

Chapter 70_2: Child

As dusk passed, only a few floating clouds remained in the sky. The towns passing beneath their feet had already lit up with thousands of lights, like scattered stars sprinkled across the earth.

After Liu Wenzhu and Rong Jin finished caring for the wounded, they turned and ran toward Ning Fuyi. When Liu Wenzhu met Ning Fuyi's gaze, her eyes immediately reddened, and tears began swirling in her eyes again.

"Didn't you just cry earlier? Why are you crying again?" Ning Fuyi pulled out a handkerchief with mixed feelings of crying and laughing, watching the delicate woman sob while covering her face with the cloth.

"She's been crying the whole way. When she was applying medicine to the senior brothers and sisters earlier, she didn't forget to wipe her tears. She had just gotten better, and now she's like this again." Rong Jin also laughed. He looked at Ning Fuyi with a sigh and reached out to pat the top of her head.

"Look at you—you nearly scared our souls to pieces," he said with lingering fear.

"How am I worth you trading your life for mine?" Liu Wenzhu said through her sobs, gripping Ning Fuyi's palm. "You're the best sister I have in this life. Do you know that even if I lived, I would suffer for the rest of my life?"

"I know," Ning Fuyi said, pulling Liu Wenzhu in front of her. "But weren't you also prepared to trade your life for mine? If I hadn't knocked you out, you would have been the one to jump down."

"So you were the one who knocked me out! No wonder my head hurts so much." Liu Wenzhu touched the back of her head with her delicate hand, crying until a snot bubble appeared.

The two looked at each other and suddenly laughed at the same time. Liu Wenzhu pulled Rong Jin along as she laughed until her stomach hurt. Ning Fuyi hadn't been so unrestrained and happy in a long time. She wiped away the tears of laughter from the corners of her eyes, feeling as light as if a cloud had been stuffed into her heart.

How wonderful—she had saved Liu Wenzhu, and she herself was alive. In this life, she could cultivate immortality, and Rong Jin wouldn't die either.

She hoped she would never again have to watch someone die before her eyes.

Jiuying, who couldn't stand their childishness, pursed her red lips and moved away a bit. After they had laughed enough, Liu Wenzhu finally wiped away her tears.

"Yiyi, after you came back to life, you seem to have grown a lot again. I don't even dare look at you now." Liu Wenzhu looked away, touching her face.

"Yes, not only have you become more refined, but even your height..." Rong Jin gestured with his hand, his face falling. "If you keep growing, you'll catch up to me."

He said sourly: "You're no longer the little junior sister who used to grab my finger and walk around."

"Really?" Ning Fuyi hadn't noticed her height until now. Looking at Liu Wenzhu, she finally realized the difference.

No wonder when she helped Chu Qingqiu up earlier, she felt the other's body was more slender.

"Fuyi, why do you think that demon who bewitched Li Zhao'an wanted to kill you?" Rong Jin suddenly became serious, asking in a low voice.

Ning Fuyi shook her head. That person was indeed targeting her specifically, but she herself didn't know what was special about her that could make such a powerful demon repeatedly scheme to harm her.

Moreover, even Chu Qingqiu didn't understand this question, so although she was puzzled, she didn't know where to seek answers.

"Who exactly is he, and why does he understand Cloud Ascension Mountain Gate so thoroughly?" Liu Wenzhu also said.

"Not just Cloud Ascension Mountain Gate, but also the Zhaoyao Assembly." Ning Fuyi spoke with her phoenix eyes lowered. "The one who disrupted the Zhaoyao Assembly that day was also this person. He knows well where the Divine Tomb is located, knows the internal arrangements of the immortal sects, and now knows that Li Zhao'an hates me. So he must be among us."

"Among us?" Liu Wenzhu exclaimed, quickly covering her mouth. "Can you guess who it is?"

"Once might be hard to guess, but with multiple occurrences, even the most cunning rabbit will show its tail." Ning Fuyi's eyes became increasingly profound, her fingertips unconsciously tapping her clothing. "It's just that I haven't confirmed it yet and need to investigate further. During these days, aside from those present today, we shouldn't trust anyone else."

"This person is too evil! He nearly cost us all our lives. We must find him!" Liu Wenzhu clenched her fists.

While they were discussing, Bai Lin had already reached Cloud Ascension Mountain Gate. The sect was peaceful, with all other disciples immersed in sleep. No one knew what momentous events had occurred the previous night.

The injured disciples were helped down first to seek medical immortals. When Elder Pingyao passed by Ning Fuyi, she silently patted Ning Fuyi's shoulder, instructing her not to overthink things—the aftermath would be handled by her, and she should rest first.

Ning Fuyi smiled politely. When she turned back to look for Chu Qingqiu, she found that her figure had already disappeared into the night.

This person was truly contrary. Earlier she had been gripping her clothing and crying, but now that they were back at the gate, she turned cold and refused to acknowledge her. Ning Fuyi touched the corner of her robe.

Ning Fuyi and Liu Wenzhu brought Jiuying back to Pearl Light Pavilion in the darkness. Ping'an was nowhere to be found—it had probably gone wild somewhere and wasn't waiting for her at Pearl Light Pavilion. Since Ning Fuyi had just emerged from fire and her head was throbbing like it was falling apart, she didn't bother with other matters and lay down on the bed fully clothed, preparing to sleep first.

However, the bed suddenly shook, and when she turned her head, there was an additional voluptuous body beside her. It was Jiuying lying down next to her with complete peace of mind. The exotic fragrance on her body was so strong it was pungent, making Ning Fuyi pinch her nose and turn her head away.

"Aren't you a divine beast? Why do you need to squeeze into bed with me?" she said helplessly.

"I was an empress for several months at least. I've gotten used to sleeping in beds—I can't get accustomed to sleeping on the ground." Jiuying smiled sweetly.

"I suddenly remembered—you're friends with Ping'an, and I'm Ping'an's mama. By logic, shouldn't you also call me mama?" Jiuying said again.

Ning Fuyi rolled her eyes, forcibly closed them, and ignored her.

Her head hurt terribly, so her consciousness gradually blurred, her breathing became even, and she began to dream shallow dreams. In her dream was a woman crying, crying over her broken jade bracelet.

Ning Fuyi's mind suddenly became clear. She stared wide-eyed at the algae-patterned ceiling that was almost worn out from being stared at, speechless for a moment.

Chu Qingqiu seemed to really like that emerald jade bracelet.

Jiuying beside her had already begun snoring. Ning Fuyi sighed, lifted her legs, and sat up in the moonlight.

She took out the few pieces of broken jade she had seized from her prayer bead, enduring her headache as she began repairing them.