

Chapter 84-3

In the café.

Only the sound of Wang Qingran making phone calls could be heard.

Wan Miaoyin looked at Wang Qingran and sighed.

If it weren't for the fact that Wang Qingran had been by her side the longest and was the best at fighting.

Otherwise, how could she have brought such a person who couldn't read the room here?

She had just come out of the hospital, angry enough to want to beat Wang Qingran until she had the same injuries as Yin Lingzhu.

But thinking about it now, she decided to let it go.

Wang Qingran had low emotional intelligence—didn't she already know this?

While Wan Miaoyin's thoughts were wandering, Wang Qingran had already finished her phone call.

"Miss, President Wan¹ seems very angry."

Wan Miaoyin propped her chin up with her arm. "He's angry— isn't that what should happen?"

"What I'm worried about now is how to face Lingzhu."

At the same time, Yin Lingzhu's consciousness was gradually recovering.

She opened her eyes and immediately saw the people sitting on either side of her bed.

When she saw Yan Si, her heart felt something indescribable.

Yin Lingzhu asked Yan Si, "Where is Miaoyin?"

Yan Si was stunned for a moment, not expecting that the first thing Yin Lingzhu would say would be this.

She still answered the question: "When she saw you in this hospital room, she suddenly left."

"I don't know where she went either."

Yin Lingzhu nodded. "Thank you."

The hospital room fell into an eerie silence.

Yin Lingzhu lay on the hospital bed, staring straight at the ceiling.

Yan Si and Ming Qingyun just watched her like this.

Time passed—who knows how long—until a nurse came in to change the IV drip, finally ending this weird atmosphere.

"Please pay attention to the patient's dinner tonight."

The nurse's words seemed to wake up these two people.

"Alright, I'll go right away," Yan Si immediately stood up and said seriously.

Ming Qingyun wasn't to be outdone either.

"I'll also make preparations."

The nurse looked at the two of them suspiciously. In her view, neither of these two seemed like normal people.

One was wearing a suit, the other a long dress. They didn't look like they were in a hospital; they looked like they were at a fashion show.

The nurse lowered her head. "Miss Yin, if you need anything, you can press the call button at any time."

Yin Lingzhu nodded with a smile on her face.

Only after the nurse had repeatedly reminded them did she leave the hospital room.

"President Yan, President Ming, if you don't have other matters, I still have things to do."

Yin Lingzhu propped herself up with her arm, leaning against the wall.

Seeing her movement, Yan Si instinctively wanted to help her, but when her outstretched hand received no response, she could only withdraw it.

Yan Si made an "mm" sound. "It's already late now. After you eat dinner, I'll leave."

Seeing that Yan Si had spoken first, Ming Qingyun gritted her teeth.

"I'm the same. After you finish dinner, I'll leave too."

Yin Lingzhu had no particular thoughts about this result.

If they wanted to stay, let them stay.

Thinking this, she picked up the remote control in her hand and turned on the TV.

In the current hospital room, the only thing that could attract Yin Lingzhu was the TV in front of her.

After the production team had taken away her phone, her life had become utterly joyless.

She lived like an ascetic monk, cut off from entertainment and electronic devices.

Now that she finally had a chance to reconnect with electronic devices, she wasn't willing to let this opportunity pass.

Yin Lingzhu treated the two people beside her as air and began watching TV with great enjoyment.

When people are bored, even watching commercials feels interesting.

This saying was fully verified in Yin Lingzhu's case.

Yan Si had already assumed an apologetic posture, but unfortunately, Yin Lingzhu was ignoring her.

She coughed lightly.

"Lingzhu, I'll go prepare dinner for you."

Yin Lingzhu's thoughts, which had been immersed in the TV drama, were pulled back by Yan Si's words.

She looked at Yan Si. "Thank you for President Yan's kind intention, but my friend is here, so there's no need to trouble you."

Both Yan Si and Ming Qingyun were stunned at the same time.

After reacting, Ming Qingyun's face showed several degrees of satisfaction, and her eyes looking at Yan Si were full of smugness.

Yan Si made a blank "oh" sound.

"I should still get you some food. Not eating dinner at night is bad for your health."

Yan Si's tone was low, carrying a sense of loneliness.

Yin Lingzhu looked at her and sighed. Just as she was about to say "okay," she was interrupted by Ming Qingyun.

"No need, President Yan. My friend—I'll take care of her myself. You should hurry up and leave."

Ming Qingyun's "leave" was said very quietly. If it weren't for considering that Yin Lingzhu was here.

She might have even wanted to use the word "get lost" directly.

After hearing Ming Qingyun say this, Yan Si glanced at Yin Lingzhu.

When she discovered that Yin Lingzhu had no reaction whatsoever, she made another "oh" sound.

Footnotes:

¹ President Wan: This refers to Wan Miaoyin's father, who is apparently the president of a company. In Chinese business culture, family members of business leaders are often referred to by their parent's title as a form of respect.