

Chapter 92-3

Yin Lingzhu returned to the hotel and reflected on everything that had happened when she had just seen Wan Miaoyín.

Suddenly, she felt something was off.

She had never told Wan Miaoyín that she was going abroad.

Why would Wan Miaoyín say that?

Yin Lingzhu lay on the bed, unable to figure it out.

The next day, Yin Lingzhu sat on the plane, looking at the scenery outside the window.

Yesterday, after returning from Wan Miaoyín's place, she had unknowingly fallen asleep on the bed.

So today she had no sleepiness at all.

Noticing someone sitting down beside her, Yin Lingzhu turned her head to see who was next to her.

But she saw someone completely unexpected.

"How are you here?"

Yin Lingzhu said in surprise.

Yan Si also put on her acting skills, showing a surprised expression on her face, "Lingzhu, how are you here?"

Yin Lingzhu stared into her eyes without speaking.

"Hello."

After a while, she reluctantly gave a greeting.

Yin Lingzhu felt her luck was terrible.

But since the plane didn't allow seat changes, Yin Lingzhu had to endure this.

At worst, she'd just pretend the person next to her was a carrot or cabbage.

Yin Lingzhu turned her gaze back to the window.

Yan Si watched Yin Lingzhu's distant behavior, and the light in her eyes suddenly dimmed.

Although she had known this would be the result, when it actually happened, it was still painful.

Yin Lingzhu leaned back in her chair and closed her eyes.

But even so, she could feel Yan Si watching her.

Yin Lingzhu had to turn her body sideways as well, trying to block Yan Si's gaze.

Seeing her like this, Yan Si had to withdraw her gaze.

She could only steal glances with her peripheral vision.

Yin Lingzhu sighed and adjusted her posture, wanting to take a nap.

But she had slept too much yesterday, so Yin Lingzhu had no sleepiness at all right now.

This flight would take about seven hours, which meant Yin Lingzhu needed to stay in the same space with Yan Si for seven hours.

Just thinking about this made Yin Lingzhu feel suffocated.

Why couldn't Yan Si just let her go?

Yin Lingzhu opened her eyes and looked at the sun hanging in the sky, feeling extremely irritated.

Combining what Wan Miaoyín had said when bidding her farewell yesterday with this overly coincidental situation, Yin Lingzhu began to have some thoughts.

She glanced at Yan Si with her peripheral vision and opened her phone.

Anyway, phones could be used on planes, so killing time was easy.

Thinking this way, Yin Lingzhu focused her attention on entertainment.

Several hours passed relatively peacefully.

The sun set, darkness enveloped everything, and the plane landed on time.

Yin Lingzhu walked out of the cabin and took a big breath of fresh air.

Yan Si followed behind her.

Yin Lingzhu secretly glanced at her, quickened her pace, and headed toward her booked accommodation.

What she hadn't expected was that Yan Si would actually keep following her.

The scattered stars in the night sky shone on the ground. Although they weren't as brilliant as the sun, the moon's unique brightness was enough for them to see each other's faces clearly.

The smile on Yan Si's face still seemed so gentle.

Yin Lingzhu thought to herself.

Yan Si's smile was what the previous Yin Lingzhu had craved most.

Previously, Yan Si had always maintained a cold attitude toward her, never showing any smile on her face.

Even the smiles she normally gave to the public, she was too stingy to give to her.

Therefore, during that year of their contract marriage, she could only see Yan Si's smile on her phone.

Translation Notes: This chapter serves as a transition, showing Yin Lingzhu's growing suspicion about how Wan Miaoyín knew about her travel plans, and the uncomfortable coincidence of Yan Si being on the same flight. The chapter ends with Yin Lingzhu reflecting on their past relationship and how desperately she had once craved Yan Si's attention and affection, which Yan Si had never given her during their marriage. The setup suggests that Yan Si has deliberately arranged to follow Yin Lingzhu abroad, escalating her pursuit.
