

Chapter 52-2

Yan Si came out of the office holding the report, her eyes reddened.

Yin Lingzhu had been watching the door for movement. Seeing her come out, she quickly stood up.

After noticing her condition, she hurriedly ran over. "What's wrong? What did the doctor tell you?"

Seeing Yin Lingzhu, Yan Si acted as if she had found her backbone.

The tears that had been gathering at the bottom of her eyes, about to fall but not yet falling, suddenly poured out.

She held up the diagnosis report with trembling hands.

Yin Lingzhu quickly took it and looked it over. Most of it was professional medical language that Yin Lingzhu couldn't understand.

However, seeing the bottom of the entire page, she quickly said, "It's okay. You're currently in the middle stage. As long as you actively cooperate with treatment, there definitely won't be any problems."

Yan Si seemed to be moved by her words. She looked at her, her voice carrying a slight nasal tone.

"Really?"

Seeing that her words had an effect, Yin Lingzhu quickly nodded. "Really, really."

Yin Lingzhu's hands holding the report were trembling, but to reassure Yan Si, she still forced herself to appear calm.

After hearing Yin Lingzhu say this, the tension and fear on Yan Si's face lessened somewhat.

"I believe you." Yan Si looked at Yin Lingzhu, her face full of trust.

This made Yin Lingzhu somewhat avoid her gaze.

"Let's go back." Yin Lingzhu said to Yan Si.

Yan Si hummed in agreement and took Yin Lingzhu's hand, following behind her.

In the car, Yan Si kept looking out the window until she saw a shop and immediately had the driver stop.

Yan Si brought Yin Lingzhu into that shop.

Cat meowing sounds rose and fell all around. There were all kinds of cats, and mixed among the cages were some other animals as well.

Only then did Yin Lingzhu realize this was a pet store, but most of the animals sold were cats and dogs.

"I've always wanted to apologize to you, but I haven't found the right opportunity, so I want to compensate you with one."

Yan Si looked at her, her tone carrying some apology but very sincere.

Yin Lingzhu closed her eyes. When she opened them, she looked at Yan Si.

"It's fine, I don't need it. Let's go."

After saying this, Yin Lingzhu had already turned and stepped away.

But Yan Si grabbed her. "Give me a chance to make it up to you, okay?"

Yan Si's tone was very light, and the force with which she held Yin Lingzhu was also very small. If Yin Lingzhu wanted to break free, it wouldn't take much effort.

Yin Lingzhu now had her back to Yan Si. She exhaled a long breath. "There are still fish in the apartment. Having a cat might be inconvenient."

Yin Lingzhu closed her eyes, her tone sounding very steady, but if you listened carefully, there were some subtle tremors.

Yan Si's desire to make amends to Yin Lingzhu reached its peak at this moment.

She didn't notice that Yin Lingzhu's state was off.

At this time, a shop employee came out and stood in front of them both.

She smiled at Yin Lingzhu and said, "If you two don't want to keep cats, we also have many dogs in our store."

Hearing this, Yan Si immediately perked up.

"If Lingzhu wants to keep a dog, that's also fine."

Hearing the persuasive voices of both people, Yin Lingzhu kept her eyes closed and didn't open them for a long time.

When she first entered, she had already seen it.

In the first cage by the door, the cat inside had exactly the same coloring as the fold-ear cat she had once kept.

Except one had folded ears, and one had upright ears.

Yin Lingzhu turned around to face Yan Si.

That cat with the same coloring was now behind her, and when she opened her eyes again, she could no longer see it.

"Alright, you choose." Yin Lingzhu's smile was somewhat forced.

But Yan Si thought Yin Lingzhu had come around. She pulled Yin Lingzhu along, and under the shop employee's guidance, they walked toward where the dogs were sold.

Along the way, Yin Lingzhu seemed absent-minded, but Yan Si was very excited, talking non-stop the entire time.

From personality to size to breed, comparing everything comprehensively, Yan Si's attitude showed she was determined to pick out the best dog for Yin Lingzhu.

After reaching their destination, Yan Si finally noticed Yin Lingzhu's distraction.

"Did I make you unhappy?" Yan Si lowered her head, her long hair falling across her cheeks, covering her expression.

Yin Lingzhu tucked Yan Si's long hair behind her ear and explained with a smile, "No, I was just thinking about other things, so I spaced out."

Yan Si felt Yin Lingzhu's action and was somewhat happy. She placed her hand over Yin Lingzhu's.

"I thought I had made you unhappy."

She took Yin Lingzhu's hand and had her look at the dogs in front of them.

Inside were all kinds of dogs, different breeds, but all puppies.

Note: This chapter continues to show Yan Si's manipulation through false vulnerability while Yin Lingzhu struggles with painful memories triggered by seeing a cat similar to the one that died (田田). The pet store scene demonstrates how Yan Si uses guilt and her fake illness to push Yin Lingzhu into situations that serve her emotional manipulation, while Yin Lingzhu tries to cope with the trauma of losing her previous pet.
