

Chapter 117-1

Xu Qingzhu's sentence breaks were strange.

Strange enough to make Liang Shi's heartbeat skip a few beats.

Following her strange sentence breaks to breathe, the hand suspended on her back suddenly tightened.

Liang Shi's fingertips pressed against her spine.

Xu Qingzhu was slender; her fingers resting on her butterfly bones¹ could pull her into her embrace without any effort.

The distance between the two grew closer.

The sound of Liang Shi swallowing in this quiet space was especially clear.

Gulp—

Her rolling throat touched the top of Xu Qingzhu's head, and Xu Qingzhu laughed softly, her body trembling with laughter.

Liang Shi knew she was talking about the content of their WeChat conversation today, deliberately teasing her again.

Liang Shi placed one hand over her butterfly bones, curling her fingers to tap lightly there, while her other hand rubbed her burning-hot ears.

"Stop teasing me." Liang Shi laughed helplessly. "I'm being serious, let's go to sleep."

After saying that, she muttered in a low voice: "I shouldn't have sent you that Weibo post."

"Which one?" Xu Qingzhu asked.

She wasn't deliberately trying to be seductive, it was just that in a quiet environment, people automatically lower their voices, making her speech sound like breathy whispers.

The warm breath from her breathing fell entirely on Liang Shi's neck, making that patch of skin itch.

Even her speech became somewhat uncomfortable, as if carrying a hoarse quality.

Liang Shi cleared her throat and coughed lightly. "The one from this evening."

"Unstoppable momentum²?" Xu Qingzhu asked.

Liang Shi: "....."

When Xu Qingzhu read those few words, it was very standard, somewhat like the pure broadcasting tone from the news broadcast, but her voice was low, carrying several notes of suggestiveness.

There was an indescribable, unclear meaning to it.

A perfectly normal idiom coming from her mouth made Liang Shi think of certain unspeakable scenes.

She couldn't resist.

Footnotes:

² Unstoppable momentum (势如破竹): Literally "势如破竹" (shì rú pò zhú), a Chinese idiom meaning "like splitting bamboo" - describing something that progresses swiftly and irresistibly. The phrase can carry suggestive undertones in romantic contexts.

Chapter 117-2

Liang Shi's hand moved upward, stroking Xu Qingzhu's soft hair, like smoothing a cat's fur. "Xu Qingzhu, go to sleep."

Her words carried a serious tone.

Xu Qingzhu's eyebrows furrowed slightly, her cool voice also rising a bit. "Are you being fierce with me?"

Liang Shi: "?"

She said helplessly, "How could that be?"

"But just now, that tone of yours..." Xu Qingzhu said, "I thought you were angry."

Liang Shi: ".....I'm not."

"You're still a bit impatient now." Xu Qingzhu paused, her tone becoming dejected. "Did I upset you? Or do you not like me mentioning your Weibo post?"

Liang Shi: "....."

As Xu Qingzhu spoke, she turned over in her embrace, propping up her head with one hand, creating distance between herself and Liang Shi's arm.

Even their intimate embrace now had a gap.

Suddenly, the wind in the room seemed to have grown eyes, brazenly sweeping through the gap, making Liang Shi feel a slight chill.

The hand suspended over her body also fell into emptiness.

Everything seemed to indicate that the other person was angry.

Liang Shi felt an inexplicable nervousness. She spoke to Xu Qingzhu in a low voice: "I didn't... I was the one who sent you the Weibo post, I didn't say you couldn't mention it."

Xu Qingzhu had her back to her, her voice muffled. "But you spoke very fiercely."

Liang Shi: ".....I really didn't. Why would I be fierce with you?"

"Maybe I got too close to you." Xu Qingzhu said, "I should have known... I made a mistake. I'm sorry."

Liang Shi: "....."

Inexplicably, Liang Shi felt this tone was very familiar, yet couldn't recall where she had heard it before.

At the moment, she could only focus on coaxing Xu Qingzhu.

Liang Shi wasn't good at this sort of thing to begin with, let alone coaxing people.

She rarely even said "I'm sorry." In the subject of interpersonal relationships, Liang Shi was considered a high-scoring student.

From beginning to end, she maintained a lukewarm distance with people, so these kinds of problems wouldn't arise.

At this moment, she didn't know what to do to make Xu Qingzhu stop being angry.

