

Chapter 91-1

Yin Lingzhu tentatively placed her hand on it, then slowly turned it.

But what she expected didn't happen—nothing happened at all.

Just as Yin Lingzhu was feeling disappointed, she suddenly heard a sound in the air.

Yin Lingzhu sensed it and tilted her head, feeling something brush past her ear.

She immediately shouted, wanting to tell Wan Miaoyín to duck down.

But her warning came too late.

Just as her mouth opened, she heard Wan Miaoyín's pained cry.

In the darkness, Yin Lingzhu's brow furrowed.

She asked Wan Miaoyín, "Are you okay?"

Wan Miaoyín covered her shoulder. Just now, something unknown had struck her arm.

But hearing the concern in Yin Lingzhu's voice, she still shook her head.

"I'm fine."

But in those few seconds of pause, Yin Lingzhu realized what had happened.

Yin Lingzhu's voice was urgent, "Did something hit you just now?"

She could clearly feel that the object that had suddenly appeared was quite large.

Seeing that she couldn't hide it from her, Wan Miaoyín had no choice but to tell her about what happened to her arm.

After hearing this, Yin Lingzhu became even more vigilant.

She tried touching Wan Miaoyín's arm, but with just a light touch, Wan Miaoyín hissed in pain.

Yin Lingzhu was stunned and quickly pulled her hand back.

Her heart filled with confusion.

What exactly was the production team trying to do?

The audience also noticed this unusual scene and frantically sent bullet comments asking what was happening.

The director immediately had someone post a message about prop malfunction, then continued watching the people in the monitoring room unhurriedly.

When he saw the two people making physical contact, he smiled with satisfaction.

This was exactly the effect he wanted.

Although he didn't know what had happened on the Ferris wheel, from watching their attitudes, he could guess the general situation.

He looked meaningfully at the screen, which clearly showed Yin Lingzhu's nervous appearance.

With his experience in reading people, combined with the information he had investigated beforehand, he was certain that Wan Miaoyín had definitely liked Yin Lingzhu for a long time.

A flash of smugness passed through the director's eyes as he planned to use the suspension bridge effect¹.

Although this method was old-fashioned, it was very effective.

Regardless of why the heart was beating, there was only one person beside her.

The director's smile grew wider and wider, so he ignored the bullet comments.

And the content of the bullet comments was all dissatisfaction with him.

Yin Lingzhu's vigilance was at maximum, her ears twitching slightly as she carefully listened to the sounds around her.

She was worried that what had just happened would occur again.

She lowered the hand that had been on the wall.

But nothing happened next, leaving Yin Lingzhu still confused.

She took a step forward, and nothing happened.

Yin Lingzhu continued to carefully feel her way around, still looking for where the door of this room was.

The production team bringing them to this place for no reason was enough to make Yin Lingzhu angry.

Not to mention that the production team had actually placed props that could hurt people.

Yin Lingzhu's eyes revealed anger.

The audience in the live stream, seeing the solution the production team had given, didn't buy it either.

Especially since they had also noticed that Wan Miaoyín was injured.

This made the audience's dissatisfaction reach its peak all at once.

The bullet comments were filled with curses.

This result was not what the director had expected.

Just as the director was looking at the bullet comments, Yin Lingzhu triggered another mechanism.

But with the previous experience, Yin Lingzhu quickly pulled Wan Miaoyín away, and they barely dodged it.

【Damn production team, if it weren't for Bamboo², Miaomiao would probably be injured again.】

【Wow, Bamboo's reaction is so fast.】

The direction of the bullet comments suddenly changed, which gave the director a glimmer of hope.

Originally, he had planned to open the door, but now it seemed unnecessary.

With the director's command, the difficulty of the props increased considerably.

Yin Lingzhu clearly felt it, and she cursed the production team in her heart.

At the same time, her hand and foot movements became even more careful.

Wan Miaoyín noticed the change in Yin Lingzhu and her nerves also tensed up.

In the darkness, the eyes lost their function, so the other organs became more sensitive.

Wan Miaoyín could clearly hear Yin Lingzhu's rapid breathing and could feel the warmth from Yin Lingzhu's body.

She looked toward Yin Lingzhu, and in the pitch darkness, she seemed to be able to see Yin Lingzhu's face.

Wan Miaoyín lowered her head and smiled softly. The sound was very light, but in the empty room, it particularly stimulated the nerves.

Yin Lingzhu instinctively turned her head toward her, "What's wrong?"

Wan Miaoyín hid all the emotions in her heart and shook her head.

But she immediately realized that Yin Lingzhu couldn't see.

Wan Miaoyín had no choice but to speak, "Nothing, just continue on your way."

Yin Lingzhu listened to Wan Miaoyín's voice and didn't detect anything wrong.

So she didn't pay it any mind.

This room gave her a restless feeling, which also affected Yin Lingzhu's judgment ability and made her lose her usual calmness.

Seeing that their atmosphere was gradually improving, the director smiled.

His purpose had been achieved, so with a wave of his hand, the door of the room trapping Yin Lingzhu and the others was opened.

Light from the doorway shone in, and Yin Lingzhu immediately pulled Wan Miaoyín and ran toward it.

Yin Lingzhu was already very angry in her heart and planned to find the director immediately after leaving the room to ask for clarification.

But what she didn't expect was that as soon as one foot stepped out of the room, she was surrounded by a large group of people.

Yin Lingzhu even saw several doctors.

The director was behind the doctors, his expression very anxious.

Yin Lingzhu's face still showed anger, and she was about to question what was happening when the director spoke first.

"Quick, someone is injured. You should go check on her first."

The director urged the doctors in front of him. This action left Yin Lingzhu feeling puzzled.

After the doctors took Wan Miaoyín away, the director also dismissed the surrounding people, not even leaving the cameramen behind.

Her actions made Yin Lingzhu sense something was wrong.

Yin Lingzhu subtly moved away from the director.

The director noticed this too. His eyes darkened, but his face still wore a smiling expression.

"Little Yin, this was really just an accident." The director smiled again, "Don't take it to heart."

Yin Lingzhu sneered in her heart. How could this possibly be an accident?

It would be settled with just a few words from the director.

The director had been observing Yin Lingzhu's expression, and seeing the look on Yin Lingzhu's face, he knew what she was thinking.

He continued smiling, "Little Yin, don't think too much about it."

Yin Lingzhu snorted through her nose and said nothing.

She took a step forward and walked toward the crowd.

After she left, the director spat on the ground, "Ungrateful."

Wan Miaoyín went to have her injuries examined, and Yin Lingzhu didn't want to deal with these people either.

Footnotes:

1. Suspension bridge effect: A psychological phenomenon where people may misinterpret feelings of fear or anxiety as romantic attraction when in the presence of someone they find appealing, often occurring in stressful or dangerous situations.
2. Bamboo: This appears to be a nickname for Yin Lingzhu used by fans in the bullet comments, likely derived from the "竹" (bamboo) character in her name.