

Chapter 69-2

Yin Lingzhu noticed her movement and also quickened her pace.

She reached Yan Si's side in just a few steps.

The person in front of her was wearing a black baseball cap and a black mask.

Moreover, her head was lowered very low, making it completely impossible to see her face clearly.

Yin Lingzhu tentatively greeted her, "Hello."

The person in front of her didn't even lift her head, just nodded to indicate she had heard.

Yin Lingzhu frowned slightly, but still wore a smile on her face.

"You look a bit like someone I used to know."

Yin Lingzhu stated her purpose for coming here.

"May I see your face?"

After saying this, Yin Lingzhu suddenly realized her words were a bit abrupt.

"Sorry, I was being presumptuous."

Yin Lingzhu quickly said.

"Well, if there's nothing else, I'll be going."

After Yin Lingzhu finished her last word, she left Yan Si's side as if fleeing.

Yan Si lowered her head and could only see Yin Lingzhu's feet. When she noticed Yin Lingzhu leaving, Yan Si's hand started to lift but then lowered again.

Being able to be this close to her was already very satisfying.

Yan Si thought this and lifted her head.

Yin Lingzhu felt a bit embarrassed in her heart. She had approached a stranger for no reason and said a bunch of things.

In the end, she had fled in panic.

Wan Miaoyin saw Yin Lingzhu return and asked, "Do you know her?"

Hearing Wan Miaoyin's question, Yin Lingzhu shook her head.

"I don't know her, just felt she looked a bit familiar."

But thinking about the person's reaction just now, Yin Lingzhu dismissed that thought.

"Maybe I mistook her for someone else."

Wan Miaoyin didn't know whether she believed this or not. Her voice was very soft, but just loud enough for Yin Lingzhu to hear.

"I also think she looks quite familiar, a bit like that person, Yan Si."

The last two words, Wan Miaoyin spoke very slowly and quietly, but they tugged at Yin Lingzhu's heart.

She had also felt that person was like Yan Si, which was why she had gone over.

But thinking about it now, she had been overthinking.

Just then, Yin Lingzhu suddenly heard several dog barks.

She instinctively looked over and saw a Golden Retriever running around in broad daylight.

A group of people were chasing after it.

The Golden Retriever ran straight toward Yin Lingzhu, its four paws moving swiftly.

Before Yin Lingzhu could react, she found the Golden Retriever had wrapped its paws around her legs.

She looked down and carefully examined this Golden Retriever that had suddenly appeared.

The Golden Retriever raised its head, tongue hanging out, looking like it was smiling. Its fur also looked glossy and smooth—clearly well-cared for by its owner.

Perhaps this dog had mistaken her for its owner.

Yin Lingzhu thought this and was about to put the dog's paws down.

She felt this little dog looked somewhat familiar when she touched its paws.

But she didn't think much of it. How could Yan Si's dog possibly be here?

Yan Si below the stage felt a wave of panic when she saw the dog run out.

Niannian¹ was growing bigger and could potentially destroy the house if left at home, and keeping it cooped up all the time wasn't good for its health either.

So when Yan Si went out, she always brought it along.

When she came here today, she had already handed Niannian over to her bodyguards.

How could Niannian be here?

Yan Si was puzzled and could only hope that Yin Lingzhu wouldn't pay attention.

Her eyes were fixed on the area around Yin Lingzhu, hoping nothing would go wrong.

Yin Lingzhu looked at the Golden Retriever that kept nuzzling her legs, its tail wagging happily, and was inexplicably infected by its mood.

She rubbed the Golden Retriever's big head.

The Golden Retriever also happily nuzzled her palm.

It couldn't be such a coincidence, could it?

Yin Lingzhu felt the texture in her palm—the soft fur felt very comfortable in her hands.

She tentatively called out "Niannian."

The Golden Retriever immediately let out a whine from its throat.

Yin Lingzhu crouched down, looked into the Golden Retriever's eyes, and felt a familiar sensation in her heart.

Combined with what had just happened, that thought surfaced in her mind again.

"Niannian?"

Yin Lingzhu called out tentatively again.

"Woof woof."

The Golden Retriever nuzzled Yin Lingzhu's hand again, its tail still wagging happily.

Just as Yin Lingzhu was almost certain this big Golden Retriever was Niannian all grown up, several people wearing sunglasses and black suits suddenly appeared and stood in front of her.

"Hello, this is our master's dog. Please return it to us."

After hearing this, Yin Lingzhu spread both hands outward.

But her legs were still being held by the Golden Retriever's paws.

Yin Lingzhu even specifically bent her knees, "It's not that I don't want to let go—it's the one that won't stop clinging to me."

The lead bodyguard looked at Yin Lingzhu's legs and originally wanted to forcibly take the Golden Retriever away.

But as soon as he approached, the Golden Retriever bared its teeth and let out an angry growl from its throat.

The bodyguard's hand immediately froze.

He didn't dare forcibly take the Golden Retriever away, afraid of hurting it.

The bodyguard had no choice but to look toward the area below the stage. Yin Lingzhu noticed this and also looked down.

But because the bodyguard was wearing sunglasses, she couldn't clearly see exactly who he was looking at—only a general direction.

Yin Lingzhu wanted to know if this Golden Retriever's owner was Yan Si.

But there were many people below the stage, mostly staff members who didn't look like they could afford bodyguards.

Yin Lingzhu thought this quietly to herself.

Yan Si also noticed Yin Lingzhu's gaze. Her whole body didn't dare move, afraid that Yin Lingzhu would notice something was wrong.

Seeing that Yan Si said nothing, the bodyguard had no choice but to give up.

He gestured to the other bodyguards, and several people left in a grand procession.

Yin Lingzhu hadn't expected them to leave so easily.

She looked down at the dog beside her legs, feeling helpless.

The Golden Retriever seemed to understand what had happened. It sat on the ground, raised its head with its mouth open, looking like it was smiling.

Yin Lingzhu looked at it, then at her pants. The lower leg area was beyond salvage—covered in scratch marks and dust.

She vented by vigorously rubbing the Golden Retriever's head.

Wan Miaoyin had been standing nearby without speaking, and only now did she come forward.

"What do you plan to do with this dog?"