After thinking it over, all she could say was: "I wasn't being fierce with you."

Her gentle voice rang out in the quiet room, carrying a hint of pleading. She propped herself up and moved closer to Xu Qingzhu, but Xu Qingzhu shifted her body away from her.

After this happened twice, when Liang Shi saw she was about to fall off the bed, she immediately reached out and held her tightly.

This time it was Liang Shi who pressed close to Xu Qingzhu, hugging her tightly from behind. "Xu Qingzhu, don't be angry."

The corners of Xu Qingzhu's mouth curved up slightly. She wanted to laugh but could only hold it in, nearly giving herself internal injuries from suppressing it.

Although the laughter was almost impossible to suppress, she spoke in a muffled voice: "I'm not angry, just a little unhappy."

Xu Qingzhu borrowed her words: "Just that little bit."

"Then don't be unhappy either." Liang Shi said, "If you're unhappy, just say it, let me be unhappy instead."

When people are pushed to their limits, they can always learn some things without being taught.

For example, words to coax people.

She couldn't say sophisticated things, but she could say some straightforward ones.

Liang Shi said, "You being like this makes me panic."

Xu Qingzhu's shoulders trembled slightly, her voice also carrying several notes of sobbing. "I just feel apologetic. I got so close to you without your permission, and ended up making you dislike me. I won't do it again."

She seemed to be crying.

Liang Shi became even more nervous.

But at the same time, she thought of two problems.

One: If Xu Qingzhu is crying, how should she coax her?

Two: The misfortune value system¹ has come online—would she directly receive a level three punishment?

Liang Shi's heart ached from her crying. She nuzzled against her back, gently coaxing: "Teacher Xu, I don't dislike you getting close. Actually... I like it."

"You said it so reluctantly, you're just trying to coax me." Xu Qingzhu's choked voice sounded again. "Just now when I joked with you about the Weibo post, you got angry and were even fierce with me."

Liang Shi: "....."

"I really didn't." Liang Shi became even more flustered. "I wasn't reluctant at all. I'm just... embarrassed."

As she spoke, she licked her lips, burying her face in Xu Qingzhu's back. Her voice became even more muffled, saying somewhat embarrassedly: "I... I've never been in a relationship before, so I'm not very good at dealing with... you... don't be like this, it makes my heart ache."

Xu Qingzhu still wanted to tease her, asking: "How much does your heart ache?"

But after saying "how much does your heart," she couldn't hold it in anymore and broke character.

Liang Shi thought she was crying and immediately sat up to look at her, reaching to get her tissues. Then she saw Xu Qingzhu's eyes—bright and sparkling, carrying mischievous laughter.

Liang Shi sat there, stunned.

She couldn't even think about what she had just said.

Was it that this was her first relationship?

Or that her heart ached?

She had revealed her entire history...

Completely exposed.

And yet Xu Qingzhu was laughing, laughing so hard her stomach hurt.

Even her laughter was very restrained, without much sound, but those eyes were like a little fox whose prank had succeeded.

Footnote:

¹ Misfortune value system (噩运值系统): A system from the transmigration plot where the protagonist must complete tasks to avoid punishments. This has been referenced earlier in the story as part of Liang Shi's situation after transmigrating into the novel.

Chapter 117-3

Liang Shi's entire face turned bright red.

In her first twenty-five years, she had never experienced such a scene.

She instinctively raised her hand to rub her earlobe, and when she touched it, it was burning hot.

Her whole person was like a thoroughly ripened tomato.

After a long while, Liang Shi felt like she was about to suffocate before she finally exhaled her first breath, but her throat felt dry and she didn't know what to say.

Her mind was also completely blank.

Only after Xu Qingzhu had laughed enough did she say: "Teacher Liang, so you've never been in a relationship before?"

Liang Shi: "....."

What was so funny about this?

"Have you?" Liang Shi asked woodenly in return.

Only after asking did she pause.

What did a relationship matter—she was already married.

Liang Shi opened and closed her mouth, wanting to make up for what she had just said, but didn't know how to say it.

At this moment, it felt like she had lost all the face she'd accumulated over her first twenty-five years.

Liang Shi's light brown pupils glanced lightly toward Xu Qingzhu, her gaze as complicated as her mood.

Xu Qingzhu looked at her, restraining her laughter. Her cool voice still carried the hoarseness from just having let loose. "I've watched other people date."

