

Chapter 4 - Translation

Yin Lingzhu was wearing a blue and white hospital gown and couldn't go out.

She began searching through the entire room and didn't find her own clothes, but unexpectedly discovered a medical report.

The most obvious line read: This Alpha has extremely strong mental power and needs regular treatment.

Yin Lingzhu glanced at it casually and paid it no more attention.

But after searching through the entire room, she still hadn't seen her own clothes.

She pressed the call button on the bedside table and directly called for a nurse.

After the nurse learned of her purpose and brought her clothes, she instructed her that she couldn't be discharged tonight and needed to be observed for another night.

Yin Lingzhu had no choice but to give up, waiting expectantly through the night.

She didn't know Yan Si's purpose for marrying her, but she believed Yan Si didn't dislike her.

Otherwise, it would be impossible for her to marry her.

But she also didn't think Yan Si loved her. However, in their future life together, she could make Yan Si like her.

Just thinking about this possibility made Yin Lingzhu feel her blood boiling throughout her body, her heart racing wildly, and her face heating up uncontrollably.

Under the starry sky, Yin Lingzhu slowly fell into dreams with hopes for the future.

She had no idea what her married life would actually entail.

The next day, at six in the morning.

Yin Lingzhu returned to her rental apartment. Just as she found her household registration book, she turned around to see two people outside the room and was startled.

"How did you get here?" Yin Lingzhu saw Yan Si and her heart beat violently, though she didn't blush this time.

You Xiaoxiao walked into the room, answering first: "We found you weren't at the hospital, so we guessed you'd come here."

Yan Si didn't enter the room.

Today she wore a beige coat, carrying a bag of the same color across her shoulder. Without makeup, her hair pulled back added a gentle temperament to her appearance.

Yan Si lifted her bag slightly: "I brought my household registration book too."

Yin Lingzhu felt grateful in her heart that she had cleaned the room when she first arrived. The room was relatively tidy now and wouldn't be embarrassing.

Her expressions and thoughts were seen clearly by the other two people.

You Xiaoxiao took out a contract and placed it on the paint-peeling table.

Yin Lingzhu looked at her actions in confusion.

"Here, sign it." You Xiaoxiao threw her a pen, but didn't throw it accurately—it fell to the ground.

"What is this?" Yin Lingzhu picked up the pen and asked doubtfully.

"You'll know if you look at it."

You Xiaoxiao stood there, Yin Lingzhu also stood, while Yan Si remained outside the rental apartment. The only chair in the room sat empty.

The contract bore four large characters at the top: Prenuptial Agreement.

Yin Lingzhu skimmed through the contract. Most of it was useless, with only four additional conditions.

Party A: Yan Si.

Party B: Yin Lingzhu.

1: Party A will give Party B six million yuan¹.

2: Party A voluntarily gifts Party B an apartment.

3: Party B must not reveal their marriage partner in any form.

4: Party B must provide Party A with temporary marking² once per month, and must not cause Party A any discomfort during the process.

Note: If Party B violates the contract, all items received from Party A must be returned, plus an additional compensation of fifty million yuan.

"Sign it once you understand," You Xiaoxiao urged.

Yin Lingzhu flipped through it, focusing on the additional conditions. "What does this third clause mean?"

"You know Si Si's³ status. If her marital status were exposed, it might harm her career."

You Xiaoxiao crossed her arms over her chest, her toes tapping the ground from time to time.

Yin Lingzhu's face showed a disappointed expression, but she still wrote her name.

Seeing her sign, You Xiaoxiao felt relieved. This contract was drafted by Yan Si.

But even without signing this contract, if Yin Lingzhu dared to do anything wrong to Yan Si, the Yan family⁴ would deal with her the next day.

"Hurry up and go out. The civil affairs bureau⁵ is open now," You Xiaoxiao said, putting away the contract.

At the entrance of the civil affairs bureau.

Yin Lingzhu looked at the red booklet⁶ in her hands with a sense of unreality.

The clear touch of the booklet reminded her that she had really married the person she liked.

Yan Si held the red booklet, her inner thoughts unreadable, her face wearing the same smile as usual.

