

Chapter 99

The people arranged by Yan Si to guard outside saw Qin Ruri and originally wanted to stop him.

But what they didn't expect was that Qin Ruri had also arranged his own people outside.

For a moment, the people arranged by Yan Si and Qin Ruri's people were entangled together, unable to determine who had the upper hand.

Qin Ruri took advantage of this opening and got into his driver's car, heading straight for the airport.

When he sensed something was wrong, he had already bought himself a plane ticket.

From that moment, he had planned that if anything went amiss, he would immediately fly abroad.

Qin Ruri in the car was still feeling smug, enjoying the thought of his future life abroad.

Yan Si also heard the report from her subordinates and learned of Qin Ruri's escape.

She wasn't anxious, but the secretary who had just taken office beside her was very worried.

"President Yan, if Qin Ruri flees abroad, it will be much harder to catch him."

Yan Si looked at her and revealed a smile that showed everything was under control.

This morning, she had just submitted information about Qin Ruri's tax evasion.

By now, Qin Ruri had probably already been listed as a serious investigation target.

No matter where he fled, it didn't matter.

However, Yan Si didn't say this out loud; she didn't need to.

She walked past her assistant and headed straight outside.

Qin Ruri's fate was already sealed; she didn't need to pay him too much attention.

Yan Si's expression became grave—now she had to face something truly difficult.

Yin Lingzhu.

She silently recited this name in her heart.

On the way to Yin Lingzhu's hotel, Yan Si suddenly felt a surge of fear.

She didn't know how to meet with Yin Lingzhu.

She didn't even understand at this moment what approach to take with Yin Lingzhu.

But while she was pondering, the driver had already reached the hotel entrance.

Yan Si looked at the hotel's main entrance, took slow steps, and walked inside.

Just as she reached Yin Lingzhu's door and was about to knock, the door suddenly opened.

Yin Lingzhu obviously hadn't expected Yan Si to appear at the door either, and obvious surprise appeared on her face.

"You."

When Yan Si's brain heard Yin Lingzhu say one word, it spun rapidly.

Should she tell the truth?

If she told the truth, would Lingzhu find her annoying?

But if she didn't tell the truth, she didn't know what else to say.

Just as Yan Si was wondering what to do, Yin Lingzhu spoke.

"Excuse me."

These polite yet distant words made Yan Si's heart ache.

But her body honestly moved aside, making way for Yin Lingzhu.

Watching Yin Lingzhu's retreating figure, Yan Si was unusually at a loss.

She knew that her meeting with Yin Lingzhu would definitely be unpleasant.

In a place where Yan Si couldn't see, Yin Lingzhu's walking pace slowed down.

She wasn't as calm as she appeared on the surface.

The person she had been fantasizing about in her mind suddenly appeared in reality—how could Yin Lingzhu not be surprised?

Not losing her composure in front of Yan Si had already taken all her willpower.

Yin Lingzhu closed her eyes, trying to calm her heartbeat.

She looked at the traffic light in front of her, and only when the signal turned green did she step forward and walk to the other side.

But suddenly a car appeared, speeding straight toward Yin Lingzhu.

Yin Lingzhu was still immersed in the emotions from just seeing Yan Si, and by the time she noticed the car, it was too late.

Faced with such a fast-moving vehicle, Yin Lingzhu's legs seemed rooted to the ground, unable to move.

She stood there in a daze, not knowing what to do.

Just as Yin Lingzhu's mind went blank, she suddenly felt a strong force on her arm, pushing her aside.

In her panic, Yin Lingzhu looked toward the source of that force.

Yan Si saw her looking over and wanted to adjust the expression on her face, but it was already too late.

The car had already reached Yan Si in the blink of an eye.

In that moment, Yin Lingzhu seemed to see Yan Si's face, and yet seemed not to see it.

She only felt that time had stopped in that moment.

Red slowly flowed onto the ground, strikingly eye-catching.

When Yin Lingzhu saw Yan Si lying on the ground, her heart flashed with a panic she had never experienced before.

Even in the instant she decided to divorce, she had never felt this devastated.

She trembled as she dialed 120¹, her panicked hands making her repeat the unlocking process several times.

Seeing the ambulance arrive with its sirens wailing, Yin Lingzhu felt as if she had found salvation.

She sat in the ambulance seat, tightly gripping Yan Si's hand.

"Please, don't die, okay?"

In her heart, Yin Lingzhu prayed to every deity she could think of, only wishing for Yan Si's safety.

Smelling the pungent odor of the hospital, Yin Lingzhu didn't think much about it.

She watched helplessly as Yan Si lay on the stretcher while doctors pushed her into the operating room, but she herself could do nothing.

The words "Surgery in Progress" lit up.

Yin Lingzhu's heart was also lifted high.

She knew that when this light went out again, it would be time for her to face judgment.
