

Chapter 85-2

//

At first, Liang Shi had also been caught off guard by this sudden incident and hadn't thought through the logic at all.

It was only while leading Wang Ruoshi to a secluded spot that she sorted things out.

Regardless of the reason, the original owner had liked Xu Qingzhu—and it was a very special, very intense kind of liking, even to the point of being obsessive.

Moreover, the original owner had a sex addiction and had many casual partners in the past. Who knew if there were still any regular bed partners.

Under these circumstances, how could the original owner possibly have told someone else that she would marry them after the divorce?

Most likely, she had just paid them off with money.

And Wang Ruoshi wasn't that clever either. She kept saying "you're going to divorce," and her assumption that she would marry her after the divorce was just wishful thinking.

So Liang Shi speculated that the original owner had probably drunk too much and told someone about divorcing Xu Qingzhu, but she couldn't possibly have promised to marry the other person.

Wang Ruoshi was probably eyeing Liang Shi's money and wanted to use this opportunity to climb up the social ladder.

By the time Liang Shi walked back to find Xu Qingzhu, she discovered that Xu Qingzhu was already buying things from a vendor by the beach.

She seemed not to care at all about what had just happened.

However, this incident served as a wake-up call for Liang Shi.

She didn't know how many people the original owner had been involved with before, or how many more "Wang Ruoshis" might come knocking in the future.

She could only secretly pray that the original owner had properly dealt with all those old lovers and casual partners.

Meanwhile, Wang Ruoshi walked away with red-rimmed eyes. Her friend sighed helplessly. "I already told you not to get entangled with these rich people, but you just wouldn't listen."

"Do you know what she just called me?" Wang Ruoshi still seemed in disbelief.

"What?" her friend asked.

Wang Ruoshi's tears fell. "She called me a knowing homewrecker. Wuwuwu."

Friend: "...Aren't you though?"

Wang Ruoshi: "?"

"You knew from the start that she had a wife. And didn't you take five hundred thousand that day?" The friend said: "This matter is over. Don't dream about marrying into a wealthy family anymore. That's not something people like us can aspire to."

Wang Ruoshi: "?"

She was furious. "Are you even my friend?"

The friend who wanted to persuade her a bit more suddenly paused, opened and closed her mouth awkwardly, and just nodded in a daze: "Yes."

"Then why do you keep speaking up for her?" Wang Ruoshi was angry.

The friend pressed her lips together. After a moment, she cursed: "She's trash too! Having a wife and still going out to hook up! She doesn't deserve her wife at all!"

Wang Ruoshi: "...You know her wife?"

"She's the heiress of Minghui Jewelry." The friend took out her phone to show her. "Beautiful and highly educated. Truly the ideal woman."

Wang Ruoshi pushed her phone away and said through gritted teeth: "Just wait!"

"For what?" the friend asked.

Wang Ruoshi clenched her fist: "In the future, I'll definitely marry someone a hundred times better than Liang Shi!"

Friend: "..."