

Chapter 39-6

//

About to audition, Liang Shi also quickly got into character and put all these matters behind her.

There were many people coming to audition. Nearly a hundred people were standing in the fourth-floor corridor, all dressed up beautifully. Looking around, Liang Shi seemed like an oddball.

She was still wearing the same professional suit she had worn to work in the morning, which didn't match the character she was auditioning for at all.

Some people had even made their own costumes at their own expense, looking as if they were already on a film set.

Liang Shi arrived late, and by the time she got there, there were no more spots. A staff member recorded her name and gave her a number tag: A376.

She thought she was ranked in the three hundreds, but after asking the staff, she learned it was the 76th person auditioning for the third female lead.

There were also people here auditioning for other roles.

After getting her number tag, Liang Shi sent a message to Zhao Ying: 【Sister Ying, I'm here!】

Zhao Ying: 【OK, good luck.】

There was no other exchange after that.

During the time waiting in the corridor, Liang Shi spent it all familiarizing herself with the script lines.

Although you could look at the script while reading lines during auditions, this obviously wasn't something an actor who wanted to get the role would do.

Liang Shi continued familiarizing herself with the lines.

After an unknown amount of time, she suddenly heard someone nearby say: "Hey, come watch together."

"Watch what?" another person asked.

"Today is Minghui Jewelry's new product launch. I heard that Minghui's eldest daughter will personally host it."

"Really? Didn't they say she married into a wealthy family? Why would she still come out to work publicly?"

"..."

They discussed in low voices excitedly, when a cool voice cut in: "If she doesn't come out, the Sheng family's little bit of industry will be gone."

The former jewelry empire was now also severely declining.

Liang Shi looked toward the person speaking—dressed in simple casual wear, sweatpants and a sports jacket, with a gray baseball cap and round large earrings. The outfit didn't match, but because of her face, it showed a strange kind of beauty.

The people who had just been discussing paused, turned to look over, and suddenly covered their mouths in shock, even tugging at their neighbor's arm.

Her companion was still playing on her phone and was startled by the tugging, saying without looking up: "What?"

"Holy sht sht sh*t." That person was shocked to the point of pupil earthquake¹, "It's it's it..."

"Who is it?" Her companion also looked up, then had the same pupil earthquake.

Liang Shi: "...?"

Was it that exaggerated?

"Shh." The woman took out a white mask from her pocket and put it on, "Just pretend you didn't see me. Continue what you were doing."

Everyone: "..."

Obviously very excited inside, but having to desperately suppress their emotions, frantically nodding.

Then that woman swaggered through the corridor, passing through the crowded crowd. Everyone was busy looking at scripts and playing on their phones, so no one paid attention to her anymore.

However, she entered the audition room.

Liang Shi didn't understand what was happening, but she stole some time to take out her phone and found the livestream of Minghui Jewelry's autumn new product launch online.

Footnotes: ¹ Pupil earthquake (瞳孔地震): Chinese internet slang meaning extreme shock or surprise, describing when someone's pupils dilate from shock, as if experiencing an "earthquake"