"Let's go. I'll take you to Si Si's apartment," You Xiaoxiao said, breathing a sigh of relief seeing that the two had finally gotten their marriage certificate.

She had really worn herself out worrying about Yan Si.

After arriving at Yan Si's apartment, You Xiaoxiao handed the contract to Yan Si and went to work at the hospital.

In the room, Yin Lingzhu again smelled the rose fragrance, stronger than last time, further eroding her rationality.

Yan Si saw Yin Lingzhu standing there in a daze, motionless like a wooden person.

"Sit down, I'll pour you some water," Yan Si said, leaving Yin Lingzhu's line of sight.

Like a robot, Yin Lingzhu only moved when Yan Si spoke, walking to the sofa to sit down.

"Warm water."

Yan Si placed a disposable cup in front of Yin Lingzhu.

Yin Lingzhu responded awkwardly, "Oh."

She hurriedly picked up the water cup, listening to what Yan Si was saying to her.

"This apartment is a gift to you. The five million can be transferred to your card," Yan Si sat opposite Yin Lingzhu, her voice gentle.

"Okay."

Yin Lingzhu took a big gulp of water and asked: "Will you come live in this apartment?"

Yan Si looked at Yin Lingzhu in front of her, mustering courage, looking like she was awaiting judgment.

"I will live here." But only for one night.

Yan Si felt playful and deliberately withheld the second half of her sentence.

"Oh, oh." Yin Lingzhu nodded randomly, not knowing what to say next.

For a moment, the room fell terrifyingly silent.

"I have scenes to film today, so I'll leave first," Yan Si said, breaking the awkward silence.

"These are the apartment keys." She handed the keys to Yin Lingzhu.

At that moment, their fingers touched, and both felt a tremor throughout their bodies.

Yin Lingzhu was joyful from touching the person she liked.

She didn't even know when Yan Si left, staring blankly at her fingertips and the keys.

Yan Si endured her discomfort and quickly left the room, going to the public bathroom to wash the place that had been touched.

Yin Lingzhu didn't know what was happening outside. Her whole being was currently surrounded by pink bubbles.

But when she thought about her current behavior, it seemed like she was living off someone else⁷.

After thinking for a moment, Yin Lingzhu also left the apartment and rushed to her company.

She had to find a way to resolve the breach of contract penalty. The key was the original owner's signing contract.

The original owner's contract definitely had problems. What interests did the original owner have that were worth Brother Wen altering the contract for?

"Ding dong"—Yin Lingzhu's phone lit up. The six million yuan from Yan Si had arrived.

Yin Lingzhu received this notification while she was at the mall.

She was planning to buy a recording device.

At the mall, Yin Lingzhu spent 1,500 yuan and finally bought two recording devices and a small camera.

After opening this equipment and placing it on herself, Yin Lingzhu took a taxi to the company.

"Brother Wen, I want to see my contract now," Yin Lingzhu said directly upon entering the office.

"Have you gathered enough for the breach of contract penalty?" Brother Wen smiled contemptuously, twirling a pen in his hand.

Yin Lingzhu heard the implication in Brother Wen's words: "I have."

"How is that possible? Are you—" Brother Wen hastily cut off his own words, not finishing the sentence.

Yin Lingzhu's eyes darkened. Brother Wen indeed had something going on.

"How could you possibly gather that much money?" Brother Wen was incredulous.

He had signed Yin Lingzhu himself, so he knew her family background and circumstances better than anyone.

She absolutely couldn't have gathered that much money.

"Brother Wen, look." Yin Lingzhu held up her phone, showing a balance of one million yuan.

In the car, she had transferred one million from the six million Yan Si gave her to another card.

"I have ten more cards like this."

Brother Wen's eyes stared fixedly at the phone, his facial expression constantly changing. "Fine, I'll go get the contract."

All contracts signed with artists could be retrieved by the artist after meeting requirements, for re-signing or not continuing.

Moreover, contracts were usually made in duplicate—one copy with the agent, one with the artist.

The original owner's contract was nowhere to be found. It wasn't in the rental apartment; she had searched twice and never found it.

Brother Wen went out for a while and returned with a document in his hand.

"Your contract is here. Are you sure you really want to pay the breach of contract penalty?" Brother Wen's voice trembled slightly, his eyes harboring barely perceptible fear.

