

Chapter 92-2

The next day, Yin Lingzhu rarely slept until she woke up naturally. After waking up, she simply ate the meal provided by the hotel and then took a taxi to the hospital.

She wanted to go see Wan Miaoyín.

Since Wan Miaoyín had been admitted to the hospital due to her injury, she hadn't gone to see her once.

But when she reached the hospital entrance, Yin Lingzhu suddenly remembered that she didn't know Wan Miaoyín's room number.

Yin Lingzhu felt a bit embarrassed. She opened her phone and found Wan Miaoyín's contact information.

She wanted to send Wan Miaoyín a message, but after thinking about it, she exited the interface.

Yin Lingzhu searched through the chat interface for a long time and discovered that no one knew where Wan Miaoyín was.

This made Yin Lingzhu feel somewhat incredulous.

Given Wan Miaoyín's personality, there should be many people who knew her.

Yin Lingzhu thought about this and unconsciously clicked on Wan Miaoyín's chat box.

She looked down at her phone screen, hesitated for a long time, and finally sent a message to Wan Miaoyín.

【Are you there? Which room are you staying in?】

Wan Miaoyín's phone had a special ringtone set for Yin Lingzhu.

So when the exclusive ringtone sounded, Wan Miaoyín immediately noticed.

Looking at the content on her phone, she couldn't describe what she felt in her heart.

Wan Miaoyín stared at the phone screen for a long time, her pale fingers tapping lightly, typing out a few words.

【I'm not at the hospital, I'm at home.】

Looking at the reply, Yin Lingzhu immediately felt a kind of embarrassment.

She hurriedly left the hospital entrance, walking quickly while typing.

【Sorry, I didn't know.】

Seeing that Wan Miaoyín hadn't replied for a long time, Yin Lingzhu quickly added more.

【I wanted to see how your injury was doing. Since you're fine now.】

Almost instantly, Wan Miaoyín's message arrived.

【Can I see you one more time?】

Yin Lingzhu immediately replied with a "yes."

And just then, a taxi arrived, so Yin Lingzhu flagged it down.

But when the driver asked where she wanted to go, she suddenly froze.

Because she realized she didn't know where Wan Miaoyín's home was.

Facing the driver's increasingly impatient gaze, Yin Lingzhu's hand was already on the car door handle.

Just as she decided to get out, Wan Miaoyín sent her another message with Wan Miaoyín's home address.

Seeing this, Yin Lingzhu immediately recited the address to the driver.

Watching the scenery outside the window continuously receding, Yin Lingzhu felt many emotions in her heart.

While Yin Lingzhu was lost in thought, they had already arrived at the address Wan Miaoyín had given her.

Seeing the villa in front of her, Yin Lingzhu was stunned for a moment.

No wonder this name seemed so familiar—Yan Si also lived in this area.

But why would Wan Miaoyín live in a villa district?

Yin Lingzhu felt slightly surprised.

In her memory, Wan Miaoyín's family background didn't seem to be this good.

Before Yin Lingzhu could emerge from her surprise, a person wearing a suit with some fine lines on his face stood at the villa entrance.

When he saw Yin Lingzhu, he showed a polite smile, "Hello, the young lady asked me to come pick you up."

Yin Lingzhu came to her senses and looked at the person in front of her, also giving him a smile in return.

Following behind the person, Yin Lingzhu once again witnessed how wealthy Wan Miaoyín's family was.

But normally, Wan Miaoyín had never shown this at all.

When Wan Miaoyín saw that Yin Lingzhu had come, happiness flashed in her eyes.

"Uncle Li, you can go downstairs now."

She said this to the person who had brought Yin Lingzhu.

Instantly, the huge living room was left with only Yin Lingzhu and Wan Miaoyín.

Yin Lingzhu wanted to know what was going on, but for a moment didn't know what to say.

"I am Wan Ling's¹ daughter."

Hearing the two words "Wan Ling," Yin Lingzhu understood.

Wan Ling—someone who had once been in an adjacent position to Yan Si on the wealthy rankings.

Looking at Yin Lingzhu's shocked expression, Wan Miaoyín suddenly smiled.

"You don't need to be so surprised."

Yin Lingzhu looked at Wan Miaoyín, still unable to believe it in her heart.

"When you were in school, your pants were washed until they turned white."

Yin Lingzhu thought about Wan Miaoyín's appearance in her college memories and spoke this out.

Wan Miaoyín had Yin Lingzhu sit down first, then her face showed some helplessness.

"My dad insisted that I not stand out so much and told me to hide my identity."

Yin Lingzhu was amazed by her method of hiding her identity and gave a dry laugh, "Haha, then you were very successful."

Wan Miaoyín stared at Yin Lingzhu until it made Yin Lingzhu feel somewhat uncomfortable.

She moved back on the sofa, wanting to avoid Wan Miaoyín's gaze.

"What's wrong?"

After Yin Lingzhu said this, that hopeful light appeared in Wan Miaoyín's eyes again.

"Now, can you be with me?"

Hearing Wan Miaoyín bring up this topic again, a bit of difficulty appeared on Yin Lingzhu's face.

She hadn't expected that Wan Miaoyín still hadn't given up.

Yin Lingzhu's brain spun rapidly, and at the last moment, she thought of Yan Si.

Originally, because Yan Si was unwilling, they hadn't actually obtained a divorce certificate between them.

Yin Lingzhu felt like she had found a lifeline.

"I'm already married to someone."

She had thought that with these words, Wan Miaoyín would know when to retreat.

But unexpectedly, Wan Miaoyín had no reaction at all.

This made Yin Lingzhu feel incredulous.

"I know."

Wan Miaoyín stared at Yin Lingzhu with deep eyes, saying this lightly.

This situation caught Yin Lingzhu completely off guard.

"Then you..."

Yin Lingzhu glanced at Wan Miaoyín with her eyes, speaking quietly.

The air fell silent for a moment, with someone's breathing becoming particularly obvious.

Wan Miaoyín was the first to break this silence.

"I don't care."

"Just consider me your kept mistress²."

Yin Lingzhu was stunned again.

She never would have expected Wan Miaoyín to say such a thing.

"You... you... I care."

After a long time, Yin Lingzhu managed to squeeze out these few words.

Wan Miaoyín's light brown pupils looked at her, her white dress truly seeming like jasmine flowers.

"Really, is there no possibility at all?"

This sentence seemed to exhaust all of Wan Miaoyín's strength. After saying it, she powerlessly lowered her head.

Looking at her pitiful appearance, Yin Lingzhu's heart softened for a moment, but then immediately hardened again.

"You'll meet someone better. It doesn't have to be me."

Hearing her words of rejection, Wan Miaoyín's lowered head didn't lift up.

Just as Yin Lingzhu was racking her brains thinking of some comforting words, before she could speak, Wan Miaoyín spoke first.

"I wish you a pleasant trip abroad. Uncle Li, please escort her out."

Hearing her sudden words, Yin Lingzhu hurriedly got up from the sofa, "Alright then, you keep busy, take care and rest. Your body hasn't recovered yet."

The moment Yin Lingzhu turned around, Wan Miaoyín finally lifted her head.

Over this past year, what she was most familiar with was Yin Lingzhu's back.

"I'm afraid that if you don't leave quickly, I won't be able to bear letting you go."

She murmured.

A tear fell onto the floor.

Footnotes:

1. Wan Ling: A wealthy business figure who appears to be on the same level as Yan Si in terms of wealth and influence
2. Kept mistress: In Chinese culture, this refers to someone who is financially supported by another person in exchange for companionship, typically in a secret relationship outside of marriage