

Chapter 86-1

At the hospital entrance, with so many people coming and going, bustling about.

Yan Si saw Yin Lingzhu's reaction, and her happy expression immediately dimmed.

She had learned that Yin Lingzhu was being discharged today and had come here specifically.

She also knew that Yin Lingzhu might not be happy to see her, but she just wanted to see her.

Thinking this, Yan Si's gaze returned to Yin Lingzhu.

At this moment, Yin Lingzhu lowered her head and was talking with Wan Miaoyin.

But even after Yin Lingzhu and Wan Miaoyin left, not a single person looked in Yan Si's direction.

Yan Si lowered her head, standing in place, not knowing where to go.

Suddenly, her phone chimed with a notification.

Yan Si casually unlocked it. Her originally dejected spirit suddenly perked up.

This message was actually from Yin Lingzhu.

Yan Si hurriedly opened the chat window.

But what she saw was just a simple money transfer.

The amount exactly matched the costs incurred during Yin Lingzhu's hospitalization.

Yan Si didn't accept it.

She scrolled up through their chat history and suddenly realized that she and Yin Lingzhu had barely chatted at all.

Normal conversations rarely appeared either.

Even when getting in the car, Yan Si didn't close her phone.

She just stared at these inexplicable messages, lost in the world of the past.

The driver's "We've arrived" finally awakened her.

She looked up and discovered the driver had brought her to the downtown apartment.

Seeing that Yan Si hadn't gotten out of the car for a long time, the driver called out to her again.

"Hello, passenger, that'll be fifty yuan in total."

Yan Si snapped back to reality, paid the money, and got out.

Seeing that she had paid, the driver finally relaxed and quickly drove away.

Yan Si didn't care about the driver's reaction. Her body automatically pressed the button for the 23rd floor in the elevator.

When the elevator dinged and reached the 23rd floor, Yan Si opened the door and saw someone she hadn't expected.

"Why did you come back?"

Yan Si walked out of the elevator and asked Ji Jingrong.

Ji Jingrong also hadn't expected to run into Yan Si. Her mind went blank for a moment.

But she immediately put on a professional smile.

"My apartment is here, of course I'm here."

Ji Jingrong said smoothly.

Yan Si just nodded and didn't say much more.

She walked straight toward apartment 2316.

Ji Jingrong, who had been ignored, stood to the side, looking at Yan Si with some unwillingness in her eyes.

As soon as Yan Si opened the door, Niannian¹ pounced on her.

She bent down and petted Niannian's head.

"Niannian is such a good girl."

Just after she finished praising, seeing the messy state of the room, her heart felt incredibly complex.

"You've been destroying the house again."

Yan Si murmured and resignedly began cleaning up the room.

Yin Lingzhu and Wan Miaoyin got in the car returning to the production team.

On the road, the two of them sat in the back seat.

When Yin Lingzhu was sending messages, Wan Miaoyin naturally noticed.

From her angle, she couldn't see Yin Lingzhu's screen. "Here I am, a living person right in front of you, and you're chatting with someone else."

Wan Miaoyin said teasingly on purpose.

Yin Lingzhu had just finished transferring money to Yan Si. Hearing Wan Miaoyin's words, she turned off her phone screen.

"I was just checking the time."

Hearing such a perfunctory response, Wan Miaoyin suddenly felt hurt.

She looked at Yin Lingzhu and deliberately didn't speak.

This taxi driver was also someone who didn't like to talk, so the small car compartment suddenly became quiet.

Yin Lingzhu couldn't stand this atmosphere—she felt a bit embarrassed.

She looked at the person sitting beside her. Wan Miaoyin was looking out the window.

Yin Lingzhu coughed lightly, trying to get Wan Miaoyin's attention.

But Wan Miaoyin didn't give her any reaction at all.

Yin Lingzhu had no choice but to try to find some topics to talk about. "Miaoyin, I'm really sorry for making you sacrifice your time to accompany me again."

Only then did Wan Miaoyin look at Yin Lingzhu, her tone sour:

"Oh, you're thanking me? Just after being discharged, you're already chatting with other people."

While speaking, Wan Miaoyin even glared at Yin Lingzhu slightly. "Leaving me aside all by myself."

Yin Lingzhu hid her phone behind her back and looked at Wan Miaoyin with some guilt.

Her relationship with Yan Si couldn't be explained clearly in just a few words.

This was also thanks to the confidentiality agreement Yan Si had mentioned at the time—very few people knew the specific situation.

Yin Lingzhu didn't want to cause trouble for herself and didn't plan to tell Wan Miaoyin the truth.

"I really was just checking the time. Besides, who could I be chatting with?"

Yin Lingzhu's voice carried a tone of grievance, but Wan Miaoyin wasn't fooled.

She could be quite certain that she had just seen a chat window.

Wan Miaoyin thought calmly, looking at Yin Lingzhu's smiling face, and she smiled too.

"Alright, I was just teasing you."

Wan Miaoyin said playfully.

Seeing her return to normal, Yin Lingzhu's heart relaxed a little.

"You're not angry anymore?"

There was a hint of surprise in Yin Lingzhu's voice.

Wan Miaoyin glanced at her and said deliberately, "What? Why would I be angry?"

Yin Lingzhu realized she had said the wrong thing and quickly tried to make up for it. "No, it's just that I felt like you were angry just now."

While speaking, she was also observing Wan Miaoyin's expression.

Seeing that Wan Miaoyin's face showed no suspicion, Yin Lingzhu finally truly relaxed.

Footnotes:

¹ Niannian: A pet's name, likely a cat or small dog. In Chinese, "年年" can mean "year after year" and is often used as an auspicious name meaning continuity and good fortune.