

Chapter 31-2

"I'll go find her immediately. She will absolutely never appear in front of you again."

"In any form."

Hearing her say this, Yin Lingzhu replied, "I hope President Yan will keep her word."

Yan Si looked at Yin Lingzhu's slightly pale lips, "About last night's incident, I'm sorry."

Yan Si stood beside Yin Lingzhu's bed, slightly lowering her head, her eyes full of self-blame.

But at this moment, Yin Lingzhu was choosing her takeout and didn't notice Yan Si's expression at all.

Regarding Yan Si's apology, Yin Lingzhu nodded in acknowledgment, "Since being by your side, I've suffered enough harm already. One more time doesn't make much difference."

Yin Lingzhu's tone was too calm, but Yan Si just felt uneasy.

Overly polite words always gave one the feeling that the distance between them was very far.

The room was quiet for a moment.

"Rest well, I'll go first." Yan Si gave a gentle smile to Yin Lingzhu on the bed.

But this smile also didn't fall into Yin Lingzhu's eyes.

Yan Si didn't expect her to respond either.

Coming out of the room, the smile on Yan Si's face was gone too.

Her expression was gloomy, making You Xiaoxiao, who was waiting outside the door, shudder.

"What's wrong?" You Xiaoxiao asked.

Yan Si didn't answer her question, "Just take good care of her."

Yan Si went downstairs, got in the car and sat in the passenger seat.

[Where are you now?]

She took out her phone, found Si Xin's name in her contacts, and sent her a text message.

Si Xin's reply speed was very fast.

[President Yan, is there something you need? I'm currently at the film set.]

Si Xin's assistant stood beside her with difficulty, finally making up her mind and reminding her, "The director has urged several times already. It's our turn to go on."

The smile that had appeared on Si Xin's face because she received Yan Si's message immediately disappeared.

She looked at her assistant with disgust, "I know, nag, nag, nag. Are you my assistant or the director's assistant?"

The little assistant's eyes reddened slightly from what she said, but she quickly lowered her head, not daring to let Si Xin see her face.

Last time when Si Xin saw her cry, she left her alone at the film set and took away all the money and phone she had on her.

Si Xin sat in the back seat of the nanny van¹, looking down at the little assistant, "I'm taking your phone and putting it at your workstation at the company."

Si Xin knew how important the little assistant's phone was to her.

The little assistant looked at her phone in Si Xin's hands and pleaded, "No, no, I know I was wrong. I'll never do it again."

Hearing her begging, Si Xin laughed wantonly, her red lipstick color like vivid blood.

"This is the price."

Si Xin closed the car door. The slowly closing door was like a partition, separating two worlds.

Just as the little assistant was about to seek help from people around her, Si Xin suddenly rolled down the car window.

"Reminder - you can only walk back. Don't let me catch you taking any vehicle, or you know the consequences."

The little assistant's world fell into complete darkness after she said these words.

That night, she walked for half the evening.

Even when she reached the company entrance, her legs could barely lift, and her feet were burning with pain, but she still stubbornly wanted to get her phone back.

The little assistant's back was soaked with sweat, and the hair on her forehead was also wet, sticking tightly to her skin.

The company's door was tightly locked, and inside was also pitch black.

The little assistant waited at the company entrance for the entire night.

Usually there would be security at the entrance, but not tonight. The little assistant knew why.

She didn't understand why just crying once had such serious consequences.

Recalling the consequences of crying out loud last time, the little assistant clenched her hands tightly.

"Go tell the director that I'm not feeling well and can't film this afternoon." Si Xin held her phone, saying carelessly.

"But..." The little assistant originally wanted to say that they had already used this excuse many times, but Si Xin's one glance made her whole body tremble.

"Alright, I'll go right away." The little assistant hurried off.

She followed Si Xin's instructions and repeated the words to the director.

Before the director could speak, there were already murmurs around them.

"What now? Because of her, we have to waste another afternoon."

"Can't help it, she has backing²."

Listening to the film crew's discussions, the little assistant quietly left the scene.

Because of Si Xin, she was also unpopular.

Footnotes:

¹ Nanny van: A type of vehicle commonly used in the Chinese entertainment industry to transport celebrities and their staff. It's typically a large, comfortable van that serves as a mobile dressing room and rest area.

² Has backing: Chinese entertainment industry slang meaning someone has powerful support or connections (usually financial backers or influential people) protecting their career, allowing them to get away with unprofessional behavior.
