

Chapter 66-1

Yin Lingzhu moved slightly, trying to rely solely on feeling to identify who this person was.

She turned her head to face that person and lifted her head up.

But she still couldn't tell who this person was.

Yin Lingzhu tentatively stretched out one hand and touched that person's clothing.

The feeling at her fingertips made Yin Lingzhu relax a little.

Earlier, the production team had given them five minutes, and she had used this time to memorize the fabric characteristics of everyone's clothing.

The person she had just touched should be Wan Miaoyin.

When the director announced this game, she had already thought of her plan.

Wan Miaoyin should team up with the Beta she had feelings for.

And her partner should be one of those three Betas.

So Wan Miaoyin coming to her side should mean she hadn't found that Beta.

But what Yin Lingzhu didn't know was that in the room now, except for the two of them, everyone else had already more or less formed partnerships.

The focus of the entire venue was on the two of them.

【I'm not trying to ship them, they're forcing me to ship them by putting their heads together.】

【These two definitely have something going on, you can't convince me otherwise.】

【Stop with your assumptions, it's obviously just a coincidence.】

【How could it be a coincidence? Miaoyin went around the room, could have paired with almost anyone, but she left this for last.】

【Right, Miaoyin has been looking for Zhuzhu all along.】

Yin Lingzhu was currently thinking that Wan Miaoyin was looking for that Beta, so she moved aside a little to make room.

But what she didn't expect was that Wan Miaoyin seemed to be following her.

When she moved to the side, she could hear that Wan Miaoyin also seemed to be moving with her.

At first, Yin Lingzhu was a bit doubtful, afraid that her feeling was wrong, so she moved aside again.

What she didn't expect was that Wan Miaoyin's footsteps were also getting closer to her.

Now she could be certain—Wan Miaoyin was indeed following her.

This made Yin Lingzhu feel somewhat uncertain.

Since the game rules stated they couldn't make noise, she had no way to signal to Wan Miaoyin.

Hearing the sounds of other pairs successfully partnering up one after another, Yin Lingzhu felt a bit anxious.

Wan Miaoyin must have mistaken her for that Beta.

But she had no way now to prove who she was.

The fear brought by darkness was constantly eroding her at this moment.

Yin Lingzhu pressed her head against the wall, trying to restore some rationality to her mind.

But there was no time left now, Yin Lingzhu thought to herself.

According to the game rules, if you didn't successfully hold hands at the end, the person closest to you would be designated as your partner.

She could clearly hear the countdown signaling the game was about to end.

"Five, four, three, two, one."

As "one" fell, Yin Lingzhu felt a sense of "let it be" arise in her heart.

Hearing the director say the game was over, her hand immediately grabbed the blindfold and pulled it off forcefully.

Light returned to her vision, and Yin Lingzhu's heart settled down.

Only then did she notice that there was another person's hand on the blindfold.

She followed that hand upward with her gaze and indeed saw that familiar face.

Wan Miaoyin smiled at her with curved eyes, "Tomorrow we'll be partners. Please take care of me."

Yin Lingzhu's lips also curved into a smile, "Let's work hard together tomorrow."

【Ahhhhh, these two are giving me so much cuteness overload, I'm dead.】

【Who says they're not? Did you guys see that move with the blindfold?】

【I saw it, I saw it, saw it with both eyes. It's just a blindfold, why are you getting so excited?】

【Just ignore that person, they've been looking for attention since the show started. How unhappy must their life be?】

【By the way, wasn't Zhuzhu's condition off after putting on the blindfold?】

【I noticed that too. Everyone else went looking for partners first, but Zhuzhu just leaned against the wall and didn't move.】

During dinner, Yin Lingzhu looked at Wan Miaoyin sitting beside her, "Did you not find the person you were looking for?"

Wan Miaoyin smiled gently, "No, I found her."

Yin Lingzhu looked at her in surprise, "Then you—"

She didn't finish her sentence, but Wan Miaoyin knew what she wanted to say next.

"I knew where she was, but there wasn't enough time left, and I couldn't get over there."

Yin Lingzhu nodded, naturally interpreting this to mean that Wan Miaoyin was too far from that Beta.

"What tasks will the production team assign us tomorrow?"

Yin Lingzhu wondered, unconsciously asking out loud.

"This season, the director seems to have changed styles. Who knows?"

Wan Miaoyin answered gently.

【What do they mean by this?】

【I think I vaguely understand—the director probably didn't tell them, right?】

【Exciting, the director seems to be playing something big.】

【Wow, then this is really authentic.】

【Come on, how is that possible? It's all just acting. How could they not know?】

【Looking at their reactions, they really seem not to know.】

【Sure, sure, you understand everything again.】

【Hey you, what's with the sarcasm? Why so much hostility? Just stop watching.】

The bullet comments started fighting again.

The director looked at the ratings, which were much higher than previous seasons, and grinned from ear to ear.

Thinking about the game they had just played, Yin Lingzhu couldn't help but feel afraid.

If there were a few more games with blindfolds, she would probably have to quit this show.

Her fear of darkness was beyond what ordinary people could imagine.

Yin Lingzhu frowned, still feeling some lingering fear about the game segment they had just played.

Footnotes:

¹ Zhuzhu (竹子): A cute nickname for Yin Lingzhu, where "竹" (bamboo) from her name is doubled to create an affectionate diminutive, commonly used by fans in bullet comments.