

Chapter 130_2 - Fulfillment

In a flash, Ning Fuyi had already begun activating the formation. She dropped a drop of heart's blood into the array's eye¹, then let out a long howl as she desperately poured all her demonic energy into the eye.

The entire Demon Cave immediately shook and trembled. Countless stone fragments fell down as Chu Qingqiu spun around to summon white light, blocking above her head while frowning as she watched.

However, after the earth shook for a long time, the red light gradually weakened until it finally disappeared without a trace. The expected changes didn't occur, and the formation returned to its original state.

Not only Ning Fuyi, but Chu Qingqiu was also stunned, leaning against the wall and standing in place, unable to speak for a long while.

The confusion in her eyes circled for a long time. Finally understanding something, it gradually transformed into calm comprehension.

"How can this be? Why is it like this!" Ning Fuyi murmured. She got up again and poured in demonic power, but this time the trembling was even shorter, and the formation quickly returned to calm again.

"Why!" Ning Fuyi almost roared in grief. She used all her strength trying to activate the formation again, but the effect became weaker each time—so weak that she finally collapsed to her knees and wailed in despair.

The long-held hope of reviving her family finally turned to nothing.

Accompanying her cries, the Demon Cave suddenly trembled again—not because of the formation, but because of the demonic energy on Ning Fuyi's body that could no longer be suppressed, rampaging wildly.

Completely despairing, she was about to transform entirely into a bloodthirsty demon.

"Ning Fuyi!" Seeing this, Chu Qingqiu hurriedly stepped forward, brilliant white light surging from her palms as she tried to dispel the demonic energy for her. But the white light was useless. Even Ning Fuyi's eyeballs turned crimson red. She suddenly shouted fiercely, and demonic energy immediately wrapped around Chu Qingqiu, pressing her hard against the wall.

"Ning Fuyi!" Chu Qingqiu called out loudly, her voice carrying a sobbing tone. However, Ning Fuyi obviously had no reason left—her shouting only brought even stronger killing intent.

The demonic energy on Ning Fuyi was truly terrifying. Chu Qingqiu's consciousness gradually blurred. She bit her lips tightly and closed her eyes in despair. Could it be that she could only perish together with her?

So she struggled to open her palm, white bone appearing in her grasp.

The white bone became increasingly hot.

But just then, the woman who had been full of bloodthirsty energy suddenly dispersed her demonic energy, covering her forehead and retreating repeatedly until she hit a stone pillar and painfully half-knelt down.

"Something's wrong..." she muttered hoarsely, "Something's wrong..."

Chu Qingqiu immediately slid down. She had no time to check her own injuries and hurriedly took this opportunity to raise her hand, pouring ice-crystal-like white light into Ning Fuyi's brow, forcibly suppressing the demonic energy that made her violent.

"Ning Fuyi, wake up." She coughed as she half-squatted in front of her, not caring about much else as she used her hands to caress her face. "I beg you, wake up..."

Whether it was the effect of the immortal power or her mind being disturbed by the conflicting demonic energy, the moment Ning Fuyi raised her head, her eyes became instantly clear. Countless memories flooded into her mind, then tried to erase themselves again, causing her head to ache almost to the point of splitting.

The memories from the chaos that had been forgotten for so very long surrounded her like a dream.

On one side was the devouring of demonic energy, on the other the struggle of memories. Ning Fuyi almost felt she would be torn in half.

"Chu Qingqiu." She suddenly grabbed Chu Qingqiu's hand, large tears falling as she sobbed and wiped them away.

"I'm sorry, I forgot..." She gripped the grooves on the stone pillar and staggered to her feet, the blood-stained curved sword on the ground entering her vision.

Turning her head, she saw the layers of scars and bloodstains on Chu Qingqiu's body left because of her.

"Ning Fuyi, I have a way—listen to me!" Seeing that she had actually awakened, joy surged in Chu Qingqiu's heart. She tried to comfort Ning Fuyi, but the demonic energy wrapped her up like a cocoon again, pressing her high against the stone wall.

Then, before she could react, the sword that had fallen to the ground rose into the air, diving down from mid-air to deeply pierce Ning Fuyi's heart and lungs. Blood mist immediately sprayed from the woman's mouth.

The speed was so fast that she left herself not half a chance of survival.

Chu Qingqiu's vision was filled with crimson.

"Ning Fuyi..." After an unknown amount of time, Chu Qingqiu opened her mouth soundlessly.

White light suddenly erupted around her, completely tearing apart the demonic energy. Her white robes fluttered as she stepped on the wind and descended.

There was no expression on her face, but her eye sockets were red as if crying blood. Tears flowed down her cheeks, shimmering with watery light as she sat stiffly on her knees.

Ning Fuyi's body had collapsed like mud, blood slowly spreading in a circle beneath her.

"Ning Fuyi." At first, Chu Qingqiu couldn't say anything else, only continuously repeating her name. She wanted to help her up but didn't dare touch her, tears pattering into the pool of blood.

"Didn't you hate...?"

Ning Fuyi's gaze was scattered, but she felt no pain—only relief. Then she struggled to grip the black Mind Bead² on her wrist.

"Hate..." she said.

"But..." The light in her eyes gradually faded, finally leaving only withered blackness. The words that had reached her lips ultimately stopped abruptly.

These are the living beings of heaven and earth that you insist on protecting.

You love the people of the world—I fulfill your wish.
