

Chapter 86-3

//

At the family reunion banquet, Liang Shi drank a bit of wine and toasted Su Zhe and Meng Tong.

Afterward, Xu Qingzhu also introduced her to Su Yao. Looking at Liang Shi, Su Yao praised, "She's a good child."

Then she was about to give her a card. Liang Shi originally wanted to refuse, but seeing Su Yao's expectant eyes, she accepted the card and sweetly called out "Mom."

Su Yao said happily, "Now I have three daughters."

Liang Shi kept everyone good company. When they came out of the restaurant, she and Xu Qingzhu stood at the entrance to see off the Su family. Only Su Nan remained in the end, saying he needed to return to school soon.

This younger brother was studying at the medical university, which was on their way.

Xu Qingzhu said she would drive him there later.

Su Nan, who had been silent all evening, said he could take a taxi there, but Su Zhe glared at him. "Your sister says she'll take you, so listen to her."

He probably wanted them to build some rapport.

After all the Su family members had left, Xu Qingzhu finally asked Su Nan, her voice slightly cold, "Are you heading back to the medical university later?"

Su Nan nodded.

After a moment, he added, "Yeah, I have an early class tomorrow."

"What major?" Xu Qingzhu asked.

Su Nan said, "Clinical medicine."

"That takes many years of study," Xu Qingzhu said. "Five years, I think?"

"I'm in the eight-year combined bachelor's, master's, and doctoral program," Su Nan said.

You could tell this high level of education made him proud—even his tone lifted at the end.

Xu Qingzhu nodded. "That's pretty good. I have a friend who also graduated from the medical university."

Su Nan said "oh," then asked Xu Qingzhu, "What about you?"

Xu Qingzhu paused briefly. "Qingyi University."

As soon as these four characters came out, Su Nan's expression changed. He suddenly said, "I heard your dad was a genius."

Xu Qingzhu glanced sideways. "Hm?"

"A genius architect," Su Nan said. "So you inherited your IQ from your dad?"

Xu Qingzhu shrugged. "Maybe. But my mom's IQ is pretty high too. When it comes to artistic talent, no one can compare to her."

"Indeed." Su Nan nodded and said with a hint of admiration, "Auntie¹ is amazing."

After exchanging a few words, Xu Qingzhu and Su Nan had broken the ice.

However, Su Nan really was a man of few words. Su Meiqi had mentioned before that her brother's share of words had probably all been used up by her, so her brother was a complete introvert².

Xu Qingzhu hadn't planned on building a close relationship with Su Nan anyway—as long as they didn't become enemies, it was fine.

They hadn't grown up together after all, and being only nominally cousins, they certainly wouldn't be very close.

However, they had all added each other on WeChat at the dinner table. Su Nan's Moments³ was completely blank.

They first dropped Su Nan off at the medical university, then headed back to their neighborhood. The distance really was close.

Every time this happened, Liang Shi would sigh that Zhao Xuning really had great investment sense. Compared to her, the original owner's business acumen was far inferior!

After returning home, both of them were tired. After washing up, they each went back to their rooms to rest.

Footnotes:

² Introvert (悶葫蘆, mèn húlu): Literally "a stuffy gourd." This is a Chinese idiom used to describe someone who is very quiet and keeps their thoughts to themselves, similar to calling someone a "closed book" or an introvert in English.

³ Moments (朋友圈, péngyou quān): WeChat's social media feature similar to Facebook's timeline or Instagram's feed, where users can post photos, videos, and status updates visible to their contacts.
