

Chapter 48-2

Inside the hospital room, Yan Si could be seen sitting on the hospital bed.

Although her lips were pale, after seeing the visitor, the smile that bloomed at the corners of her mouth was incredibly radiant.

It made one unable to look away.

The assistant didn't follow inside; she stood guard outside the door.

Yin Lingzhu looked around and saw there was only one chair in the room now.

She clearly remembered that when she left earlier, there had been at least three or four chairs in the room.

Yin Lingzhu's gaze fell on the only chair.

That chair was now right beside Yan Si's bed.

Yin Lingzhu hesitated for a moment, but still sat down.

"Thank you for saving me."

Yin Lingzhu smiled slightly, "If something happened to President Yan, it's something no one would want to see."

Hearing her words, Yan Si said somewhat seriously, "What about you?"

Yin Lingzhu didn't react for a moment, "What?"

"What about you? Would you care about me?"

Yan Si's gaze was very serious. Yin Lingzhu could even see a faint hint of persistence shining through her eyes.

Yin Lingzhu's attitude was even influenced by her, becoming serious as well.

"If something happened to President Yan, not just me, but the entire entertainment industry would be sad."

Yin Lingzhu evaded that question.

The light in Yan Si's eyes slowly dimmed.

She thought she already knew the answer.

Yan Si forced a smile, but it was completely different from the smile she had when Yin Lingzhu first entered.

Yin Lingzhu noticed the change in her smile, but she didn't say anything.

What did Yan Si's mood have to do with her?

"Regardless, I still have to thank you."

Yan Si smiled, her bloodless face looking very weak.

Yin Lingzhu no longer wanted to talk with her and pressed her lips together.

The air became somewhat quiet for a moment. Yin Lingzhu felt a bit awkward.

She opened her phone, trying to ease the atmosphere.

But after unlocking, the screen displayed Yan Si's Weibo page.

Yan Si, who had been paying attention to Yin Lingzhu, naturally saw this too.

Her eyes lit up.

Yin Lingzhu hurriedly exited the page. When she looked at Yan Si, she discovered the light in Yan Si's eyes.

That brightness even made Yin Lingzhu feel a bit soft-hearted.

She opened her mouth and asked, "Why aren't you acting anymore?"

Yan Si smiled and asked her, "Do you want me to continue acting?"

Yin Lingzhu frowned, "Your own decision—what does it have to do with me?"

Yin Lingzhu's tone carried indifference.

She was even regretting why she had entered this hospital room.

She glanced at Yan Si.

Sunlight streamed through the window, shining directly on her. Her thin collarbones became even more distinct.

It made Yan Si appear frail.

Yin Lingzhu withdrew her gaze after just one look.

She stood up from the chair, "President Yan, if possible, please contact the production team about the online public opinion."

She had come here for this matter.

Yan Si was stunned, "Okay."

"If President Yan has nothing else, I'll leave first."

Yan Si raised her hand as if wanting to make her stay, but it fell back down mid-air.

"Okay."

She agreed with a smile.

Yin Lingzhu left, returning home in a daze along the way.

Through the car window, she watched the scenery outside retreat bit by bit.

Among the scenes was Yan Si's billboard¹, where Yan Si stood holding a sword with flowing robes.

It was a role Yan Si had once played.

Yin Lingzhu had seen this billboard from far away. The car quickly drove past, leaving it behind.

Yan Si on the billboard had no smile on her face, looking very cold and aloof.

Just like the Yan Si in Yin Lingzhu's eyes at the beginning, but different from the current Yan Si.

While Yin Lingzhu was lost in thought, the car had unknowingly stopped at the hotel entrance.

Yin Lingzhu got out of the car, her steps somewhat heavy.

She didn't know what was wrong with her today either.

Yin Lingzhu fell onto the bed. Her mind was very chaotic now.

Inexplicably irritated.

But she didn't know how to resolve this irritation.

In Yin Lingzhu's wandering thoughts, her consciousness gradually faded.

"Ring ring ring." A phone ringtone awakened Yin Lingzhu's consciousness just as she was about to fall asleep.

She impatiently answered the phone, her tone displeased.

"What is it?"

There was a moment of silence on the other end, "Little Yin, did I disturb you?"

It was the director.

Yin Lingzhu immediately became alert, "No, I just had a few commercial calls earlier, so my tone was a bit harsh."

Yin Lingzhu clearly heard the director's sigh of relief.

"Little Yin, we have a gathering this afternoon. Come join us—we're celebrating Yan Si's discharge from the hospital."

Hearing the director say that Yan Si had been discharged, Yin Lingzhu frowned.

Discharged so early—was it really safe?

But Yin Lingzhu didn't voice this concern, thinking it had nothing to do with her.

"Okay, Director. I'll definitely be there."

Yin Lingzhu agreed.

Yin Lingzhu listened to the director holding the microphone, his singing voice drifting to eighteen li² away, finding it quite amusing.

The director had chosen a KTV as the venue. Right from the start, the director offered a song.

Not many people came—a few staff members and a few actors with major roles.

Yin Lingzhu was amused by the director's voice. When she smiled, she attracted the attention of everyone around.

This made her body stiffen, and she immediately straightened her mouth.

After three rounds of drinks, everyone was pretty much drunk, except for three people: Yin Lingzhu, Yan Si, and the director.

No one dared to pressure Yan Si or the director to drink.

Yin Lingzhu politely declined, saying she had taken medication.

The not-so-small space was now filled with laughter.

Yin Lingzhu looked at the group of drunk people and felt a headache coming on. How were these people going to get home?

Just as she was worrying about this, she suddenly felt her shoulder become heavy.

Even without looking, she knew it was Yan Si.

But she assumed Yan Si was pretending to sleep. She poked Yan Si several times with her hand, but Yan Si didn't react.

Yin Lingzhu became a bit impatient. She used her hands to prop Yan Si's body upright.

But as soon as her hands left Yan Si's body, Yan Si's body tilted forward.

If Yin Lingzhu's hands hadn't caught her in time, Yan Si would have fallen to the ground.

Only then did Yin Lingzhu realize something was wrong.

She patted Yan Si's face, but Yan Si had no reaction.

Looking at Yan Si's complexion again, it was even paler than at noon.

She immediately took her to the hospital.

Footnotes:

¹ Billboard (廣告牌): Large outdoor advertising displays, very common in Chinese cities featuring celebrities promoting various products or movies.

² Eighteen li (十八裏): A Chinese unit of distance. One li is approximately 0.5 kilometers, so eighteen li would be about 9 kilometers. This is an exaggerated way of saying the director's singing voice was very loud and off-key, traveling far away.