

Chapter 83-1

Xu Qingzhu was in the middle of working overtime when she received a call from the mall's delivery personnel, saying they were there to deliver furniture but were stuck downstairs and couldn't get up, asking if she was home.

She was confused for a few seconds before realizing it must be the furniture Liang Shi had ordered. After confirming the details, she had them wait downstairs for over ten minutes while she hurriedly packed up her things and headed home.

Liang Shi had bought quite a lot of things. Xu Qingzhu didn't know exactly where to put everything, so she just had the delivery people pile everything in the living room.

The already small living room immediately became crowded, barely leaving a passage wide enough for one person to walk through.

In this cramped and crowded space, Xu Qingzhu nestled on the sofa and continued working overtime.

Before she knew it, night had fallen. The lights outside lit up the world in an instant. Traffic flowed endlessly across the riverside bridge, and the lights on both banks made the water ripples shimmer brilliantly, carrying a flowing vitality.

Even in the solemn late autumn, it made one feel alive.

Xu Qingzhu opened the window to let in some air, and while she was at it, stood by the window to enjoy the night view for a while before returning to work at her computer.

Before getting back to work, she glanced at her phone—it was already 8:30.

Liang Shi had given her advance notice that there was a farewell dinner tonight and she would probably come back a bit late, reminding her to remember to eat.

But she wasn't very hungry. Once she fully immersed herself in work, she couldn't feel hunger anymore.

Until the rain began to patter outside, and the mist rising in the air shrouded the entire world in the rainy night. Vehicles slowed down, pedestrians on the roadside opened their umbrellas, and those without umbrellas ran frantically through the rain.

The rain grew heavier.

It was already past nine, far exceeding the time Liang Shi usually came home.

Even for a dinner gathering, it should have ended by now.

Xu Qingzhu twirled the phone in her hand a few times, her body leaning lazily and casually against the window. Fine, dense rain threads blew in at an angle with the wind. The thin cardigan on her body was blown up, and although she pinched the two ends of the cardigan together with one hand, a small patch of milky white skin above her collarbone was still exposed, tinged with coolness from the wind and carrying a faint flush of red.

After thinking for a moment, she still called Liang Shi.

If she came back any later, this furniture would have to spend the night in the living room.

What she heard was Liang Shi's voice tinged with drunkenness: "Who's this?"

Xu Qingzhu: "....."