

Chapter 80-6

Shen Hui looked toward Zhao Xuning in the distance. She was wearing a black trench coat, still in a very simple and plain outfit. Her long hair was casually tied up, loosely bound, with stray hairs on both sides of her face. It would probably fall out after just a few steps.

This person was always like this—when tying her hair, she was always afraid of damaging it, so she only wrapped the hair tie around twice.

Zhao Xuning was holding her phone, leaning lightly against the school railing, which came up just to her waist.

Wearing gold wire-rimmed glasses, her whole demeanor appeared very proper and old-fashioned, yet her posture was casual and languid.

Restrained and refined, yet with a touch of nonchalance—it was rare for someone to perfectly blend these two temperaments together.

Yet Zhao Xuning was an outstanding example of exactly that.

She seemed not to care about anyone, those narrow, fox-like eyes hidden beneath her glasses.

Time seemed to suddenly rewind to many years ago. Back then at school, Zhao Xuning had been in this same state.

Despite being a junior, she was arrogant beyond measure.

Back then, she also liked to stand at the sports field, leaning lightly against the railing, casually and languidly watching people in the distance.

Later, after they got together, Shen Hui had asked her what she was looking at.

Zhao Xuning had answered, "Looking at my girlfriend."

Because back then, Shen Hui liked to run on the sports field. She would run in the morning and in the evening. When she ran, she would always see Zhao Xuning and couldn't help but be drawn to her.

As long as she stood there, Shen Hui's eyes would be on her.

And the direction she was looking at was indeed Shen Hui.

In the morning sun, in the sunset, in the thin mist, in the sky full of red clouds.

There had always been Shen Hui in Zhao Xuning's eyes.

"Second Sister!" Shen Siyan called out to her unhappily. "If you keep looking, you two are going to rekindle your old flame."

Shen Hui chuckled softly. "What are you worried about?"

"Of course I'm worried about you." Shen Siyan assumed an elder's attitude. "Have you forgotten how she treated you back then? We can set aside how she treated you, but character issues, especially things involving bottom lines in a relationship, there's absolutely no room for negotiation, okay? I think you should go on more blind dates, meet more good Alphas, and then you won't be blinded by this person. She was deceiving you all along."

"Oh my." Shen Hui pinched his face. "How come my little brother talks like he knows everything? You've never even been in a relationship and you want to teach your sister about dating? Don't you know that without experience, you have no right to speak?"

Shen Siyan: "..."

This scene was particularly glaring in Zhao Xuning's eyes.

After she finished taking photos of Liang Shi and sending them to Xu Qingzhu, she noticed Shen Hui standing over there. There was also a boy standing next to Shen Hui, wearing a blue jacket and jeans.

It seemed so.

He looked very young. There were some very intimate gestures between Shen Hui and him—their relationship must be unusual.

Was that Shen Hui's new boyfriend?

Zhao Xuning gripped her phone tightly, her fingers turning white, the veins on the back of her hand clearly visible.

She really wanted to go over and say hello, but she was afraid of hearing something unpleasant.

For example, that he really was Shen Hui's current partner.

Zhao Xuning closed her eyes briefly, took a deep breath, and just then Zhao Ling finished up on his end. Liang Shi went to change clothes accompanied by the junior girls.

Zhao Ling looked at the photos in the camera and couldn't help but sigh. "Sister Liang is really suited to be a model. She can pull off any style. This shoot went so smoothly. Cousin, you're really good at finding people. I'll treat you both to lunch."

Even after he finished speaking, Zhao Xuning showed no reaction. Only when he looked up did he notice that Zhao Xuning was staring straight at the other side of the sports field.

Following her gaze, Zhao Ling immediately frowned. "Oh man, enemies really do cross paths on narrow roads."¹

Zhao Xuning came back to her senses. "You know him?"

Even her voice had become strained.

Zhao Ling nodded. "Cousin, you don't know him? Wasn't it because of him that you lectured me last time?"

Zhao Xuning was surprised. "When?"

"That phone call." Zhao Ling said, "You told me not to cause trouble at school and not to bully people. It was him—the tattletale. Isn't that your ex-girlfriend, the one you treasured at the tip of your heart, standing right next to him? You've never seen him before?"

Zhao Xuning: "..."

Her tone even rose a pitch: "So, he's Shen Siyan?"

Zhao Ling nodded.

Meanwhile, Liang Shi, who had returned after changing clothes, was standing behind them and asked in confusion: "Shen Siyan is a guy?"

-
1. "Enemies really do cross paths on narrow roads" (冤家路窄) — A Chinese idiom meaning that enemies or people with grievances tend to run into each other unexpectedly, especially in inconvenient situations. ↩