"Don't worry, Brother Wen. I've definitely thought it through." Yin Lingzhu stood up, preparing to take the document from his hand.

Brother Wen's body shifted, dodging Yin Lingzhu's hand.

He ran to his desk, placed the contract on the surface, and took out a card from the drawer.

"Transfer the money to this card first." Brother Wen shoved the card into Yin Lingzhu's hand.

Yin Lingzhu looked at the card in her hand and raised an eyebrow: "Brother Wen, this probably doesn't comply with company regulations."

This card was obviously a personal card.

"Don't worry about all that. Hurry up and transfer the money. Once you transfer it, I'll give you the contract." Brother Wen's voice was urgent.

Yin Lingzhu sat back down unhurriedly.

"Brother Wen, you've calculated this well."

"What if I give you the money and you don't give me the contract?"

Brother Wen gritted his teeth and handed the contract to Yin Lingzhu: "I won't. Don't you trust Brother Wen? You sign first."

He was taking a gamble.

"Here, sign the contract first."

The folder contained two contracts—one was her original contract, and one was the termination contract.

She set the termination contract aside and picked up the other one to look at.

When Brother Wen saw her action, his heart skipped a beat.

"This contract seems to have problems."

Yin Lingzhu's voice was like thunder in Brother Wen's ears.

"How could that be?" Brother Wen's face went pale, but he still insisted.

"Here, there's clearly an extra character." Yin Lingzhu pointed to a section of text.

Brother Wen looked up and indeed saw the place where he had tampered with it originally.

He had changed the breach of contract penalty from 1 million to 10 million yuan.

Seeing the matter exposed, Brother Wen's legs went weak and he collapsed to the ground.

"Brother Wen, don't panic. As long as you tell me who made you alter my contract, I won't pursue this," Yin Lingzhu's voice carried seduction, making people let down their guard without any defense.

Hearing her say this, Brother Wen's eyes lit up: "I'll tell, I'll tell, it was—"

At the last moment, Brother Wen's mouth stopped.

He remembered that person's methods.

Brother Wen's head dropped in resignation: "No one. It was me."

Yin Lingzhu looked at him and was secretly amazed at the power of the person behind this. "If you won't say, so be it. Wait for legal sanctions."

Yin Lingzhu took the contract and left, leaving Brother Wen alone in the room.

Yin Lingzhu put away the contract and pressed the button on the device she was wearing.

She had thought Brother Wen would be smarter, but who knew that with just a scare, he'd spill everything.

Next, she went to terminate her rental lease, took her documents, and returned to the apartment.

Yan Si's apartment was very simple—two bedrooms, one living room, and an open kitchen.

Yin Lingzhu noticed that the kitchen had been used. It seemed the movie queen even cooked for herself.

Earlier, on the way to the company, she had searched Yan Si's name and learned what this name represented.

Child star debut, consistently good reviews, blockbuster movies, guaranteed TV drama ratings.

Moreover, this year there was hope of gaining a foothold in international markets.

When Yin Lingzhu saw all this, she deeply admired Yan Si.

She decided to be the supportive Alpha behind Yan Si.

Footnotes:

¹ Six million yuan: Approximately 850,000 USD at current exchange rates—a substantial sum demonstrating Yan Si's wealth and the business nature of their arrangement.

² Temporary marking: In ABO fiction, this refers to a less permanent form of marking that provides some of the benefits (like scent suppression or hormonal stability) without the lifelong commitment of permanent marking. It needs to be renewed regularly.

³ Si Si: An affectionate nickname for Yan Si. Adding repeated syllables to names is a common way to create pet names in Chinese.

⁴ Yan family: This implies that Yan Si comes from a powerful, wealthy family that could easily destroy someone like Yin Lingzhu if crossed.

⁵ Civil affairs bureau: In China, this is the government office where marriages are officially registered and marriage certificates are issued.

⁶ Red booklet: Chinese marriage certificates are distinctive red booklets, which is why they're often referred to simply as "red books" (红本本).

⁷ Living off someone else: The Chinese term "吃软饭" (literally "eating soft rice") refers to a man being financially supported by a woman, often with negative connotations of being a freeloader or gold-digger.