

Chapter 78-1

Wan Miaoyin didn't hesitate at all and chose the badge.

She clipped the badge to her right arm and smiled at Yin Lingzhu. "Then please take good care of me."

Yin Lingzhu also smiled at her and put away the water gun.

"I guarantee to complete the mission."

If they wanted to win the final victory, they had to eliminate all the other teams.

Yin Lingzhu looked around at the environment and first had Wan Miaoyin hide in a nearby room.

She went outside to scout the other teams.

But Yin Lingzhu didn't dare to leave Wan Miaoyin too far away. If other teams found Wan Miaoyin, that would be very bad.

So she just took a general look, and after finding out who had the badges, she immediately returned to Wan Miaoyin's side.

Yin Lingzhu returned to the room and locked the door from the inside.

She had just seen one team - the Beta that Wan Miaoyin liked.

And she also saw that Wan Miaoyin's crush was also wearing a badge.

She told Wan Miaoyin this news.

"If we end up facing off against them, should we go easy on her?" Yin Lingzhu crouched in front of Wan Miaoyin and said seriously.

Wan Miaoyin looked down at her. "Go easy on her? You really have confidence in your own abilities."

Thinking of that person she had dragged along as a shield¹, she couldn't help but laugh.

"Maybe she'll be the one going easy on you."

Yin Lingzhu raised an eyebrow, showing complete confidence.

"Of course, after all, my body is in great shape."

The smile at the corner of Yin Lingzhu's mouth looked particularly attractive.

She took the water gun out of her pocket, pressed her index finger on the trigger, and aimed at the camera that had been following them.

Yin Lingzhu squinted her eyes, not bothering to manage the hair that fell in front of her face.

Her index finger pressed lightly, and a stream of water shot straight toward the lens.

Just as the cameraman was feeling sorry for his lens, he suddenly discovered that there wasn't a single water mark showing on the screen.

He thought Yin Lingzhu had missed her shot.

Yin Lingzhu noticed the cameraman's facial expression and pointed at his shoes.

The cameraman looked down and discovered that his pant legs were completely soaked.

But there wasn't a single drop of water on the ground.

At the same time, everyone watching the livestream also realized what had happened.

[Just now when Bamboo² held it up, I thought she was holding a real gun.]

[Such flashy colors, such cheap plastic, yet it has more presence than metal.]

[But Bamboo sprayed it at the guy's shoes.]

[I originally thought Yin Lingzhu was a good person, but I didn't expect she'd be someone who likes to mess with people. Unfollowing.]

Wan Miaoyin had also been seriously watching Yin Lingzhu show off, but when she saw the cameraman's expression, she also realized something was wrong.

She frowned, feeling a bit worried.

But Yin Lingzhu suddenly covered her mouth, looking surprised at the cameraman's shoes.

"I'm so sorry, I didn't see that just now."

Yin Lingzhu scratched her head. "How about you go change your shoes first?"

The cameraman glared hard at Yin Lingzhu, but the wet, cold feeling on his feet forced him to leave.

Watching his departing figure, Yin Lingzhu gradually withdrew her gaze.

"Why did you spray water on his shoes?"

Wan Miaoyin asked, not understanding.

Yin Lingzhu smiled. "I just didn't aim properly."

Wan Miaoyin obviously didn't believe her explanation.

But she could also see that Yin Lingzhu didn't want to say more right now.

"Alright." Wan Miaoyin sighed lightly.

After that cameraman left, the remaining cameramen looked at their equipment with care.

They also distanced themselves from Yin Lingzhu.

Yin Lingzhu looked at them with amusement. "Don't worry, I won't spray you guys."

But obviously, they didn't really believe what Yin Lingzhu said.

Yin Lingzhu didn't force them to believe her either.

She shrugged her shoulders and shook her head helplessly at Wan Miaoyin.

Wan Miaoyin met her gaze, her eyes showing a hint of amusement.

"Let's focus on how to win instead." She looked at Yin Lingzhu and said.

Yin Lingzhu also nodded, no longer looking at the cameramen.

But since they currently knew too little information, they had no choice but to leave this safe house.

Yin Lingzhu walked in front of Wan Miaoyin.

This way, she could immediately discover any situations.

Due to the production team's setup and all the running around in the building, they basically had to change clothes every hour.

Therefore, Yin Lingzhu looked at her watch and roughly calculated the timing.

It was almost time to change clothes.

Yin Lingzhu smiled and led Wan Miaoyin to wait for the perfect opportunity³.

Footnotes:

¹ Shield: Wan Miaoyin is referring to using someone as a decoy or distraction, suggesting she has been manipulating the Beta she's supposedly interested in.

² Bamboo: This is Yin Lingzhu's nickname used by viewers/fans, likely derived from the "zhu" (竹) character in her name which means bamboo.

³ Wait for the perfect opportunity: This is a reference to the Chinese idiom "守株待兔" (wait by a tree stump for rabbits), meaning to wait passively for an opportunity rather than actively seeking it. Here, Yin Lingzhu is planning to ambush other teams when they're changing clothes and vulnerable.