

Chapter 95-2

//

In any case, it was a good thing that Ling Dang had stopped crying.

At a time like this, even if she wanted the stars from the sky, they would have to find a way to pluck them down for her.

Let alone just an ice cream cone.

Sun Meirou had the family driver go back first and sat in Liang Shi's car.

Su Yao had originally wanted to take Sheng Yu in their own car, but Sheng Yu refused no matter what—she just wanted to huddle together and play with the other kids.

So Sun Meirou took the initiative to suggest sitting in Su Yao's car, while the three children sat in the back of Liang Shi's car.

Liang Shi: "....."

For a moment, she felt like she was running a kindergarten.

Sun Meirou hadn't met Su Yao before, but she had heard some rumors about the Sheng family, especially about Sheng Qinglin back in the day.

Although Su Yao was a bit older than Sun Meirou, they both had daughters around the same age, so they had something in common to talk about.

Besides, from what Liang Shi had said earlier, it seemed that Xu Qingzhu had acknowledged her biological mother.

Sun Meirou had always been cautious and careful, so she didn't dare to initiate conversation after getting in the car.

It was Su Yao who asked her, "What happened to your daughter? It looks like she's been crying for a long time."

"Ah." At the mention of this, Sun Meirou could only sigh. "Last night, my new sister-in-law took her to the supermarket, but she didn't watch her carefully. She pushed over a two-year-old boy, and the boy's head hit the shopping cart—he got a really big bump. The boy's parents were very angry, and Ling Dang's aunt told Ling Dang to apologize. But Ling Dang insisted that she didn't push him and didn't hit anyone. They checked the store's surveillance footage and found that she did reach out her hand and push the little boy down. She refused to apologize, so her aunt apologized to them instead. When my mother-in-law found out about this, she scolded Ling Dang, and Ling Dang felt so wronged. She's been crying since last night until now."

"Huh?" Su Yao frowned. "Did you go check the surveillance footage yourself?"

"Are you suspecting that my sister-in-law is lying?" Sun Meirou sighed. "I watched it too. In that segment of the footage, Ling Dang was indeed in the wrong—she reached out and pushed him. The boy is only two years old, and the bump was quite serious. I even went to visit him at the hospital today."

"That's not possible." Su Yao said. "If a child this age did something wrong, they'd feel guilty as soon as they were scolded. If she's been able to cry for a day and a night, it means she truly feels wronged."

Sun Meirou nodded. "I thought the same thing. She cried herself to sleep last night, and her eyes were swollen when she woke up this morning....."

Sun Meirou felt terrible too. She hadn't slept all night, wanting to discuss things with Liang Xinhe, but lately his work at the company had piled up like a mountain—he'd even been sleeping at the office. So she had held Ling Dang and slept through the night.

When Ling Dang woke up this morning, she absolutely refused to go to school and wanted Sun Meirou to take her to find that little boy to get things straight.

But that little boy was only two years old, just at the age of babbling—he couldn't even speak properly yet. How could he explain things clearly to her?

If they went, it would definitely turn into another unpleasant scene. So Sun Meirou tried to persuade her to go to school, but then she flopped on the bed and cried again.

Unexpectedly, Qiu Zimin came in after a while and asked why she hadn't come downstairs for breakfast yet. Seeing Ling Dang crying, she frowned and said, "What are you crying about? It's early morning—wash up, eat, and go to school."

Ling Dang looked at her. "Grandma, I really didn't push that boy. He fell down by himself."

"It was captured on the surveillance footage." Qiu Zimin said sternly. "Lying is not a good habit. Besides, your behavior has caused trouble for your aunt. She kept apologizing to them for your sake—shouldn't you also apologize to your aunt?"

Ling Dang sobbed and shook her head. "I don't want to! Who asked her to apologize for me?! I didn't do anything wrong!"

So early in the morning, Ling Dang burst into another round of wailing.

This made Qiu Zimin quite angry. She stepped forward to lecture Ling Dang. "Children shouldn't lie. Besides, your aunt helped you, and you won't even thank her or apologize—why are you still throwing a tantrum here? Ling Dang, why have you been so disobedient lately?"

"Grandma, I really didn't." Ling Dang said between sobs. "You... believe... me... Auntie saw it at the time. I... I reached out to pull the shopping cart... I didn't push him..."

Qiu Zimin continued lecturing her. "Your aunt didn't say anything bad about you and even apologized on your behalf. Your aunt was wronged too—you should thank her and apologize to her."

Ling Dang shook her head. "Wahhh~ She's mean. I don't want to talk to her.. She's falsely accusing me."

As she spoke, Qiu Zimin's expression changed. Then she looked at Sun Meirou unfriendly. "How have you been raising her? She used to be such a well-behaved child, but now she's being so unreasonable? Making trouble without cause, being irrational, doing something wrong and stubbornly refusing to admit it... How did she become... just like..."

She probably wanted to say "just like Liang Shi," but considering that Ling Dang was her biological granddaughter, the words turned a corner at the tip of her tongue, and she swallowed them all back without saying them.

Sun Meirou tried to explain to her, but she wouldn't listen. She just scolded her harshly, and Sun Meirou ended up being blamed as well.

What Qiu Zimin meant was that a child this young didn't understand anything—she must have been led astray by the adults.

Therefore, after Sun Meirou painstakingly persuaded Ling Dang to go to school, she went home and cried for a while herself.

Then, at lunchtime, Guo Xinran saw her red, tear-swollen eyes and immediately came over to hand her tissues and apologize. "I'm sorry, Second Sister-in-law. I shouldn't have taken Ling Dang out last night. I just thought I'd take her out for some fresh air. I didn't expect something like this to happen. Please don't cry—I'm really sorry....."

Before Sun Meirou could even take the tissues to wipe her eyes, Qiu Zimin came downstairs, her tone carrying a hint of contempt. "It's precisely because you spoil her like this that Ling Dang has become more and more unreasonable. For a child this age, you need to establish proper values for her—wrong is wrong. How can you still....."

"Mom." Sun Meirou couldn't help but speak up for Ling Dang. "Ling Dang also grew up under your watch. Doesn't it pain you to see her crying so hard? From childhood until now, no matter what she did wrong, she never lied. This time she's so adamant that she didn't do it—don't you want to investigate further?"

"Xinran saw it, and the surveillance footage captured it too—she did it." Qiu Zimin said. "What else is there for me to investigate? Yesterday, Xinran humbled herself to apologize to those people for her sake, and not only was she ungrateful, she even wanted to hit someone. You saw it with your own eyes. If we hadn't arrived in time, Xinran would have been bullied because of that stubborn mouth of hers."

"Just keep spoiling her—sooner or later she'll cause big trouble for you. Ever since this child started hanging around with Liang Shi, I knew nothing good would come of it." Qiu Zimin said indignantly. "And don't forget how your brother-in-law moved out. If it weren't for Liang Shi, our whole family would still be fine."

"Liang Shi turned out this way—wasn't that also because of how you raised her?" Sun Meirou, for once, stood her ground and retorted.