

Chapter 86-2

When Yin Lingzhu arrived at the production team location, she was dumbfounded as soon as she got out of the car.

"Did we go to the wrong place?"

She looked at Wan Miaoyin, her face showing considerable confusion.

Wan Miaoyin's face showed no surprise. "It's fine, it's just that the director was changed."

Hearing the news that the director had been changed, Yin Lingzhu became even more confused.

"Changed? Why?"

A cold glint flashed in Wan Miaoyin's eyes, and her smile didn't reach her eyes.

"Probably offended someone."

Seeing the new director in front of her, Yin Lingzhu immediately closed her mouth.

What kind of big shot had he offended to have the director replaced while they were still filming?

Yin Lingzhu was secretly amazed.

The director was still setting up the scene. Seeing Yin Lingzhu and the other person arrive, he immediately put down what he was holding.

"Hello, I'm Li Dong¹, and I'm also the new director of this variety show."

Li Dong wore black-framed glasses and looked just like a student who had recently graduated.

He came over with a smile to greet them.

Yin Lingzhu also followed his example and introduced herself.

Li Dong looked at them, his smile apologetic.

"Some of our prop work here isn't ready yet. We'll officially start filming tomorrow."

Yin Lingzhu looked around at the people nearby—everyone seemed very busy.

Yin Lingzhu turned her attention back to Li Dong in front of her. "Alright then, we won't disturb you."

She didn't insist on staying here, and Wan Miaoyin followed behind her.

Wan Miaoyin watched Yin Lingzhu wandering around aimlessly and stopped walking.

"Where are you planning to go?"

Being asked this, Yin Lingzhu suddenly realized she had nowhere to go.

Wan Miaoyin walked to Yin Lingzhu's side. "The director changed, but our rooms didn't change."

Only then did Yin Lingzhu react. "What am I doing?"

Wan Miaoyin looked at Yin Lingzhu beside her and said meaningfully, "Who knows?"

Yin Lingzhu embarrassedly headed toward her room.

Wan Miaoyin still followed behind her.

Back in her room, Yin Lingzhu thought about everything that had happened today and couldn't help but want to curl her toes in embarrassment.

If there was no one around, it would be fine, but once there was someone there, embarrassing situations became even more embarrassing.

Yin Lingzhu closed her eyes, trying to forget the embarrassing things in her mind.

After a while, she opened her eyes again.

She couldn't forget—just thinking about what had happened made her feel incredibly embarrassed.

Yin Lingzhu could only pick up her phone, wanting to distract herself.

But she discovered that Yan Si hadn't accepted her money transfer.

Yin Lingzhu pursed her lips. She didn't know why Yan Si wouldn't accept it.

She typed words in the input box, then deleted them.

Finally, Yin Lingzhu simply exited the app.

Maybe Yan Si was just busy and hadn't seen the message.

Thinking this, Yin Lingzhu opened a game.

When Yin Lingzhu emerged from the game, it was already evening.

She looked outside the window. The golden sun had mostly disappeared behind the buildings, but the warm light still shone on the ground.

Yin Lingzhu stretched and wanted to ask Wan Miaoyin what they should eat for dinner.

But inadvertently, she discovered that Yan Si still hadn't accepted the money.

Yin Lingzhu frowned and opened the chat window.

If Yan Si didn't accept it, wouldn't she have to keep owing this favor?

After some hesitation, she typed a few words.

[Are you there? Please accept the money.]

Yan Si's reply was very quick.

[I'm here. It's a small amount—you don't need to give it to me.]

Yin Lingzhu stared at the message she sent, falling into thought.

No matter what Yan Si said, she definitely had to give this money.

But how to give it—she couldn't think of a way.

Yin Lingzhu looked at her phone screen in distress. The glass clearly reflected the sunlight.

She tilted her phone at an angle, successfully avoiding the glare.

Facing the reflection, she thought about how to reply.

Yan Si also waited for a long time. She saw the phone interface showing "The other party is typing."

But after waiting for a long time, she still didn't see any message from Yin Lingzhu.

Yan Si couldn't help but feel anxious.

[I don't need the money—you should keep it.]

Yan Si nervously typed these words and clicked send.

Yin Lingzhu looked at the message Yan Si sent, somewhat surprised.

Was this explaining things to her?

Yin Lingzhu thought uncertainly.

But this money—she definitely had to return it to Yan Si.

Otherwise, who knew what might happen in the future?

Yin Lingzhu bit her lower lip, still struggling with how to make Yan Si accept the money.

[President Yan, thank you for your concern for your employee, but I must return this money to you.]

After sending this message, Yin Lingzhu hoped that Yan Si would press the confirm payment button.

But Yan Si gave the same old response.

Yin Lingzhu immediately wanted to drag Yan Si out of the screen and smash her on the ground.

She sighed deeply and exited the chat window.

Yin Lingzhu knew it was impossible to get Yan Si to accept the money.

She'd have to think of other methods.

Yin Lingzhu opened Wan Miaoyin's chat window in frustration.

[Let's go eat dinner.]

Wan Miaoyin's reply was equally quick, as if she had been waiting specifically for her.

Footnotes:

¹ Li Dong: A Chinese name meaning "East" (东). The character appears to be a young, inexperienced director who has replaced the previous one.