

Chapter 1

Clusters of twinkling stars scattered chaotically across the sky.

Yin Lingzhu was sleeping on the bed when she suddenly felt thirsty.

She opened her eyes, wanting to get some water, but discovered that the room was pitch black.

Yin Lingzhu was secretly surprised in her heart. Every time before she slept, she would always leave a lamp on.

Her heart became alert. She got out of bed and turned on the main light, looking around the room, confirming that this was not her house.

Yin Lingzhu moved to the desk, where a book was placed.

"The Differences Between Alpha and Omega"

She glanced at the book title, and when her fingers touched the cover, she suddenly felt a sharp pain in her brain and fainted.

When Yin Lingzhu woke up again, she was startled awake by the sound of someone banging on the door outside.

She held her head as a large amount of memories that didn't belong to her flooded her mind.

So this world was like this.

The knocking grew louder each time, showing that the person outside was gradually losing patience.

"Hurry up and pay back the money, or I'll tear your door down!" The rough male voice rang out again, mixed with the sound of kicking the door.

These sounds left her no time to think.

Yin Lingzhu checked the original owner's memories and found that she had indeed borrowed money from others.

The people outside coming to demand money wasn't a one-time occurrence either.

"Big brother, I don't have money right now. I'll bring it to you in a few days," Yin Lingzhu shouted through the door.

"You just wait. After the 7th, if you still haven't paid back the money, you know the consequences." The big man left his threat, gave the door another vicious kick, and only then was willing to leave.

Hearing the footsteps outside gradually disappearing, Yin Lingzhu breathed a sigh of relief.

She began to carefully examine the original owner's memories.

In this world, humans were born with male and female distinctions, but at eighteen years old, they would undergo another differentiation, becoming Alpha, Beta, or Omega¹.

The differentiated genders had six levels: SS, S, A, B, C, D.

The body Yin Lingzhu had transmigrated into was a B-level female Alpha. Combined with her decent looks, she had been signed by an entertainment company.

But the original owner didn't dance, didn't practice singing, and didn't go to the company. It wasn't until this afternoon that her manager sent her the contract with an ultimatum.

Only then did the original owner learn that if she didn't gain enough fame, she would need to pay a huge breach of contract penalty of ten million yuan².

After receiving this news, the original owner became absent-minded and died from electrocution while drinking water. That's how Yin Lingzhu transmigrated into this body.

Why was it that when others transmigrated, everything went smoothly, but when she transmigrated, she got a huge breach of contract penalty?

Yin Lingzhu smiled bitterly, arranged the book on the desk neatly, and pondered solutions for the breach of contract penalty.

While thinking, Yin Lingzhu unconsciously fell asleep.

The next day's sunlight filtered through the curtains, slowly shining onto Yin Lingzhu's face.

The morning light carried a tinge of orange-red, slowly sweeping across Yin Lingzhu's full forehead, straight nose bridge, through the hair on her shoulders, reaching her collarbones, forming a perfect curve.

Yin Lingzhu slowly opened her eyes, squinting because of the sunlight. Having just woken up, her whole body exuded a soft and harmless aura.

She felt her pockets—completely empty.

Yin Lingzhu tidied herself up simply and walked to the company on foot.

The house she rented was neither close nor far from the company—it took half an hour to get there.

Yin Lingzhu found her manager's office, opened the door, and discovered someone was already inside.

She recognized who this person was—Rong Yu.

Rong Yu had signed with the company at the same time as Yin Lingzhu, but she had seen through the company's true nature early on and quickly found a financial backer³ through the company's connections.

Yin Lingzhu wasn't very familiar with her.

As soon as Yin Lingzhu sat on the sofa, she noticed Rong Yu staring at her constantly, so she gave Rong Yu a smile.

She had bangs that fell just above her eyes, her eyebrows were naturally well-shaped without grooming, and when she smiled, her whole person appeared particularly youthful.

Rong Yu stared blankly for a moment, but after coming back to her senses, she glared fiercely at Yin Lingzhu.

Yin Lingzhu received that glare and felt very confused, keeping a mental note in her heart.