"From Sally and Lin Luoxi's relationship to their reconciliation, I was on the side eating dog food¹ the whole time." Xu Qingzhu didn't hide it from her. "When I asked Xixi today how to deal with green tea girls², I learned a little from her."

Liang Shi: "....."

No wonder she felt Xu Qingzhu's words earlier were inexplicably familiar—they had the same effect as Liang Xinran's tactics.

Same medicine, different packaging³.

And she hadn't caught on.

When facing Liang Xinran, Liang Shi was unreasonably calm.

But facing Xu Qingzhu, she had no way to handle it at all.

When Xu Qingzhu was quiet and reserved, she was pure, quiet, and aloof, like a lotus on a snow-capped mountain. If you wanted to get close to her, you would inevitably have to experience polar cold.

But when she smiled, those eyes were like a little fox running wild through the mountains.

Liang Shi loved watching her feel free and unrestrained.

But this smile was built on all of her complex emotions, and Liang Shi felt very stifled inside, so stifled she didn't know what to say.

Her heart felt very blocked.

Liang Shi looked at her expressionlessly and ultimately said nothing, lying down on the other side of the bed.

The place that belonged to her, pulling the pillow away.

On this not-so-large bed, she had carved out a space for herself.

And she pulled away from Xu Qingzhu.

She covered herself with the blanket, turned off the light on her side, closed her eyes and said in a low voice: "Going to sleep."

Two very indifferent words.

She didn't lose her temper with Xu Qingzhu either, but from her indifferent tone, one could tell—she was angry.

Xu Qingzhu looked at her back, pressed her lips together to reflect for a few seconds, and asked cautiously: "Are you angry?"

Liang Shi: "No."

Her voice was very cold, though her tone was still gentle, just that her manner was very stiff.

A world of difference from when she had been holding Xu Qingzhu and coaxing her just moments ago.

"Then you're being fierce with me?" Xu Qingzhu said again.

Liang Shi: ".....Mm."

The sound of this "mm" wasn't loud, but anyone could hear her displeasure.

And she frankly admitted she was being fierce.

Xu Qingzhu was stunned for two seconds, but then was amused by her.

The room fell into a strange silence.

A moment later, Xu Qingzhu got up holding her pillow and went out the door.

The door was gently closed.

Liang Shi: "?"

Footnotes:

¹ Eating dog food (吃狗粮): Chinese internet slang meaning to witness other people's public displays of affection, making single people feel like they're being "fed dog food." It's a humorous way of saying you're watching a couple be sweet together.

² Green tea girl (绿茶): Chinese slang for a woman who appears innocent and pure on the surface but is actually manipulative, often used to describe someone who pretends to be naive while scheming. The term comes from the perceived "fresh and pure" image of green tea.

³ Same medicine, different packaging (换汤不换药): A Chinese idiom literally meaning "change the soup but not the medicine," referring to superficial changes that don't alter the essence of something.

//

Liang Shi, hidden in the darkness, suddenly opened her eyes, her gaze completely clear.

The complex emotions in her heart transformed into bewilderment and shock.

She just left like that?

Really not going to coax her?

Although... it seemed... there wasn't really a need to coax her either.

But Liang Shi did have a bit of hope in her heart.

And Xu Qingzhu had even taken her pillow with her.

So had it become Xu Qingzhu who was angry instead?

Angry enough to take her own pillow—was she planning to sleep outside?

Liang Shi was completely puzzled, but her heart felt stuffy.

Should she go explain to her again?

Liang Shi didn't know what kind of emotion that had been earlier. It seemed like there was some embarrassment from being teased, and also some shyness from having her entire past exposed. Mainly, when she saw Xu Qingzhu's uncontrollable laughter, she felt like she was being laughed at for never having been in a relationship.

.....That world hadn't really allowed her to date.

And besides, she had been so busy, she wouldn't have had time to accompany a girlfriend.

Xiao Bai had once said she was somewhat of a relationship brain¹.

On all topics regarding a significant other, Liang Shi would be infinitely tolerant. For instance, once during an interview program, the host asked Liang Shi, "If you date someone in the future and your partner really misses you, what would you do?"

Liang Shi visualized the question, imagining a crybaby girlfriend in her mind, and immediately said: "Go be with her."

The host asked again: "What if you're still filming?"

"Finish filming quickly and go see her," Liang Shi said.

