

Chapter 84-2

The director looked at Wan Miaoyin's angry face and chose to do nothing.

He had looked into Wan Miaoyin's background, and combined with Wan Miaoyin's performance over the past few days.

He was gambling. He was betting that Wan Miaoyin wouldn't dare to do anything inappropriate.

Wan Miaoyin glanced at the director. Seeing that he wasn't moving, her usually gentle face showed a cold expression.

"Smash them. I'll pay for the damages."

Wan Miaoyin looked at the cameras and instructed Wang Qingran.

Wang Qingran also knew she had done something wrong before and wanted to make up for it as much as possible. She didn't hold back at all when she started.

In less than two minutes, the cameras around Wang Qingran were scattered on the ground in twos and threes.

Some cameramen tried to resist, but their fate was to have their cameras ruthlessly kicked to the ground.

Wang Qingran looked at Wan Miaoyin with an inquiring gaze.

Wan Miaoyin kicked the lens fragments at her feet and saw that the director still hadn't moved.

"Go ahead."

The director watched Wang Qingran walking toward him with steady steps. Thinking of Wang Qingran's fighting skills, he could only compromise.

"Fine, I'll turn it off, okay?" the director said helplessly.

The director gritted his teeth and looked at the person beside him. "Cut the live stream connection."

Only then did Wan Miaoyin let Wang Qingran stop. Her eyes were now filled with cold light.

Wang Qingran turned around and met Wan Miaoyin's gaze.

She naturally knew that the emotion in Wan Miaoyin's eyes was directed at her.

"Miss, I—"

Wang Qingran was just about to explain herself when she suddenly saw Wan Miaoyin raise her hand.

So Wang Qingran wisely shut her mouth.

The director was also regretting in his heart why he had taken those people's money and let them into the security department.

Now look what happened—one person came and took down all of them.

The director saw Wan Miaoyin getting closer and closer to him, and his heart became more and more terrified.

"Director, Wang Qingran and I have some matters to handle, so we won't keep you company."

Wan Miaoyin's voice was gentle, but the director didn't dare say much more.

"Alright, as you wish."

He thought that after saying this, Wan Miaoyin would leave.

But the director discovered that Wan Miaoyin hadn't left at all; instead, she was getting closer.

Under the director's horrified gaze, Wan Miaoyin showed a smile and extended her hand.

"Director, where is my phone?"

Wan Miaoyin's smile was sweet, but in the director's eyes, it was like a devil's.

"But our program regulations—" the director said weakly, trying to say something for himself.

The moment Wan Miaoyin heard the director speak, the smile on her face suddenly disappeared.

"So what the director means is that I can't get my phone back?"

Wan Miaoyin lowered her brows and eyes, her voice carrying a tone of mockery.

"No, what I mean is, I didn't say you couldn't take it."

The director unconsciously started using meeting jargon.

But Wan Miaoyin really didn't want to engage with his nonsense. "Then please, director, bring me my phone."

The director made an "uh" sound.

Wan Miaoyin could see that the director was unwilling to give her the phone.

"I'll say it one more time. Give it to me."

The director originally wanted to use circular reasoning to fool Wan Miaoyin.

But when he saw Wang Qingran, he suddenly didn't dare say anything more.

"Alright, alright, alright, Miss Wan, I'll take you there."

The director said bitterly.

When Wan Miaoyin saw her phone, she realized why the director was unwilling to give it to her.

Before participating in this variety show, in order not to let her persona¹ collapse in front of Yin Lingzhu.

All her belongings had been replaced, naturally including her phone.

Wan Miaoyin remembered that when she handed it to the production team, it was still a brand new phone.

But what was now placed on the table was a phone with an obviously dusty case and a cracked screen.

The key thing was that the phone screen was still lit, brazenly displaying the phone's desktop.

Wan Miaoyin's gaze slid over the phone. "Director, what's going on here?"

The director didn't dare look up. "I left all of your phones with the staff to manage. I don't know either."

The emotion in Wan Miaoyin's eyes spread like a storm.

Suddenly, she smiled.

"Wang Qingran, take the phone. Let's go."

Only when the director knew the two had gone far did he dare to raise his head.

He angrily punched the table.

"Where are the security guards? Are they just eating for nothing? Find them all for me."

The person closest to him hurried toward the security office.

"Miss, this phone is like this. Why do you still want it?"

Wang Qingran asked in confusion.

They were now in a secluded café.

There weren't many people, but it was very quiet.

Wan Miaoyin looked at the phone and shook her head slightly.

"I didn't expect that people under Yan Si would do such things."

Wan Miaoyin's voice was very low. Wang Qingran didn't hear clearly, and obvious confusion appeared on her face.

"Miss, what did you say?"

Wan Miaoyin rolled her eyes at her. "Call my dad and tell him I'm being bullied."

¹ Persona: In Chinese internet culture, this refers to a public image or character that someone presents, especially celebrities or internet personalities. Wan Miaoyin had created a specific image for herself that she didn't want to break in front of Yin Lingzhu.