

Chapter 90-2

By now the sky had turned dark, and there were fewer and fewer lights along the road.

Yin Lingzhu felt increasingly uneasy in her heart.

Even though there were cameramen behind them, and nothing could really happen, she still felt worried.

While Yin Lingzhu was vigilantly watching their surroundings, the staff members disappeared without her noticing.

It was Wan Miaoyin who told her, and only then did she realize this.

Yin Lingzhu's heart skipped a beat at that moment.

After coming to her senses, Yin Lingzhu kept her eyes fixed on the cameramen.

She was afraid the cameramen might run off at any moment.

But fortunately, their destination was right ahead.

The cameramen didn't cause any problems either.

The staff led them to a dark little house.

The house didn't look big from the outside, but there were no lights on inside - not a trace of light.

Yin Lingzhu was surprised in her heart.

She looked at the cameraman. "This is the place the director assigned us?!"

The cameraman didn't answer, but Yin Lingzhu could already understand from his expression.

She glanced at Wan Miaoyin and met her eyes.

Wan Miaoyin's gaze was obviously very resistant.

Yin Lingzhu also didn't want to enter this place.

She tilted her head toward Wan Miaoyin, signaling that they should go back.

Wan Miaoyin had the same thought and immediately nodded.

Yin Lingzhu immediately turned around, wanting to go back following the route she had memorized earlier.

But unexpectedly, a group of people in black suddenly appeared.

Without giving them a chance to speak, they grabbed Yin Lingzhu and Wan Miaoyin's arms and pushed them toward the house.

When Yin Lingzhu was grabbed, she immediately struggled violently. Just as she was about to break free, several more people came out to hold her down.

Yin Lingzhu and Wan Miaoyin could only be forcibly pushed into the house.

Their eyes were also covered, and they were only released once they were inside the room.

Yin Lingzhu opened her eyes to complete darkness in front of her.

She frowned and instinctively reached toward her side.

As expected, she touched Wan Miaoyin's wrist.

She lowered her voice and whispered to Wan Miaoyin: "Follow me."

Wan Miaoyin obediently hummed in response and grabbed onto Yin Lingzhu's sleeve.

Yin Lingzhu's footsteps paused for a moment, then she began feeling along the wall.

The cold wall surface hadn't been smoothed with putty¹ and was rough and uneven.

Yin Lingzhu pressed her hand against it, trying to figure out where the door was.

Wan Miaoyin slowly pressed close to Yin Lingzhu's side.

Yin Lingzhu noticed this too, but she didn't have the mood to worry about it right now.

She wanted to get out of this place.

Therefore, Yin Lingzhu felt somewhat anxious and couldn't help but quicken her pace.

Wan Miaoyin also noticed this and boldly moved even closer to Yin Lingzhu.

The night vision cameras above the room faithfully recorded everything.

The director watched everything he had designed, feeling very pleased.

The number of bullet comments also increased.

Most people were arguing about the relationship between them.

When Yin Lingzhu's hand touched something that seemed like a door handle, her heart leaped with joy.

Footnotes:

¹ Putty: A paste-like substance used to fill holes and smooth surfaces on walls before painting. In Chinese construction, it's commonly used to create smooth wall finishes.