This answer was teased by Xiao Bai, who said she really knew how to coax fans.

But Liang Shi replied with complete sincerity: "I'm being serious."

Xiao Bai was stunned and called her a relationship brain.

Liang Shi didn't understand what "relationship brain" meant at the time, but later when filming, her co-star played a character who was definitely a relationship brain—making ginger sugar water² for her partner, immediately rushing over when her partner said they missed her, and even thoughtfully making excuses for her boyfriend when he had no time for her.

Oh right, Xiao Bai had called that behavior "self-targeting relationship brain."

The entire internet was telling that character not to be so foolish.

It even made it onto the hot search, although the production team had bought it.

But what Liang Shi didn't say was that she could understand all of that character's behaviors.

And didn't find them unreasonable at all.

Dating... isn't it about being tolerant of the other person? Who told you to like them?

If she's busy, you should be more proactive.

After all, having a girlfriend isn't easy.

If the girlfriend isn't clingy, she could be clingy too.

If the girlfriend found her clingy, she could find something to do on her own.

Liang Shi had fantasized beautifully back then, she just lacked practical experience.

Before she died in that place, what she thought wasn't: "I still haven't cleared my name."

But rather: "In this short life, I've never been in a relationship."

Was it embarrassing to have never been in a relationship?

It wasn't embarrassing.

But why did Xu Qingzhu laugh?

And laugh so happily.

Liang Shi felt she was being mocked, and the feeling in her heart was too complex for her limited vocabulary to summarize accurately.

She could only sigh.

Sitting on the bed, she looked toward the door that had just been gently closed, irritably running her hand through her hair. Should she... go out and apologize?

She had spoken too harshly just now, hadn't she?

Xu Qingzhu had been pampered growing up, such a little princess had definitely never suffered this kind of grievance.

You could tell from her family—certainly no one had ever been fierce with her.

Liang Shi thought, as an Alpha, it was right for her to go coax the spoiled Xu Qingzhu.

She kept building herself up psychologically, but if she went to coax her, she would inevitably be like before, unable to speak well, and would be mocked by Xu Qingzhu again.

She had never coaxed anyone before, had no experience.

Liang Shi's heart was twisted like a pretzel, agonizing over this.

She even picked up her phone and started searching for "how to coax an angry..."

After typing this far, she suddenly paused, thought for a few seconds, then with trembling fingers typed—girlfriend.

The complete question was: How to coax an angry girlfriend?

The answers that came up were: Buy a car, buy flowers, buy a diamond ring.

Footnotes:

¹ Relationship brain (恋爱脑): Chinese internet slang describing someone who prioritizes their romantic relationship above all else, often making decisions based solely on their partner's needs and potentially losing themselves in the process. It can be used both critically and affectionately depending on context.

² Ginger sugar water (姜糖水): A traditional Chinese remedy made by boiling ginger and sugar in water, commonly prepared to warm the body, aid digestion, or help with menstrual discomfort. Making it for someone is considered a caring, nurturing gesture.

.....

Late at night like this, Liang Shi was truly powerless.

The slightly more reliable answers were: Say nice things to her, like: "Baby, don't be angry, it's all my fault."

Or: "Come here, let me hold you, okay?"

Or again: "Tell me what I did wrong, okay? I promise there won't be a next time."

And yet again: "Hold her and kiss her passionately, kiss her until her legs go weak and she'll forget about being angry."

.....

Liang Shi nervously clicked in, then shakily clicked out.

None of them seemed very reliable.

She irritably put her phone back on the nightstand and stared at that closed door in a daze.

Xu Qingzhu wouldn't really be outside crying, would she?

Liang Shi perked up her ears to listen—it seemed like there was the sound of water.

Then she was truly sinful. Why did she have to be fierce with her for no reason?

Liang Shi recalled her smile from earlier. Honestly, it was a rarely seen kind of beautiful.

The dim yellow light shone on her, the light orange silk pajamas made her skin appear even whiter, that flawless face was like a gift from the Creator, with nothing that didn't make one's heart flutter.

Her soft hair spread out on the light-colored sheets like seaweed, naturally enchanting.

Around her neck she wore a silver necklace, with a galaxy pendant in the middle—pure and romantic.

Purity and seductiveness combined perfectly in her.

One bit more would be excessive, one bit less would be insufficient.

