

Chapter 56-1

Looking at the room, Yan Si felt her temples throbbing with pain.

Although the room was messy, most of it was due to clothes scattered everywhere.

Thinking this way, Yan Si's gaze fixed on the bed legs.

She could be certain that this bed was definitely not suitable for sleeping anymore.

Yan Si couldn't control the smile at the corners of her mouth.

She had just been worrying about how to sleep together with Yin Lingzhu.

A ready-made opportunity had just been delivered.

Looking at the little Golden Retriever sitting in the center, she couldn't help but praise herself—buying this dog was truly the right decision.

Yin Lingzhu gently patted Niannian a few times and let her go out.

She also told Yan Si to go out.

After closing the bedroom door, Yin Lingzhu let out a deep sigh and began to resignedly clean up the clothes.

But looking at the bed mattress that was already heavily damaged, she still felt mentally exhausted.

The edges of the mattress had been chewed through, revealing the cotton stuffing inside.

Yin Lingzhu tidied up the bed and slowly lay down on it.

But she discovered that the moment she lay down, it began to shake.

When she got up to look, the bed legs had been chewed, exposing the fresh wood inside, with only a small connecting part remaining.

Yin Lingzhu held her forehead, having gained a deeper understanding of the puppy's destructive power.

She came to the living room and roughly measured the sofa's dimensions—it was just right for her to sleep on.

Yan Si was also waiting in the living room and could see Yin Lingzhu's intention.

She hurriedly came to Yin Lingzhu's side, "You're going to sleep on the sofa?"

Yan Si's tone was very shocked, making Yin Lingzhu glance at her.

"Yes, my room can't be slept in now."

Yan Si watched Yin Lingzhu carrying bedding to the sofa, feeling a bit panicked.

"No, you can't sleep on the sofa."

Yin Lingzhu put the bedding on the sofa and, hearing Yan Si's words, was a bit confused. "Why not?"

Yan Si glanced at the wind outside the window and came up with a reason, "The wind is strong outside. I'm afraid you'll catch cold sleeping in the living room."

Hearing this, Yin Lingzhu laughed out loud.

"The insulation here is very good. You don't need to worry."

Seeing that Yin Lingzhu seemed determined to sleep on the sofa, Yan Si gritted her teeth and brought out yesterday's excuse.

"Yesterday's movie was too scary. I'm still afraid."

Yin Lingzhu's hands paused in arranging the bedding. She stood up and estimated the distance from the sofa to Yan Si's bedroom.

"Then I'll move the sofa over and guard at your door."

Yin Lingzhu spoke seriously and with a very earnest tone.

Yan Si raised her head, her eyebrows furrowed, her eyes full of helplessness, "I'm still scared. I want you to keep me company."

Seeing that Yin Lingzhu still didn't agree, Yan Si hurriedly added, "Besides, the bed is definitely more comfortable than the sofa. If you get exhausted, who will take care of me?"

Yan Si looked at her with an urgent voice but sincere tone.

Hearing her words, Yin Lingzhu felt something was off.

It was true that her purpose for coming here was to take care of Yan Si, but when it came from Yan Si's mouth, it always felt very strange.

Yin Lingzhu raised her eyebrows, her eyes carrying a questioning look.

"Speaking of which, we've been here for three or four days now, but I don't think I've seen you take any medicine."

Yin Lingzhu's words made Yan Si's heart skip a beat.

She had indeed been a bit excited and carried away due to Yin Lingzhu's arrival.

Yan Si forced herself to stay calm and showed a bitter smile, "I was afraid you'd worry about me, so I've been secretly taking medicine by myself each time."

Yin Lingzhu made an "oh" sound and lowered her head to continue arranging the bedding spread on the sofa.

Seeing her like this, Yan Si felt a bit anxious.

"My phone seems to be ringing. Let me go see what's wrong."

Yan Si casually made up an excuse and returned to her bedroom.

