

Chapter 53-1

In front of them, all the small dogs were in cages. Some had their eyes open, curiously looking at the visitors, whimpering adorably in their mouths.

Yin Lingzhu looked at the puppies and, although she found them cute, had no intention of getting one.

Unlike her indifference, Yan Si was in very high spirits at the moment.

She carefully selected each dog, meticulously examining their markings, size, and breed, having made up her mind to take one home from here.

Seeing Yan Si's good mood, Yin Lingzhu didn't say anything discouraging about not wanting to raise a dog.

She followed beside Yan Si, helping her select dogs together.

Finally, Yan Si stopped in front of a cage with a Golden Retriever inside.

She pointed at the puppy in the cage, asking for Yin Lingzhu's opinion.

Yin Lingzhu carefully looked at the puppy, and seeing the barely concealed anticipation on Yan Si's face, she nodded.

"This one is quite pretty and well-behaved."

Yan Si, believing that Yin Lingzhu also liked this little dog, confidently bought it.

In the car, Yan Si looked at Yin Lingzhu beside her, feeling somewhat at peace in her heart.

As long as Yin Lingzhu was still by her side, everything she did had meaning.

The little dog was placed on the car seat beside them.

Yan Si looked down at her, her expression completely different from the excitement she had shown earlier.

She didn't actually like pets that much.

This dog was also being raised for Yin Lingzhu's sake.

The puppy looked up at Yan Si and shifted herself to the edge of the cage.

After returning home, Yin Lingzhu opened the dog cage, letting the little Golden Retriever run around in the apartment.

But the Golden Retriever burst out of the cage excitedly, then nestled beside Yin Lingzhu instead.

Seeing the little Golden Retriever rubbing against her legs, the heavy feeling in Yin Lingzhu's heart also lightened.

Yan Si had been watching Yin Lingzhu's expression the whole time, and seeing the smile appear on her face, Yan Si's mood also improved.

"After we eat, let's go buy some supplies for her." Yan Si spoke up, her eyes now only able to hold Yin Lingzhu.

The Golden Retriever was still very small, and Yin Lingzhu crouched down, rubbing the little dog's head.

Hearing Yan Si's suggestion, she decisively agreed.

The little Golden Retriever's lunch bowl was the cat bowl from the Scottish Fold cat that Yin Lingzhu had previously raised.

Fortunately, the little Golden Retriever wasn't big, otherwise that bowl definitely wouldn't be enough.

Yin Lingzhu looked at the eating Golden Retriever, her eyes becoming much gentler.

Since it had come, she needed to take on the responsibility of raising a life.

Yin Lingzhu originally wanted to leave the little Golden Retriever at home for Yan Si to watch while she went alone to buy pet supplies.

But Yan Si disagreed no matter what, insisting on going together with Yin Lingzhu.

The little Golden Retriever seemed to sense something too, rubbing around Yin Lingzhu's feet.

Yin Lingzhu looked at the one person and one dog clinging to her, feeling a sense of helplessness well up inside.

"Alright, let's go together." She looked at Yan Si, smiling very gently.

Yin Lingzhu looked at the dog cage by the door, pursed her lips, and pulled out a backpack from the cabinet.

She wore the pack backwards, letting the little Golden Retriever stay against her chest.

Yan Si watched Yin Lingzhu's actions. At this moment, Yin Lingzhu was picking up the little Golden Retriever, preparing to put her in the backpack.

Yan Si stepped forward, wanting to stop Yin Lingzhu.

"She was just bought, hasn't been dewormed or anything yet."

Yin Lingzhu's movements paused. She was currently holding the puppy's two front legs, lifting the dog up.

After hearing Yan Si's words, the dog in Yin Lingzhu's hands dangled vertically in mid-air.

But Yin Lingzhu still put the little Golden Retriever in the bag.

"She hasn't been here long. If we leave her alone at home, she might tear up the house."

Yin Lingzhu spoke indifferently in her own defense.

Yan Si didn't want to make Yin Lingzhu angry, so she said nothing more.

She could see that Yin Lingzhu was starting to like this little dog a bit now.

In the pet market, many shops sold supplies for small dogs.

As soon as she stepped into the store, Yin Lingzhu immediately saw a huge cat climbing tower, and she froze in place.

The store clerk who came to serve them saw Yin Lingzhu's reaction and assumed Yin Lingzhu owned a cat.

Seeing the bag on Yin Lingzhu's chest, the clerk had seen many people who carried cats this way and was even more certain of her guess.

"Miss, this cat climbing tower is our best-selling model. You can let your little cat try it out."

The clerk's words instantly brought Yin Lingzhu back to her senses, and she smiled and said "no need."

Then she and Yan Si went inside to select supplies for the dog.

Dog beds, dog bowls, and other supplies were all chosen by Yin Lingzhu alone.

While Yin Lingzhu was selecting, Yan Si didn't interfere at all, only taking care of paying and carrying things.

Watching Yin Lingzhu selecting seriously, Yan Si's heart settled considerably.

Yin Lingzhu noticed Yan Si's gaze.

She felt a bit embarrassed—she'd been focused only on shopping and had completely forgotten about Yan Si.

"You should also come pick some things."

The little dog also let out a sweet little bark, as if saying "okay."

Yan Si stepped forward, getting very close to Yin Lingzhu, carefully selecting clothes for the little dog.

After Yin Lingzhu saw a particular outfit, she excitedly grabbed Yan Si beside her, "Look at that one, it's so cute."

Yan Si's arm was pulled by Yin Lingzhu, shaking constantly, and she could feel that Yin Lingzhu was very excited at this moment.

She looked in the direction Yin Lingzhu was pointing—it was a red outfit with several small paw prints embroidered in black thread.

Yan Si secretly remembered Yin Lingzhu's preferences.

"If you like it, just buy it."

Yan Si's tone was very generous.

Yin Lingzhu was stunned for a moment, then suddenly realized that from the moment they'd entered the store, all the money for purchases had been paid by Yan Si.

Realizing her behavior was inappropriate, Yin Lingzhu's heart skipped a beat.

"Thank you, but I'll pay for this myself."

Yin Lingzhu declined Yan Si's offer, took the cute little jacket, and went to pay for it herself.

After returning from payment, Yin Lingzhu realized her emotions had been too excited earlier.

So she restrained her feelings and selected items with a detached expression.

Since she had previously raised a cat, by comparison, she selected items quite quickly.

Yan Si noticed Yin Lingzhu's change in attitude and knew she had been counterproductive, feeling annoyed with herself.

But she couldn't think of any good solution right now, so she could only follow behind Yin Lingzhu, slowly thinking of ways in her mind.
