

Chapter 57-1

Yin Lingzhu's eyes widened slightly, but she quickly regained her composure. "Miss Ming, you need evidence when making accusations."

Ming Qingyun smiled, her eyes carrying a hint of confidence.

She placed several documents in front of Yin Lingzhu.

"These are her physical condition reports from before she got cancer. Don't you think the changes happened rather quickly?"

Ming Qingyun's tone was seductive, each word striking Yin Lingzhu's heart, making it tremble.

Yin Lingzhu looked at the papers showing normal indicators across all categories, and secretly clenched her fists.

When she raised her head, she had already returned to her usual composure.

"I've seen Yan Si's diagnosis reports." Yin Lingzhu's voice was steady as she met Ming Qingyun's eyes. "I'm afraid more information would be needed."

Ming Qingyun had anticipated her attitude.

"I also have an audio recording, but you need to tell me something first."

Ming Qingyun stared intently at Yin Lingzhu, "Do you still like her?"

The air fell silent at this moment.

Both parties seemed able to hear each other's heartbeats.

Yin Lingzhu met her gaze without flinching.

"No, I don't."

Getting the answer she wanted, Ming Qingyun was in a great mood.

Her finger moved slightly, and she began playing the recording.

Inside was a conversation between You Xiaoxiao and Yan Si.

"This is what they said yesterday when you were outside."

Yin Lingzhu lowered her eyes, carefully listening to the content of the recording.

The recording was only about a minute long, but its contents surprised Yin Lingzhu.

After listening to the last second, Yin Lingzhu's heart was in turmoil.

But she didn't show it on her face.

"How did you record this?"

Yin Lingzhu looked at her, her tone carrying a faint questioning tone.

Ming Qingyun sent the audio file to Yin Lingzhu.

"Take it and go ask Yan Si. See how she responds."

Ming Qingyun looked at her with a slight smile, her tone full of confidence.

She interlaced her fingers in front of her face, staring intently at Yin Lingzhu.

Yin Lingzhu looked at the file on her phone, feeling very conflicted inside.

Ming Qingyun's words had precisely struck her inner doubts.

She had always felt that Yan Si's illness had come too suspiciously.

Yin Lingzhu stood up and nodded slightly at Ming Qingyun.

"Thank you."

Ming Qingyun showed her a smile.

"Good luck."

After Yin Lingzhu left, Gu Qi¹ came to Ming Qingyun.

"So happy?"

Gu Qi looked at her teasingly.

Ming Qingyun was indeed very happy inside.

"What will Yan Si do this time?"

Ming Qingyun murmured softly, revealing a hint of schadenfreude.

She knew that this time, Yan Si couldn't escape.

After leaving, Yin Lingzhu didn't immediately return to the apartment but bought groceries first.

When she arrived at the apartment, Yan Si had already finished the breakfast she had made and was obediently waiting for her.

Yan Si carefully observed Yin Lingzhu, not wanting to miss any of her expressions.

Yin Lingzhu showed her a smile that looked the same as usual, with no difference at all.

This made Yan Si feel somewhat at ease.

Yin Lingzhu's departure this morning had been too mysterious, making her feel a bit uneasy.

But Yin Lingzhu's current behavior made Yan Si think she might be overthinking.

Yin Lingzhu put the groceries in the kitchen, took out her phone, and after hesitating for a long time, put it back in her pocket.

Her gaze fell on the groceries she had bought—at least she should finish this meal, otherwise it would be a waste.

Thinking this way, she began to organize the groceries she had just bought.

Footnotes:

² This chapter shows Yin Lingzhu's internal conflict as she grapples with evidence that Yan Si has been lying about her illness, while trying to maintain normalcy when she returns home.

³ The recording mentioned contains a conversation between You Xiaoxiao and Yan Si that would expose their conspiracy to fake the medical reports.

⁴ Yin Lingzhu's decision to cook one more meal before confronting Yan Si shows her conflicted feelings—despite the betrayal, she still cares about Yan Si on some level.
