

Chapter 30-1

Yan Si looked at Yin Lingzhu, whose eyes were unfocused, and reached out to pull her into her arms.

With skin touching skin, she could feel the coldness of the water, but she could also feel how scorching hot Yin Lingzhu's body was.

At this moment, Yin Lingzhu only felt that there was a cool object pressed against her, and her body was craving this coolness. She stretched out her arms and embraced that cool presence.

Yan Si noticed Yin Lingzhu's movement - her waist was tightly encircled.

She realized that Yin Lingzhu's consciousness was currently unclear.

Feeling Yin Lingzhu's initiative, her mind was engaged in a frenzied struggle.

Her rationality told her that she should take Yin Lingzhu to the hospital, that she shouldn't take advantage of someone in distress.

But at this moment, she was also extremely reluctant to let go of this rare closeness.

Two conflicting thoughts were constantly battling.

But Yin Lingzhu couldn't care about all that. She felt that the object she was holding was emanating her favorite scent.

The rose fragrance surrounded Yin Lingzhu. Her body was completely following its instincts, step by step drawing closer.

"Give it to me, okay?" Yin Lingzhu leaned close to Yan Si's ear, her exhaled breath clinging to her ear.

The desire in Yan Si's heart ultimately triumphed over her rationality.

She gave up resisting and, following Yin Lingzhu's force, leaned against the wall.

Yan Si looked at Yin Lingzhu, who had collapsed into her embrace and fallen into deep sleep. She supported her somewhat sore waist.

She called her assistant, telling the assistant her current location and asking them to bring two sets of clean clothes.

Yin Lingzhu was helped onto the bed by Yan Si. The drug's effects were gradually dissipating now.

Lying on the bed, Yin Lingzhu looked particularly docile at this moment. Her slightly damp hair clung to her forehead, bringing a sense of vulnerability.

Perhaps because her body had been soaked in cold water earlier, Yin Lingzhu's brow was furrowed, and her eyelashes trembled slightly, as if she might open her eyes at any moment.

The air was filled with the lingering scent of roses.

Yan Si looked at her, her rationality returning.

She began to think about what the consequences would be if Yin Lingzhu knew about this matter.

Given Yin Lingzhu's personality, Yin Lingzhu would probably look at her with disgust and then curse her.

The doorbell's chime interrupted Yan Si's thoughts. She left the bedroom and saw two sets of clean clothes placed on the table.

The assistant must have left immediately after placing the clothes down.

She looked at the sizes of the clothes - one set was the same as her usual size, and the other set was about the same as Yin Lingzhu's figure.

She knew why this was.

Yan Si carried the clothes back to the bedroom.

When changing Yin Lingzhu's clothes, she saw the bite mark on Yin Lingzhu's shoulder - it was from her bite.

However, the position was toward the back, so Yin Lingzhu wouldn't easily see it when looking in the mirror.

After Yan Si discovered this, she felt relieved. Only then did she dare to take Yin Lingzhu to the hospital.

Looking at Yin Lingzhu lying on the hospital bed, Yan Si couldn't tell if she felt relaxed or exhausted.

She supported her waist and slowly sat down on the hospital corridor chair.

The cold metal, even through a layer of fabric, was still bone-chilling.

She suddenly realized that it was already autumn.

No wonder it was so cold.

When You Xiaoxiao arrived, she saw Yan Si sitting on the chair, looking completely lost in thought.

"Are you alright?" You Xiaoxiao sat next to Yan Si, asking somewhat cautiously.

Yan Si saw it was her and shook her head.

"I'm fine." Yan Si's gaze looked at the white wall in front of her. "I still have something I need you to help with."

Hearing this, You Xiaoxiao withdrew her comforting expression. "I won't do anything illegal."

Yan Si glanced at her. "It's not that. You'll know in a moment."

Realizing she had misunderstood, You Xiaoxiao felt a bit embarrassed and laughed awkwardly.

"Tell me, tell me. I'll definitely help you," You Xiaoxiao said.

After a while, a doctor came out of the hospital room.

Holding a report in his hand.

"The patient has no problems and doesn't need to be hospitalized. She'll be fine after resting for one night."

The doctor continued, "Actually, there was no need to come to the hospital. The drug effects in the patient's body had already been neutralized."

You Xiaoxiao raised an eyebrow.

Yan Si showed no reaction. She nodded, indicating she understood.

After the doctor left, Yan Si turned to You Xiaoxiao.

"Help me - tomorrow when you see Lingzhu, tell her that the drug effects were neutralized at the hospital."

Although You Xiaoxiao didn't understand, she still nodded.

She found it rather curious - the previous Yan Si would never use the word "help."

Yan Si looked at You Xiaoxiao, who was standing there with a strange expression on her face. "Why are you still standing here? Go negotiate with the doctor who just came out."

Hearing her say this, You Xiaoxiao felt like the old Yan Si had returned.

"Alright, I'll go right away." You Xiaoxiao shrugged and walked toward that doctor's office.

Yan Si said it was negotiation, but it was actually hush money¹. However, You Xiaoxiao also knew that doctor.

Therefore, she also knew how to make the doctor keep quiet.

Yan Si's gaze fell on Yin Lingzhu through the glass.

She knew that tonight's actions were very selfish, but she didn't regret it.

If she didn't seize this opportunity, she didn't know when the next one would come.

Yan Si's eyes gradually became determined.

From childhood, she had always known that opportunities had to be fought for.

It was also with this drive that she managed to gain the upper hand in the business world.

She truly didn't regret tonight's events.

But she was also truly afraid. She hoped to be intimate with Yin Lingzhu, yet feared Yin Lingzhu's anger.

She pinned her hopes on Yin Lingzhu having no memory of tonight.

Let this matter be a realistic dream that only she experienced.

Footnotes:

¹ Hush money: Payment made to prevent someone from revealing embarrassing or harmful information. The Chinese text uses "封口" (literally "seal the mouth"), which means to silence someone or prevent them from speaking about something, typically through payment or other forms of persuasion.