightly licked her lips. Because she had drunk too much alcohol, her body needed to replenish moisture. Moreover, she had sung many songs with Sally at KTV, drinking alcohol while singing. At this moment, she urgently needed water, and her lips were already somewhat dry and cracked.

Unable to obtain moisture, she could only gently extend her tongue tip to lick her slightly dry and cracked lips. Her eyelashes, which were longer and more curled than most Alphas', now cast a layer of shadow under her eyelids. Xu Qingzhu was propped above her body, positioned against the light, blocking all the dazzling lamplight for her.

But she still slept restlessly.

Not knowing what she was thinking about.

Xu Qingzhu didn't dare to breathe until she couldn't hold it anymore and deeply exhaled.

Their breaths intertwined in an instant. Liang Shi suddenly opened her eyes slightly, hazily seeing a face, then smiled and turned over, directly causing Xu Qingzhu to fall to her side.

The bed was very soft, and Xu Qingzhu's body even bounced a bit. With her eyes closed, Liang Shi casually placed her arm down, hugging Xu Qingzhu just like hugging a doll, her long arm embracing her.

The close physical contact made Xu Qingzhu's heart beat rapidly. She felt her face flush and her mouth dry, and the scene of Liang Shi licking her lips kept appearing in her mind.

Whether it was because of drinking too much alcohol, her tongue was very red.

It was a vivid red color similar to roses.

She nestled in Liang Shi's embrace, not daring to move.

For a moment, her mind was blank.

Only after she was truly asleep did Xu Qingzhu close her eyes and breathe in lightly while in her embrace.

There was only the rich but not unpleasant smell of alcohol, which even covered the faint tea fragrance that she usually emitted.

Many years had passed since that incident, and with Liang Shi's previous behaviors, Xu Qingzhu had long since recognized reality.

The sister she once looked up to was long gone.

What remained now was just the soulless dandy Liang Shi.

But she never expected that she would lose control again because of those words.

//

The next morning, Liang Shi was awakened by her alarm clock.

The soothing light music sounded like it was playing frantically right next to her ears, making her ears hurt. With her eyes closed, she habitually reached for the bedside table but didn't find it, instead sweeping down something cold.

A muffled thud sounded, startling her. Her head immediately moved to the edge of the bed to see what had fallen to the floor, and then—

"Poof—"

Another muffled sound.

This time it was her phone that fell.

No wonder she felt the ringtone was right next to her ear—it really was right next to her ear.

She picked up her phone from the floor and checked the time. It was already eight-thirty.

Oh no!

She was going to be late!

She practically "sat up in shock from her deathbed",¹ directly taking off her shirt to change, but then stood in the room dazed for two seconds and slapped her forehead.

She had forgotten—today was Saturday, no need to go to work.

She collapsed back onto the bed and picked up the water glass that had initially fallen to the floor.

She wasn't even wearing a shirt, just her undergarments.

Being young, even under the original's dissolute and decadent lifestyle, this body didn't have much excess fat.

Liang Shi felt her brain buzzing with pain. She lay back on the bed and began to recall how she had gotten home, but her mind only contained memory fragments that couldn't be completely pieced together into a coherent storyline.

Most of the memory fragments were from when she was in the room.

Xu Qingzhu was pressing down on her, so close they were almost touching.

Xu Qingzhu's hand was lying beside her, fingers gently caressing her lips, and she seemed to have... extended her tongue tip.

Her tongue tip lightly touched her fingertip, and after sensing the warmth, she wrapped around it like eating something, while Xu Qingzhu wiped her wet finger across her lips.

...

What happened after that?

She had forgotten everything after that.

While recalling those fragments, Liang Shi's lower abdomen tightened.

Just from recalling, she could be aroused to such a degree, so last night...

Did the two of them end up having some kind of relationship?

Footnotes: ¹ "垂死病中驚坐起" - This is a reference to a famous line from classical Chinese poetry, describing someone suddenly sitting up in shock despite being deathly ill. It's often used humorously to describe being startled awake.