

Chapter 111 - Nesting [Bonus Extra]

New Year Bonus Extra

On New Year's Eve, Yan Lin had booked a restaurant in advance, planning to welcome Feng Yue back from her business trip.

In recent years, self-media had developed rapidly, and Feng Yue had caught this wave of opportunity, making her career as a food blogger flourish.

Near the end of the year, the platform organized an annual gala and invited many bloggers to attend. As a top blogger in the food category, Feng Yue had received her invitation early on.

Since this was her first time attending such a gala, she took it very seriously and flew to the neighboring city a day early with her assistant.

Yan Lin had originally planned to go with Feng Yue, but unfortunately, she couldn't get away from work at year-end, so she could only stay home alone.

On the night of the gala, Yan Lin watched the live stream and saw Feng Yue standing on the awards stage with a face full of smiles. From that moment on, she began eagerly anticipating Feng Yue's return home.

Feng Yue's return flight was booked for the morning of December 31st, expected to land at Beijing International Airport at 11 AM. But the weather didn't cooperate—on the morning of the 31st, Beijing had heavy snowfall, and almost all flights were delayed.

When Yan Lin received Feng Yue's call, she was standing by the floor-to-ceiling window in her office, watching the goose-feather snowflakes floating outside. Her heart gradually sank.

"A Lin, A Lin, are you listening?" Feng Yue's voice came through the phone.

Yan Lin snapped back to reality and removed her gold-rimmed glasses with one hand. "Mm, I'm listening. The flight is delayed? Then just cancel your ticket and find a hotel with Xiao Chen¹ to stay the night. Come back tomorrow when the snow stops." Compared to a meal that could be eaten anytime, Yan Lin cared more about Feng Yue's safety.

After personally experiencing that life worse than death without the other person, she dared not imagine what would happen if Feng Yue left her again.

Feng Yue's voice also sounded very downcast. She sighed, "Ah, alright. Sorry A Lin, I can't come back to spend New Year's with you..."

Yan Lin's throat felt tight. She took a deep breath, curved her lips upward, and softened her voice, "It's okay, A Yue. We can video call together for New Year's. We have a long future ahead of us, it doesn't matter."

Feng Yue was comforted somewhat by her words and nodded. "Alright then, I'll go cancel the ticket first. I'll hang up now."

"Okay, call me again when you get to the hotel."

After Feng Yue hung up, she turned to look at Xiao Chen standing beside her. "Xiao Chen, did you check the tickets?"

Xiao Chen nodded with a bitter expression. "Sister, all the high-speed train tickets are sold out. How about we just stay at a hotel for the night and go back tomorrow."

Feng Yue looked at the ticket booking interface on her phone and bit her lip with a sigh. "How is there not a single ticket left?"

"Let's find a hotel first then."

"Alright."

When Yan Lin returned home, it was already eleven at night. Opening the door to a very uncomfortable pitch-black darkness, she took a deep breath, trying hard to ignore the irritation in her heart.

Ever since she and Feng Yue had been together, every day when she came home from work, there would be a light on for her. It had been a long time since she'd seen such complete darkness.

Throwing her bag and car keys on the cabinet in the entryway, she didn't turn on the lights and just felt her way into the living room, throwing herself completely onto the soft sofa.

Today was Feng Yue's third day on her business trip. The house had been without Feng Yue's presence for three days.

Yan Lin lay on the sofa, turned over, and hugged a nearby cushion into her arms, sniffing it carefully like a little dog. Unfortunately, since the house was cleaned by an auntie every day, the orange blossom scent that belonged to Feng Yue on the cushion had already faded considerably.

In that instant, her heart suddenly panicked, and that familiar fear immediately seized her heart. She suddenly sat up from the sofa and hurried into their bedroom.

Yan Lin yanked back the covers and lay back down on the bed, her disheveled long hair carelessly pressed under her head. She was lying on Feng Yue's side of the bed—fortunately, it still had the scent of orange blossoms.

But it still wasn't enough, far from enough.

Earlier, when she smelled the increasingly faint orange blossom scent on the sofa, Yan Lin suddenly recalled a certain day from her previous life after Feng Yue's death, when the orange blossom scent in the house had grown fainter and fainter, replaced by the pungent smell of detergent.

In that instant, Yan Lin even thought she hadn't actually been reborn, that she had only had a beautiful dream.

Fortunately, all of this was real. Feng Yue was real, and this orange blossom scent that belonged to her was also real.

Yan Lin threw back the covers and got up, directly pushing open the door to the adjacent walk-in closet. She and Feng Yue's clothes occupied each side. Walking to Feng Yue's side filled with hanging clothes, Yan Lin directly pulled down all the clothes hanging there. She buried her head in those soft and cool fabrics and took a deep breath.

It was Feng Yue's scent.

She carried these clothes back to the bed and arranged them all on the bed like building a nest, then lay down among them.

She would rest for a bit, just rest a bit and then go shower, and then it would be time for her video call with Feng Yue. Very soon, very soon...

But perhaps because her body was too exhausted and her spirits were really low, Yan Lin fell into a deep sleep the moment she closed her eyes.

Feng Yue stood at the front door carrying a light bag. She slowly exhaled and looked down to examine her condition. Apart from being covered with some cigarette smoke smell, she looked pretty good overall.

She removed the U-shaped pillow from around her neck, then gripped the door handle for fingerprint recognition.

Click—the door opened.

But when the door opened, Feng Yue didn't see Yan Lin's figure, only pitch darkness.

Was she still at the office?

Feng Yue frowned, but when she was about to change shoes, she saw the bag and car keys in the entryway.

She was home.

Feng Yue tiptoed into the living room. No one there.

She put down her things, took off the outer coat that smelled of cigarette smoke, then slowly walked into the bedroom.

Upon entering the bedroom, Feng Yue froze in place.

Many clothes were carelessly scattered on the floor and sofa, but what shocked her most was that a pile of clothes was also arranged on the bed, and moreover, these clothes seemed to... all be hers.

"Yan Lin?" Feng Yue called softly.

Feng Yue walked toward the bed while picking up the clothes from the floor and placing them on the sofa. Only when she got close did she discover that her clothes seemed to have been arranged in a circle-like shape, and in the center of this circle was the deeply sleeping Yan Lin.

The dim bedside light made it difficult for Feng Yue to see Yan Lin's expression clearly, but she could probably guess that she must be extremely tired.

She tore open a gap in the nest-like clothes, then reached out to caress Yan Lin's cheek. "A Lin, wake up."

The familiar voice and familiar scent quickly awakened Yan Lin. The moment she opened her eyes, she saw Feng Yue's familiar face. "A Yue..."

"Mm, it's me. I'm back."

Yan Lin's brain gradually cleared, and she looked at the person who had appeared before her in disbelief. Then she directly sat up and pulled her into her arms, her voice carrying an imperceptible grievance, "You're back, you're finally back... I missed you so much..."

Feng Yue obediently lay against her neck, wrapping her arms around Yan Lin's waist, her voice somewhat muffled, "I missed you too."

Although they had only been apart for less than three days, both felt as if they hadn't seen each other for a very long time.

The moment they embraced, the familiar scent and familiar touch immediately awakened the memories in their bodies.

At this moment, brilliant fireworks suddenly burst outside the dark night sky, gorgeous and dazzling.

They both turned their heads toward the window, then looked back at each other.

"Happy New Year, baby."

Feng Yue lay in Yan Lin's arms, tilted her head up slightly, and planted a kiss on her chin. "Happy New Year."

Footnotes:

¹ Xiao Chen (小陈) - "Little Chen" - a common way to address a younger colleague or assistant in Chinese workplace culture