Just as the atmosphere fell into silence, another person pushed the door open and walked straight to the main seat to sit down.

The newcomer pointed directly at Yin Lingzhu: "How do you have time today, busy person?"

This person was their manager, Brother Wen.

Before Yin Lingzhu could think of how to explain, Rong Yu spoke first.

"Brother Wen, since Xiao Zhu⁴ has come to the company now, don't talk to her like that." Rong Yu's voice was gentle and soft, but her words were fanning the flames.

While speaking, she even glanced at Yin Lingzhu, only her eyes contained deeply hidden malice.

"Brother Wen, don't be angry. I want to look at my contract," Yin Lingzhu said this sentence after Rong Yu finished speaking.

She had thought for a long time and could only look for loopholes in the signing contract to see if she could pay less in breach of contract penalties.

"The contracts are uniformly kept by the company. I don't have it." Brother Wen looked at his phone, saying with a firm attitude.

"Besides, we're such a big company, how could we deceive you?"

Seeing Brother Wen's stubborn refusal to produce the contract and his attempt to cover up, Yin Lingzhu understood.

Her contract probably had major problems.

She thought this in her heart but showed nothing on her face.

"What are you saying, Brother Wen? I trust the company very much too." Yin Lingzhu sat up straight, her face wearing a pure smile.

Rong Yu suddenly said something at this moment.

"Xiao Zhu probably hasn't filmed in a long time. I know there's a production crew holding auditions this afternoon. You can go try it."

"Then hurry up and go to the crew audition with Xiao Yu." Brother Wen hastily picked up his phone. "This opportunity is very rare."

These actions were all observed by Yin Lingzhu.

"Alright, Brother Wen, I'll go to the crew first." Yin Lingzhu followed behind Rong Yu, speaking to Brother Wen while walking.

Brother Wen saw the door close behind Yin Lingzhu and hurriedly called someone.

"She seems to have noticed."

Yin Lingzhu only heard this much before being interrupted.

"What are you dawdling around for?" Rong Yu turned around to find that the person who should have been behind her was now crouching by the office door.

"My shoelace came undone." Yin Lingzhu gestured for her to look at her shoes.

Both shoes had their laces tied.

"I just tied them." Yin Lingzhu stood up, the corner of her mouth curving upward. "Do they look good?"

"Are you sick in the head? Hurry up and go." Thrown off by this distraction, Rong Yu's mind went blank, forgetting what she had been thinking, and couldn't help but curse.

The noon sun blazed down on the ground. With not a cloud in the sky, the air became thick and hot.

Yin Lingzhu walked alone by the roadside. Sweat dampened the hair on her forehead and the back of her neck. Feeling the sticky sensation on her body, she felt very irritated.

Yin Lingzhu's shoes cost ten yuan. Both the sole and upper were very thin.

The advantage was breathability; the disadvantage was that the bottom of her feet hurt terribly now—no different from stepping directly on the ground.

Car horns blared "beep—beep—beep—" Yin Lingzhu frowned and turned her head to see Rong Yu sitting in an extended luxury car, holding an iced drink in her left hand and watermelon in her right.

Following Rong Yu's instructions, the driver kept the speed very low, almost the same as Yin Lingzhu's walking pace.

Through the car window, she could see Rong Yu's smug expression.

Yin Lingzhu felt stifled and turned her head away, not looking at Rong Yu.

She could feel Rong Yu's hostility toward her, but hadn't expected her to be this childish.

Yin Lingzhu frowned. Why would Rong Yu develop malice toward her? They had barely had any interaction before.

Footnotes:

² Ten million yuan: At current exchange rates, this would be approximately 1.4 million USD—an enormous sum representing the severity of the original owner's situation.

³ Financial backer: In Chinese entertainment industry context, this refers to wealthy patrons (often businesspeople) who provide financial support to entertainers in exchange for companionship or other favors—a common but looked-down-upon practice.

⁴ Xiao Zhu: "Xiao" (小) is a diminutive prefix commonly used before names in Chinese to show familiarity or affection, similar to adding "-ie" or "little" before a name in English. "Zhu" is short for "Lingzhu."