Even now, recalling it made her want to trace her fingers lightly across that collarbone.

Liang Shi somewhat regretfully patted her forehead, her heart growing even more conflicted.

A few seconds later, she finally couldn't hold back, threw off the blanket she'd covered herself with when angry, and resignedly got out of bed.

It's just an apology.

It's just being laughed at by Xu Qingzhu.

Either way was better than making Xu Qingzhu cry.

If she cried, she would also be punished by the misfortune value system.

Mm, she was only going to avoid punishment.

Moreover, she had been wrong earlier too, so she should go coax her.

Xu Qingzhu had coaxed her so many times, coaxing her once wouldn't hurt.

After giving herself enough psychological preparation, Liang Shi didn't even put on shoes and walked out barefoot.

The floor in late autumn was very cold, and the autumn wind mercilessly beat against the window frames, making even the room seem devoid of warmth.

Not like when the two of them had been together.

Liang Shi had just taken two steps when the door handle turned. The instant the door was pushed open, Liang Shi flew back to the bed and covered herself with the blanket again, simultaneously closing her eyes.

Clearly she had already built up her psychological preparation, yet still couldn't face it proactively.

Only Xu Qingzhu's bedside lamp remained on in the room, with not much light.

As Liang Shi lay there, her heartbeat drummed like thunder.

She heard Xu Qingzhu's footsteps sound in the room, and heard those footsteps coming toward her.

That cool voice seemed to have just drunk ice, carrying several notes of coldness: "Asleep?"

Liang Shi pressed her lips together, not knowing how to respond, her hand covered by the blanket scratching at the sheets a few times.

Xu Qingzhu gradually drew closer, carrying a slight chill on her body.

Liang Shi's eyes weren't completely closed. In the hazy lamplight, she saw an orange figure and smelled the fresh scent of oranges mixed with the fragrance of strawberry Baileys.

It smelled slightly intoxicating.

Liang Shi gently held her breath, her eyelashes trembling slightly, not knowing how to maintain her usual composure.

A few seconds later, Xu Qingzhu suddenly exhaled. Unlike the heat from before, it carried several notes of coldness.

"Still pretending?" Xu Qingzhu's cool voice sounded by her ear, and then Liang Shi felt her ear being enveloped by alternating hot and cold wetness.

It was just a brief touch, yet it still brought her tremendous impact.

Xu Qingzhu called to her: "Liang Shi, you dropped an eyelash."

Liang Shi: "....."

Chapter 117-6

Liang Shi couldn't keep pretending. She opened her still-clear eyes, and her light brown pupils reflected Xu Qingzhu's figure.

She was crouched by the bed, the sleeves of her pajamas rolled up a small section, revealing her fair forearms. Those eyes stared at her fixedly.

Her lips were a vivid red, carrying a shimmering luster.

On the nightstand was a glass of transparent water, without any rising mist—it wasn't a cup of hot water.

After their eyes met for a moment, Xu Qingzhu suddenly leaned in, her teeth landing on Liang Shi's collarbone.

Her lips carried a coolness, making Liang Shi—who always had a warm body temperature—shiver.

Hot and cold alternating.

Xu Qingzhu's teeth lightly grazed across Liang Shi's collarbone, not in a straight line.

But leaping about, like dancing.

Leaving one spot, then landing on another.

Not neglecting any area.

Liang Shi went from initial discomfort to gradually adapting well.

Cold and heat kept alternating. Liang Shi's hand unconsciously fell on the back of Xu Qingzhu's head, her fingers hooking around her soft hair.

The hand stroking her hair moved from top to bottom, as if encouraging her to continue.

A moment later, Xu Qingzhu withdrew. Only then did Liang Shi softly exhale.

Her voice carried hoarseness: "What are you doing?"

Xu Qingzhu was frank and open: "Coaxing you."

Liang Shi: "....."

"And..." Xu Qingzhu moved closer to her, her arms resting on the edge of the bed, saying in a low voice: "Didn't they already say so?"

Liang Shi swallowed.

She didn't quite dare look into Xu Qingzhu's eyes.

That pure face was expressionlessly saying embarrassing things, creating a kind of abstinent beauty.

Yet Xu Qingzhu leaned by her ear and said in a breathy voice: "I want to dance on jiejie's¹ collarbone."

Liang Shi: "....."

Liang Shi deeply regretted sending that Weibo screenshot to Xu Qingzhu today.

