

Chapter 76-2

In the room, Yan Si sat beside Yin Lingzhu, quietly watching her.

Why, why had she been so ridiculously wrong in the past?

Yan Si wanted to hold Yin Lingzhu's hand, but didn't dare to actually grasp it. She only dared to place her hand lightly over Yin Lingzhu's.

Not knowing how much time had passed, Yan Si noticed Yin Lingzhu's eyelids flutter, as if she was about to wake up.

Panic rose in Yan Si's heart. She immediately stood up, and before Yin Lingzhu could wake, she quickly left the room.

After leaving the room, she realized it had already grown dark.

She had been with Yin Lingzhu for more than four hours, but her heart still felt unsatisfied.

Originally, she had only wanted to see her once today, but now she was becoming more and more greedy.

Yan Si slowly walked outside, step by step moving away from her beloved.

In the room, Yin Lingzhu slowly opened her eyes. She first looked around the room but didn't find any other figures.

Yin Lingzhu didn't know what she was feeling. As she withdrew her gaze, she suddenly noticed the bedside.

That chair was conspicuously placed there.

Yin Lingzhu suddenly smiled. Yan Si, still unchanged in her stubborn ways.

She slowly got up, touching the back of her neck.

Gradually touching a slightly raised soft area, Yin Lingzhu closed her eyes, waiting for the lingering pain to pass.

After that time coming down from the machine¹, she had developed some aftereffects.

Every time she used her glands to release pheromones, her body would experience inexplicable pain.

An indescribable, unclear pain.

After the pain passed, she lowered her weakened hand.

This was still better than losing her life.

She thought to herself, got out of bed to put the chair back properly, and glanced at the clock on the wall, discovering it was dinner time.

On Wan Miaoyin's first day here, she had made an agreement with her to eat meals together every day.

At the time, she had even joked, "How is this still like when we were in school, having to eat together?"

But the production team had taken away their phones, so Yin Lingzhu planned to go to the assigned room to find Wan Miaoyin.

Arriving at Wan Miaoyin's room door, Yin Lingzhu knocked and patiently waited for Wan Miaoyin to come out.

But after an unknown amount of time, Wan Miaoyin still hadn't emerged.

Yin Lingzhu knocked a few more times. "Miaoyin, are you there?"

There was no response from inside. Yin Lingzhu thought Wan Miaoyin wasn't in her room and was about to leave.

But just as she turned around, she suddenly heard an "ah" sound from inside.

Yin Lingzhu immediately recognized this as Wan Miaoyin's voice. "What's wrong? Are you okay?"

"I'm fine, just wait a moment." Wan Miaoyin's voice was hurried, and she sounded a bit flustered.

This made Yin Lingzhu's heart feel anxious. Had something really happened?

As Yin Lingzhu waited anxiously, Wan Miaoyin came out in a fluster, her breathing also somewhat rapid.

"Let's go." Wan Miaoyin smiled at Yin Lingzhu and said.

Yin Lingzhu pointed at Wan Miaoyin's pants. Wan Miaoyin looked down and discovered that her pant legs had somehow gotten tucked into her socks.

She hurriedly crouched down to fix her clothing.

"Alright, let's go."

Wan Miaoyin stood up and said again.

But Yin Lingzhu stood in place, unwilling to move. "What's wrong with you today?"

Yin Lingzhu said with a furrowed brow, puzzled.

Seeing Yin Lingzhu's serious expression, Wan Miaoyin suddenly laughed.

"Come on, nothing happened to me. You're overthinking it."

As she spoke, Wan Miaoyin linked arms with Yin Lingzhu.

She gently swayed back and forth. "You must be hungry too. Let's go eat."
