

Chapter 37-2

In the elevator, Yin Lingzhu looked at Yan Si beside her and thought helplessly about how things had developed to this point.

Earlier, letting Yan Si into her room was to avoid misunderstandings.

If someone photographed her supporting Yan Si like this, Yin Lingzhu had already thought of tomorrow's trending topic.

Thinking this way, Yin Lingzhu looked around alertly, afraid that a paparazzi might suddenly appear somewhere and capture their actions.

Until she delivered Yan Si to her door, not a single person appeared along the way.

This allowed Yin Lingzhu's constantly raised heart to finally settle.

"Alright, hop back inside yourself." After seeing Yan Si open the door, Yin Lingzhu withdrew her hand.

Seeing her about to leave, Yan Si said, "Could you help me a bit more?"

"My leg really hurts."

"I can't walk by myself."

Although Yin Lingzhu was a bit skeptical, looking at Yan Si's expression, it didn't seem fake either.

Following the principle of seeing things through to the end¹.

Yin Lingzhu still supported Yan Si's arm and helped her sit on the sofa.

Just as Yin Lingzhu was preparing to leave, Yan Si's assistant arrived, with another person following behind her.

It was Si Xin.

Yin Lingzhu didn't need to think to know this was Yan Si's arrangement.

Yin Lingzhu was somewhat unhappy. "President Yan, what are you doing?"

Seeing that Yin Lingzhu was indeed angry, Yan Si looked at her carefully.

"I just want to tell you that I really didn't cheat."

"You wouldn't agree to see Si Xin, so I came up with this method."

Yin Lingzhu crossed her arms and sat on the sofa.

"I don't want to see her, so you force me to see her. President Yan, why bother?"

Yan Si lowered her head, not daring to look at her. "I just want to explain."

Yin Lingzhu looked at her leg. "So is your knee really hurting or fake hurting?"

Yan Si instinctively felt that Yin Lingzhu was dangerous right now. Out of instinct, she keenly hid some information.

"It hurts a lot."

Yin Lingzhu carefully looked at her face, trying to determine whether Yan Si was lying.

Yan Si felt a bit guilty under her gaze, but she swallowed and forced herself to remain calm, letting Yin Lingzhu scrutinize her.

Acting like someone with a clear conscience who wasn't afraid of shadows².

Looking at Yan Si's "completely righteous" appearance, Yin Lingzhu felt she was probably overthinking things.

Yan Si probably wouldn't stoop to lying.

"If I listen to your explanation, then I can leave, right?" Yin Lingzhu glanced at the locked door and said.

Yan Si lowered her voice and hummed in acknowledgment.

"Fine then. Tell me, what's your relationship with Si Xin?"

Yin Lingzhu's voice was cold, obviously disbelieving.

Hearing Yin Lingzhu's attitude, Yan Si wanted to tell her that everything she said was true, but she couldn't bring herself to speak.

Yan Si looked toward Si Xin.

Si Xin had been somewhat defiant when she was locked in the hotel room that afternoon, but the assistant's methods had truly frightened her.

Receiving Yan Si's gaze, her whole body trembled, and she immediately walked in front of Yin Lingzhu.

"I'm sorry, I was wrong. I wanted publicity, so I made up lies."

Si Xin bowed ninety degrees, placing her hands at her sides, looking very sincere.

Yin Lingzhu nodded. "Is there more?"

When she spoke, her eyes weren't directed at Si Xin, but at Yan Si.

Yan Si had originally been satisfied with Si Xin's apologetic attitude, but suddenly met Yin Lingzhu's gaze.

Yan Si could see that Yin Lingzhu was completely filled with disbelief right now.

Feeling anxious for a moment, her brain didn't think before she blurted out her original plan.

Which was also the truth she didn't dare let Yin Lingzhu know.

"I originally wanted to use Si Xin to see how much you loved me, not because I liked Si Xin."

After Yan Si finished speaking, she closed her eyes, as if awaiting judgment.

¹ "Seeing things through to the end": This translates the Chinese idiom "做人做到底，送佛送到西" which literally means "do things completely, send Buddha all the way to the West." It refers to helping someone completely rather than halfway, derived from the Journey to the West story where the monk must reach the Western Paradise.

² "Clear conscience who wasn't afraid of shadows": This translates the Chinese idiom "身正不怕影子斜" meaning someone who is upright and honest has nothing to fear from unfair criticism or suspicion.
