

Chapter 60-3

//

At 9:40 PM.

Minghui Jewelry's official Weibo took advantage of this wave of traffic that almost crashed Weibo's servers to announce the spokesperson for their autumn series—Yang Shuyan.

A strong alliance.

And it was free publicity.

So at Liang Shi's suggestion, Xu Qingzhu started a livestream at the same time and connected with Yang Shuyan.

As the mastermind behind the scenes, Liang Shi didn't speak.

Xu Qingzhu never used beauty filters when livestreaming. Even though it was night, even though she'd been tired all day and the makeup she'd put on in the morning was almost gone, her looks still held up, not losing out at all when on screen with Yang Shuyan, a beauty with strong features.

Liang Shi suggested she livestream with Yang Shuyan based on two points: to build momentum for Minghui Jewelry's new products at this critical juncture; to clearly explain what happened during the day.

Online, you could choose not to establish a persona, but you couldn't be a soft target that anyone could knead.

Moreover, Xu Qingzhu's image was good. Once she started streaming, countless face-value fans¹ would flood in, which was nothing but beneficial for Minghui Jewelry.

Having Xu Qingzhu promote her own products would naturally have more advantages.

For Yang Shuyan, publicly taking sides at this critical juncture wasn't necessarily a good thing.

But Yang Shuyan wasn't afraid, and even proactively proposed cooperating with Minghui Jewelry—it was like a big pie falling from the sky, and she'd be letting the pie down if she didn't catch it.

This also made Liang Shi more curious about Lin Luoxi and Yang Shuyan's relationship, so before the livestream started, Liang Shi quietly asked about it.

Lin Luoxi coughed lightly and said half-concealing: "Just a relationship where we fought together before."

Liang Shi had always been able to control her curiosity, so she didn't ask further.

The livestream connection between Xu Qingzhu and Yang Shuyan was quickly pushed to the front of trending searches by netizens.

Netizens' emotions from cursing Chen Liuying hadn't yet calmed down when they clicked in and saw—two beautiful women.

So they began spreading the word.

More and more people came in, and Xu Qingzhu's Weibo followers were also increasing rapidly.

In just a short while, they increased by over 300,000.

Bullet comments² flashed across:

[Wuwuwu, this is paradise for face-value fans.]

[I really didn't expect that the forbidden CP³ I once shipped would have a day where they're on screen together.]

[This is so beautiful, my tears are flowing uncontrollably from the corners of my mouth.]

[How did these sisters grow to be so beautiful, awoo, I can't help but want to lick the screen.]

[Is this really not a dream? What immortal descended to bless us mortals?]

The comments refreshed very quickly, but there were many coming to praise Xu Qingzhu.

Before Xu Qingzhu started streaming, Liang Shi had already prepared an outline for the livestream, so when she first started, she spoke warmly: "I need to take up a bit of everyone's time first to explain what happened during the day. Because the other party and I have known each other for a long time, I didn't want it to come to this, but I didn't expect... I'm still sorry for affecting everyone's good mood all day."

These words were spoken with proper restraint and advancement, and combined with Xu Qingzhu's voice, had an unexpected effect.

Because Xu Qingzhu's voice was already cool and clear, and matched with her cold, gorgeous face, everyone had originally imagined a female boss image, but they didn't expect that for Xu Qingzhu's first livestream, she was a bit nervous. When speaking, she stuttered a bit, then lowered her head and made a gesture of biting her tongue, combined with her deliberate smile.

It made people feel she was extremely adorably silly.

Contrast cuteness⁴ had always been a relatively useful way in the entertainment industry to establish a persona and attract fans, but no one expected Xu Qingzhu to be self-taught.

Liang Shi had never thought about establishing a persona for Xu Qingzhu.

Very simply, Xu Qingzhu would develop in the company in the future, with a future blueprint of a business empire, not a dog-eat-dog entertainment industry.

So there was no need at all.

But now it was also an unexpected joy.

After explaining that matter, Xu Qingzhu chatted with Yang Shuyan about this autumn's new products.

She had someone bring over today's new products and said some would be gradually released later, so everyone should stay tuned.

She earnestly explained the name, style, and meaning of each product in front of the camera. Yang Shuyan, as a qualified supporting role, interjected appropriately at times.

The livestream room achieved unexpected results and quickly became the number one in popularity.

Besides Yang Shuyan, this huge traffic source, some people came specifically to see who the female lead at the center of the day's storm was, only to discover... she was really beautiful.

This appearance was simply here to bless all of humanity's eyes.

So the comment section became a large-scale rainbow fart⁵ scene.

Some people had never followed Minghui Jewelry's autumn new product launch before, or even paid attention to jewelry at all, but they fell into Minghui Jewelry's trap that night.

[Just for this face, this voice, I'll buy whatever she says.]

[Just post the link directly, I can do it, even if I have to sell everything.]

[I just want to know how much I need to buy to marry President Xu home, I really... drools... so hungry...]

Xu Qingzhu had just finished introducing a product and was resting when she saw the comment, so she read it out in her cool voice, then frowned and answered: "You don't need to sell everything to buy, jewelry is worn to make yourself happy. Different jewelry can give you different moods, so there's no need to buy a lot, just buy according to your needs."

"As for how much you need to buy to marry me home... sorry, you can't." Xu Qingzhu took the next product from the staff, glanced at Liang Shi who was seriously looking at backend data across from her, "I'm married."

Hearing this, Liang Shi looked up, only to find that Xu Qingzhu had already entered the next segment and started introducing the next product.

This one was designed by Zhou Yi'an.

Xu Qingzhu didn't introduce it briefly just because it was designed by Zhou Yi'an. On the contrary, she very earnestly introduced this product, even bringing up the RT Emerging Designer title, saying this work wasn't even her most impressive design—there were even better ones to come.

But even just this one was enough to amaze many people.

The bold color matching and simple yet charming design was eye-catching.

So many people went to the official website to pre-order.

In a corner no one noticed, Zhou Yi'an looked up from the game on her phone, glanced at her, her gaze profound.

After introducing today's new products, Xu Qingzhu chatted with Yang Shuyan about her future schedule, treating it as publicity for Yang Shuyan's new drama.

Yang Shuyan's future schedule was also simple—new dramas were still being negotiated, and already-aired dramas were all popular, so there wasn't much to promote.

Xu Qingzhu also wasn't very able to adapt to this atmosphere. She didn't really know what to say to liven things up.

Yang Shuyan was also a topic terminator⁶.

The atmosphere between the two was a bit awkward.

Someone suggested they randomly select comments and answer questions.

So they began selecting fan comments.

The first question selected was: Does President Xu intend to enter the entertainment industry? You're too beautiful, it's hard not to like you.

Footnotes:

¹ Face-value fans: Fans who follow someone primarily because of their physical appearance

² Bullet comments: Real-time comments that scroll across the video screen, popular in Asian streaming platforms

³ CP: "Couple Pairing" - fans who ship two people as a romantic couple

⁴ Contrast cuteness: The appeal created when someone's behavior contradicts their appearance or usual demeanor

⁵ Rainbow fart: Chinese internet slang for excessive, colorful compliments

⁶ Topic terminator: Someone who unintentionally kills conversations with their responses