She opened the desk drawer, where several bottles of medicine were placed inside.

But they were all unopened.

Yan Si opened them all, making them look like they had been used.

But one medicine was in blister pack form, so Yan Si had to pop out a few pills, planning to find an opportunity to throw them away later.

But now she and Yin Lingzhu were almost inseparable, and she couldn't find a chance to dispose of the pills alone.

Yan Si steeled herself, picked up her water cup, and decided to swallow these pills.

Yan Si tilted her head back, and the pills in her mouth slid down her throat.

"Yan Si!"

Yin Lingzhu pushed open the door and rushed in urgently.

Yan Si was already feeling guilty and was immediately choked.

"Cough, cough, cough." Yan Si hurriedly patted her chest.

Seeing this, Yin Lingzhu quickly stepped forward and gently patted her back, helping her catch her breath.

Seeing that Yan Si gradually stopped coughing, Yin Lingzhu finally relaxed.

"What just happened to you? Do you feel uncomfortable anywhere?" Yin Lingzhu asked urgently.

She had always disagreed with Yan Si's discharge from the hospital, and she was really afraid that Yan Si's condition would deteriorate.

Yan Si looked at her worried expression and felt a sense of satisfaction rise in her heart.

She showed a weak smile, "I'm fine. What happened? You ran over so urgently."

Yin Lingzhu saw that her complexion was indeed rosy, her lips weren't pale, and she wasn't vomiting blood or anything, so she believed her words.

"Niannian is missing." Yin Lingzhu's tone was urgent. "You go lie down on the bed now. I'll go look for her."

Yan Si was about to say she wanted to help look too, but could only see Yin Lingzhu's retreating figure.

This feeling of being treated like a porcelain doll was very uncomfortable.

Yan Si thought this way and got up to go out.

She should have known not to fake being so seriously ill.

Yan Si thought this way.

But deep down, she also knew that if she had only pretended to have a minor illness, Yin Lingzhu wouldn't have come back.

Just as Yan Si opened the apartment door, preparing to go out to look for the person and dog.

Standing at the door was Yin Lingzhu, who had just returned, holding Niannian in her arms.

Yin Lingzhu saw Yan Si's appearance and knew that Yan Si hadn't listened to her.

"Go back in." Yin Lingzhu went in and closed the door.

"Niannian ran down to the floor below." Yin Lingzhu put Niannian down.

"With such short legs, she runs quite fast."

Yan Si joked, but suddenly saw Yin Lingzhu's serious expression.

She had a bad premonition in her heart.

"I'm not at ease. You should still go to the hospital for a check-up." Yin Lingzhu's brow was tightly furrowed, her face showing worry.

Yan Si couldn't say now that she had been choked, but she also couldn't argue with Yin Lingzhu.

Already sitting in the car, Yan Si still wasn't giving up.

"Do we really have to go?" Yan Si's tone carried a last bit of hope.

If Yin Lingzhu disagreed, she could immediately get out of the car and return to the apartment.

Yin Lingzhu ignored her earnest gaze, "We definitely have to go. This is for your safety."

Seeing that she really couldn't persuade her, Yin Lingzhu could only deflate and lean back against the seat.

"Then let's make a deal. If there's nothing wrong with my body, you'll sleep in my room tonight."

Yin Lingzhu nodded, "Don't worry. You've said this so many times, I won't forget."

Footnotes:

¹ This chapter shows Yan Si's increasingly desperate attempts to get closer to Yin Lingzhu, including allowing the puppy to destroy the bedroom to create a situation where they'd have to share a bed.

² Yan Si's panic about taking medicine reveals how her fake illness scheme is becoming more complicated to maintain, especially when she actually has to swallow pills to keep up the pretense.

³ The chapter demonstrates the irony of Yan Si's situation—she wants Yin Lingzhu's care and attention, but the very illness she's faking prevents her from being treated as an equal and creates barriers between them.