—Things like "dancing on the collarbone" were only things fans would joke about, no one would take them seriously.

—And no one would actually do them in real life.

—We don't need to learn these things.

Liang Shi's words surged up one after another, but when she saw Xu Qingzhu's face, she chose to swallow all these words down.

The feeling of dancing on the collarbone... wasn't bad.

Liang Shi closed her eyes, then said somewhat through gritted teeth: "Who did you learn all this from?"

But Xu Qingzhu looked at her and seriously asked: "If I tell you, can I get in bed?"

A low posture.

Yet those familiar with her knew she should be high and noble.

Cool and noble—her being like this was just to coax Liang Shi.

The person being coaxed had only one thought in her heart—what virtue, what ability did she have to deserve this?

Liang Shi's heart softened beyond recognition, a small space collapsed inside, and that place now only held Xu Qingzhu.

Liang Shi moved back a bit, leaving space in her embrace for her. She claimed it was: "You're cold, I've warmed this spot up."

Xu Qingzhu didn't expose her either, drawing out a long "oh," and before getting into bed, confessed: "Xixi taught me."

Xu Qingzhu didn't hesitate to sell out her teammate: "And Sally."

Liang Shi: "....."

She said expressionlessly: "Stay away from them from now on."

They've all been led astray.

Xu Qingzhu nestled in her embrace, finding a comfortable position. When she looked up to talk to her, her lips would occasionally brush against her chin—an elusive touch that always teased one's heart until it itched.

Xu Qingzhu asked: "You don't like it?"

Liang Shi: "....."

Liang Shi changed the subject: "I'm going to the crew the day after tomorrow morning. Xu Qingzhu, you take good care of yourself."

Xu Qingzhu said lazily: "I know."

A moment later, Xu Qingzhu asked again: "You still haven't answered me—you don't like it?"

Liang Shi's hand curled up and then opened, not knowing how to answer.

Xu Qingzhu's cool voice sounded again: "If you don't like it, next time you encounter these kinds of comments, just reply to them: I don't like it."

Liang Shi: "....."

Liang Shi pulled away from her, feeling for the first time that she seemed somewhat noisy...

Thinking of what she'd searched for earlier, Liang Shi was still contemplating what to do.

Footnote:

¹ Jiejie (姐姐): Literally "older sister," but also used as an affectionate term for an older woman or girlfriend in romantic contexts. Here Xu Qingzhu is using it playfully/flirtatiously to address Liang Shi.

Chapter 117-7

Xu Qingzhu then said: "Teacher Liang, you need to treat everyone equally."

Her voice carried several notes of laziness, the tail end rising, as if teasing, but to Liang Shi's ears it was incredibly alluring.

Or perhaps the speaker had no such intention, but the listener read into it.

"You can't have it be okay when girlfriend-fans say it." Xu Qingzhu paused, the second half of this sentence enunciated extremely clearly, the pace deliberate: "But not okay when your wife does it."

Liang Shi: "....."

Xu Qingzhu continued: "You can't have double stan... mmph..."

Before she could finish, everything was swallowed up.

Liang Shi said somewhat frantically: "I don't have double standards."

Her words were also unclear, carrying several notes of frustration: "You already did it, why are you still asking if I like it or not?"

Xu Qingzhu: "....."

During a gap, Xu Qingzhu said shamelessly: "I need to confirm whether I successfully coaxed you."

Liang Shi propped herself up at her side, with a bit of an argumentative intent: "When I was doing it, I didn't ask you if you were comfortable or not."

Xu Qingzhu's eyes became clear and bright, with a look of seriously wanting to discuss this with her: "You can ask."

Liang Shi: "....."

She was truly defeated.

Liang Shi poked her waist, laughing somewhat helplessly, but after restraining her laughter, kissed her.

After the kiss ended, Xu Qingzhu asked her while catching her breath: "What are you doing?"

Liang Shi: ".....Coaxing you."

A moment later, Liang Shi said in a muffled voice: "I shouldn't have been fierce with you just now."

Xu Qingzhu's gaze was somewhat unfocused, but she smiled and said: "So?"

Liang Shi: ".....I'm atoning now."

A few minutes later, Liang Shi's tongue was getting a bit numb, but she withdrew in time.

She asked in a hoarse voice: "Teacher Xu, are you a bit happier now?"
