

Chapter 55-2

The car drove smoothly on the road.

Yan Si sat in the back seat, still tightly gripping Yin Lingzhu's hand.

Her eyes were closed, leaning against the back of the seat, thinking about what Gu Qi had just said.

After sorting through what had just happened.

Suddenly Yan Si opened her eyes and turned to look at Yin Lingzhu.

"Do you believe what she said?"

Yin Lingzhu's other hand, which had been playing with her phone, paused. "What?"

Yan Si looked at her, her tone very serious.

"What that Gu Qi just said about those people insisting on making me drink."

Yin Lingzhu also remembered, "In the workplace, some drinking is unavoidable. Even if we don't want to, there's no way around it."

Hearing her answer, the taut string in Yan Si's heart relaxed a little.

It was good that she hadn't noticed.

Immediately after, Yan Si frowned again.

Those people had come to force her to drink out of nowhere. Yan Si didn't need to think to know that something wasn't quite normal about this.

But who was the mastermind behind it?

Yan Si furrowed her brow and sighed.

This time she had come on a whim—no one knew in advance.

Who could it be?

When Yin Lingzhu and Yan Si reached the apartment door, Yin Lingzhu held the keys while Yan Si carried the groceries.

As soon as she opened the door, a little one tangled around her feet.

Niannian raised her two front paws and jumped onto Yin Lingzhu's calves.

Seeing her, Yin Lingzhu bent down and petted Niannian's head.

Looking at her bright, sparkling eyes, Yin Lingzhu couldn't help but feel cheerful.

"Was Niannian good at home?" Yin Lingzhu's voice was gentle as she petted Niannian's head.

Niannian happily pressed her head against Yin Lingzhu's hand.

She also made whimpering, coquettish sounds with her mouth.

Standing beside Yin Lingzhu, Yan Si inexplicably felt somewhat redundant.

She coughed to attract Yin Lingzhu's attention.

"Ah, let's go in quickly." Yin Lingzhu stood up, feeling a bit embarrassed.

Yin Lingzhu wanted to take the groceries from Yan Si's hands to prepare to cook in the kitchen.

But unexpectedly, Yan Si dodged her hands.

"Let me do it. You rest today."

Yan Si walked toward the kitchen.

Her words left Yin Lingzhu stunned.

She had never imagined that she could eat food cooked by Yan Si.

This was an extremely luxurious thing for her.

Even though Yan Si had said she regretted everything and had done so many things for her, she had never thought about this.

Subconsciously, she believed that she and Yan Si were not equals in status.

Coming back to her senses, she found a sofa to sit on, only then realizing how much she had been thinking.

Yin Lingzhu let out a long sigh and shook all those thoughts from her head.

It was just a meal. If she wanted to cook, let her cook—it was no big deal.

Yin Lingzhu tried hard to convince herself.

She held her phone in one hand and petted Niannian with the other.

Niannian was also very well-behaved, lying on her lap.

The weight of a small dog was still bearable for Yin Lingzhu.

Yan Si cooked quite quickly, and soon the aroma of food could be smelled.

In about an hour, she brought the prepared dishes to the table and called Yin Lingzhu to eat.

Yin Lingzhu looked at the table full of dishes, somewhat surprised.

The food looked very appealing in both color and aroma. Yin Lingzhu still couldn't imagine Yan Si rolling up her sleeves to cook.

"Try it. How's my cooking?" Yan Si handed Yin Lingzhu a pair of chopsticks, her eyes full of anticipation.

Yin Lingzhu picked up a piece of meat, put it in her mouth, and under Yan Si's gaze, carefully tasted it.

After a long moment, Yin Lingzhu put down her chopsticks. "Let me do the cooking from now on."

Hearing this, Yan Si became a bit nervous.

"Doesn't it taste good?"

Yin Lingzhu put down her chopsticks. "No, what you made is very delicious."

"It's just that you're sick now, so I should handle these things."

Hearing what she said, Yan Si felt a bit of sweetness in her heart.

Her decision to fake being sick was indeed correct.

Yan Si thought this way.

Since the director had given them time off, after finishing lunch, they stayed in their room with no plans to go out.

The two sat in the living room, casually playing a TV drama as background noise while each played with their phones.

The TV volume in the living room was quite loud.

While watching videos on her phone, Yin Lingzhu vaguely heard some sounds from outside the video, but when she listened carefully, it seemed like there was nothing.

But it didn't seem like her imagination either. She told Yan Si about this.

After the two turned off the TV sound and listened carefully, there really was nothing.

Yin Lingzhu could only assume she was overthinking.

Just a few minutes later, a loud sound startled both of them simultaneously.

Yin Lingzhu listened to the sound and realized it came from her bedroom.

She pushed open the bedroom door.

By the bed, a little dog with bright, sparkling eyes was staring at her.

Whether from heat or exhaustion, her tongue was hanging out as she panted, and her tail was wagging enthusiastically.

Yin Lingzhu now understood where that loud noise had come from.

There had been a decorative vase on her bedroom table, which was now in pieces on the floor.

Her room was now a complete mess.

She had left in a hurry this morning and forgotten to close the wardrobe door, which was now wide open, with clothes and pants scattered all over the floor.

The pillow that had fallen to the floor also showed cotton stuffing coming out.

Looking at the bed, Yin Lingzhu nearly couldn't catch her breath.

The mattress had also been chewed, the comforter was torn to pieces, and the bed sheets were covered with paw prints, looking like special tassels.

Looking at how the edges of the mattress had been chewed, Yin Lingzhu felt mentally exhausted.

Yan Si stood beside Yin Lingzhu, and seeing the condition of the room, she silently praised.

Good dog.

Footnotes:

¹ This chapter shows the aftermath of the gathering and reveals more about the domestic life between Yan Si and Yin Lingzhu. The puppy Niannian has destroyed Yin Lingzhu's bedroom, which creates both chaos and an opportunity for the two to interact more naturally.

² Yan Si's cooking for Yin Lingzhu represents a significant role reversal and shows her attempts to care for Yin Lingzhu despite her supposed illness.

³ The chapter ends on a humorous note with Yan Si silently approving of the puppy's destructive behavior, possibly because it creates situations where she and Yin Lingzhu need to spend more time together.