

Chapter 63-2

Yin Lingzhu swayed as she stood outside, while the two people beside her were nervous, afraid that Yin Lingzhu might fall.

The wind at the restaurant entrance brought waves of coolness.

Yin Lingzhu felt her mind clear up a little.

The world in front of her seemed to return to its original appearance. She held her head and looked around.

When she saw Yan Si, she frowned and opened her mouth, but said nothing.

Her headache told her that she had drunk too much tonight, exceeding what her body could handle.

Yin Lingzhu was very clear that she couldn't get back to her place alone right now.

She thought about who she could ask for help, but the alcohol was still taking effect, and she couldn't think of anyone.

The drowsy feeling in her head made it impossible for her to think carefully about what to do.

She glanced to the side and noticed that Ming Qingyun was also there.

It seemed that these were the only two people she could turn to for help right now.

But to be honest, she didn't want to choose either of these two people.

Perhaps due to the alcohol, Yin Lingzhu felt her head getting more and more painful and dizzy.

While her consciousness still existed before fainting, Yin Lingzhu put her hand on Ming Qingyun's arm.

"Take me back to the hotel."

Ming Qingyun reached out just in time to catch Yin Lingzhu who was about to collapse to the ground.

Yan Si looked at Yin Lingzhu in Ming Qingyun's arms and clenched her hands.

As Ming Qingyun was holding Yin Lingzhu and about to leave, Yan Si stopped her.

"I'll take her back." Yan Si looked at Ming Qingyun, the sharpness in her eyes completely revealed.

Ming Qingyun dodged Yan Si's hand, "Don't trouble yourself."

Yan Si's hand fell on Ming Qingyun's shoulder, blocking Ming Qingyun's forward movement.

Yan Si's voice was resolute, "I'll take her."

But Ming Qingyun wouldn't back down either. She showed a cold smile, "Lingzhu said to let me do it."

Yan Si looked at Yin Lingzhu in Ming Qingyun's arms, and her hand on Ming Qingyun's shoulder fell resignedly.

She watched Ming Qingyun's back, her nails leaving deep marks in her palm.

She watched as Ming Qingyun took Yin Lingzhu and got into a car.

Yan Si also turned and got into a car, instructing the driver to follow the car Ming Qingyun was riding in.

Ming Qingyun saw the car following her from the rear window, but she didn't react much.

In her view, Yin Lingzhu had chosen her over Yan Si—this time Yan Si had already lost.

Looking at Yin Lingzhu lying beside her, Ming Qingyun was in an exceptionally good mood.

In contrast, Yan Si's heart was overwhelmed with bitter emotions.

She knew that her current behavior had no meaning, but she just wanted to do it.

Staring at the rear of the car in front, she rubbed the back of her hand.

When her hand had been injured by the door, she would gently rub the bruised areas.

Even though it had healed now, this action had become a habit.

The subtle sensation on the back of her hand brought an itchy feeling.

Two black luxury cars drove through the late night, one behind the other.

When they reached the hotel entrance, Ming Qingyun got out of the car first, then carried Yin Lingzhu out.

Yan Si watched Ming Qingyun's actions and wanted to intervene, but couldn't find an appropriate reason.

She could only watch helplessly from the side.

Like an outsider.

Yin Lingzhu's room card was in her pocket, making it very convenient to find.

Ming Qingyun carried Yin Lingzhu to the bed and hesitated for a long time about whether to help Yin Lingzhu bathe.

In the end, Ming Qingyun gave up.

She knew that Yin Lingzhu still had some resistance toward her.

If it weren't for the fact that Yin Lingzhu really disliked Yan Si right now, it wouldn't have been her turn tonight.

Moreover, she also wanted to have a fair competition with Yan Si.

When Ming Qingyun left the hotel room, she closed the door very quietly.

Yan Si was already waiting outside.

Seeing Ming Qingyun come out, she snorted.

Ming Qingyun rolled her eyes at her.

The next day, when Yin Lingzhu regained consciousness, her head felt like it was splitting apart, making it impossible for her to open her eyes.

Even so, her body still made her remember what had happened the night before.

After recalling the entire process, Yin Lingzhu covered her eyes.

How could this happen? She shouldn't have drunk that cup of wine.

She hadn't been regretting for long when she heard her phone ring.

Yin Lingzhu picked it up and saw it was Yang Daiyi calling.

She immediately answered.

As her agent, Yang Daiyi generally didn't call her—when she did call, it meant there was work.

Sure enough, Yang Daiyi was talking about work.

Yang Daiyi had negotiated a variety show for her, one of the currently popular programs.

Yin Lingzhu had heard of this show.

Each season had eight guests: two Alphas, four Betas, and two Omegas.

The people invited included actors, singers, idols, and the like.

However, regardless of their profession, they were generally quite famous people, which would create discussion topics from the beginning.

This was also the reason this show could stay popular.

Thinking of this, Yin Lingzhu squinted her eyes.

Through the speaker, Yang Daiyi's voice hadn't stopped yet—she was still describing in detail the benefits of Yin Lingzhu appearing on this show.

Yin Lingzhu interrupted her, "Sister Yang, who gave you this show?"
