

Chapter 93-3

//

Meanwhile, on the other side of this city, in a certain upscale residential area.

Sun Chengcheng was sitting in a spacious room painting her toenails. The nail brush gently swept over, covering them with a layer of light pink.

The housekeeper brought over bird's nest soup and lightly knocked on her door. "Miss, your bird's nest soup is ready. You should eat it while it's hot."

"Got it." Sun Chengcheng's hand movements paused. "What about my parents?"

The housekeeper said in a low voice: "President Sun and Madam have already retired for the night."

Sun Chengcheng said: "Alright, then you can leave too. Come collect the bowl tomorrow morning."

"Yes, Miss."

The housekeeper respectfully left.

After the room door closed, Sun Chengcheng continued painting her toenail polish. But the phone on the bed vibrated slightly, causing her hand to shake and instantly paint outside the lines.

.....

How annoying.

Sun Chengcheng wiped away those marks with tissue and cursed the person who sent her a message in her heart. Then she picked up her phone and saw that it was a stranger friend request.

She looked through the profile. The name was just an "L," and the bio was a period.

A bit pretentious.

Sun Chengcheng never liked this type, so she waited until she finished beautifully painting her nails before picking up her phone again and unhurriedly clicking accept.

Then she elegantly sat there eating the bird's nest soup.

She had discovered one week ago that she had arrived in an ABO world, a world where everyone would grow glands.

Actually, for an old bookworm who had read countless Mary Sue novels and had many years of TXT reading experience, the ABO worldview wasn't unfamiliar to her. It was just that she had never read this type of book before. After all, as a TXT reader, she always read whatever others sent her.

However, she quickly adapted to this worldview.

She had transmigrated into someone with the same name as her. The original body was, like her, a performing arts student who happened to graduate this year. Although the original body was talented, she had become mute due to an accident.

After she arrived, she could speak. The original body was an Omega, so she was now one too.

Her father was the CEO of a bubble tea chain store, and her mother was a ballet dancer—much more prestigious than her original family.

But strangely, she entered this world when dreaming.

When she woke up, she would reappear in the real world.

She had deliberately calculated that the flow of time in this world was three times that of the real world. Because she was an unwavering eight-hour sleeper—even if there was a night shoot that required rushing work, she would maintain eight hours of sleep—and during the eight hours she slept, she could spend twenty-four hours here.

This dream felt too real, so real it was like playing an immersive game. And as a high-level player, she naturally had some advantages over others, such as her acting skills and her prophetic abilities.

She had obtained an album called "Entertainment Industry Dream Fragments." Each page of the album featured an important entertainment industry bigwig—investors with unique insight, future triple-crown best actors, international renowned directors, future best actresses, etc. The page about each of them had a strategy guide attached.

In other words, as long as she had this album, she could pursue strategies with these bigwigs, then become the entertainment industry's heartthrob, the hottest star, a woman standing at the peak of power.

When she saw this album, she was overjoyed. So this was compensating for her unsatisfactory reality by letting her achieve her dreams in the dream world?

She had gotten the script of a max-level boss returning to the newbie village!

But Sun Chengcheng wasn't happy for long. All the dream fragments disappeared, leaving only mysterious mosaics.

A system called "King of the Entertainment Industry" reminded her that she could only unlock the album's content by completing corresponding tasks. Her tasks were all very simple—go to bed early, wake up early, exercise, study hard at school, etc. After completing tasks for two days, she chose to unlock the international renowned director's strategy guide.

International renowned director Gu Yixue, English name/stage name Quella, the least favored illegitimate daughter of the Gu family, a genius misanthrope with unique artistic vision and scriptwriting abilities.

She was a lonely wandering spirit, a walker in the night, and an arsonist of hearts. There would always be people one after another, like moths to a flame, loving her.

She hated all bright things. Playing with people's hearts was her favorite thing to do.

She longed to become better but hated when others wanted to make her better. She was a complex contradiction.

Her favorite food was coconut, her most hated fruit was pineapple, her favorite flower was hyacinth, her most hated flower was rose.

Her favorite person was Shen Fenghe, her most hated person was Gu Chunmian. In her concept, Gu Chunmian was hypocritical, dissolute, and inhumane, so she most hated false gentlemen.

She most liked light brown eyes, most liked people wearing white dresses, most liked things mysterious and unpredictable like the wind, most liked romance and mystery, but also most longed to kill romance.

.....

An entire densely packed page was all introductions related to Gu Yixue. So on a rainy day, she wore a white dress, wore light brown colored contacts, kept her hair long and straight, and went to the street to "coincidentally encounter" Gu Yixue, successfully obtaining a role in her next production.

When she met Gu Yixue at that time, she was stunned, because her face was too beautiful—she didn't look like a misanthrope at all.

Apart from the occasional coldness and distance revealed in her eyes that could almost freeze people, most of the time she was romantic and carefree, just appearing somewhat dissolute.

But the information the album gave her also included a sentence describing Gu Yixue: She shuttles through crowds, yet remains detached from the world.

Currently, Sun Chengcheng had only unlocked Gu Yixue's profile card, because she felt that as a fledgling young actress, obtaining a female lead role from an international renowned director meant that her career in the entertainment industry was already halfway to success.

Sun Chengcheng was about to accumulate enough fragment points.

The next profile card she wanted to unlock was the investor with unique insight. Having obtained a role, she now needed to get money—mainly to get a mobile ATM.

The information this album provided about Gu Yixue was all very literary, so Sun Chengcheng couldn't currently confirm whether everyone's information was this literary or only Gu Yixue's.

She urgently needed to confirm this, because for her, what she needed more was straightforward and effective methods.

Although the strategy for Gu Yixue was successful this time, it didn't mean it would always be successful afterward.

The "King of the Entertainment Industry" system would also accumulate "Charm Value" as Sun Chengcheng continuously completed tasks. The higher the charm value accumulated, the higher her success rate in pursuing strategy targets.

Sun Chengcheng treated this as a gacha and strategy game to play. It was quite comfortable.

Most importantly, in this world, she enjoyed treatment like a little princess. The family here was so happy she could speak that they cried tears of joy, holding her in the palm of their hands as their precious darling. Compared to her previous world... it was completely different.

Sun Chengcheng felt that everything appearing in this dream was compensation for her reality. What she couldn't get in reality, she must obtain here.

Sitting at the table, she elegantly drank half a bowl of bird's nest soup, then felt her stomach was a bit full. As a female celebrity, she must strictly control her weight, so she didn't continue eating. The instant she put down her spoon, the phone beside her vibrated slightly. The person who had just added her finally sent a message.

Sun Chengcheng had only given them half a bowl of bird's nest soup's worth of time. She had been thinking that if this person didn't speak, she would delete them after finishing the bird's nest soup.

So wishy-washy, not a bit polite.

But the moment she saw the message, her pupils dilated in shock.

—It was Liang Shi?
