

Chapter 88-1

Liang Shi spent the entire afternoon at Liang Xinzhou's home.

Because Yu Wan knew a lot—she practically reconstructed the entire incident.

Yu Wan's family had previously had a long-term partnership with Qida Company, so they knew Qi Xiangui, and naturally also knew Yang Jiani.

In Yu Wan's impression, Yang Jiani was a complete idealist. Yu Wan was still young when she met her, and at that time, Yu Wan affectionately called her "Auntie." Back then, the Yang family was still a wealthy household in Haizhou City. But circumstances changed overnight—the Yang family went bankrupt and was liquidated, and Yang Jiani married Qi Xiangui in that critical moment.

Yang Jiani was a pampered young lady from a wealthy family, raised with money. Marrying down to Qi Xiangui, she was naturally still coddled and indulged.

The original Qida didn't have its current scale. It was Yang Jiani who, relying on her family's former connections, single-handedly elevated Qida to its current position.

But after obtaining Yang Jiani's connections and resources, Qi Xiangui always felt inferior. Especially since Yang Jiani had been spoiled growing up and had quite a temper.

When they first got married, Yang Jiani often lost her temper at Qi Xiangui. Later, when Qi Xiangui's business improved, he would go out socializing and drinking with hostesses<sup>1</sup>. The old dance halls were a mixed bag of people, and many transactions were conducted openly. Qi Xiangui frequently visited such places. When Yang Jiani found out, she made a scene and demanded a divorce.

As a result, Qi Xiangui beat her—and broke one of her ribs.

Once domestic violence begins, it can never be stopped.

Yang Jiani had originally wanted a divorce, but then discovered she was pregnant. Alone in this world with no one to turn to, the child in her belly was her only blood relative.

So she endured for the sake of the child.

Everything that followed was like the fate of all domestic violence victims in this world.

Yang Jiani endured for the child's sake, but Qi Xiangui only escalated his abuse.

When Yang Jiani was seven months pregnant, he nearly beat her into a miscarriage.

The child was saved only because Yang Jiani lay in bed completely immobile, receiving IV fluids for an entire month. During that time, Yu Wan had accompanied her mother to visit Yang Jiani as she lay in bed.

Yu Wan was very young at the time. When she saw Yang Jiani, she would comfort her not to be sad.

In her memory, Yang Jiani would gently stroke her face and say, "In the future, Auntie will have a cute little child just like you. Auntie won't be sad."

When leaving the hospital, Yu Wan would ask her mother, "Why doesn't Auntie Yang get a divorce? Uncle Qi isn't good to her."

"Because Auntie Yang has nowhere to go now," Yu Wan's mother replied.

Once you enter a wealthy family, you're in as deep as the sea<sup>2</sup>.

In these wealthy families, everyone has their own troubles to bear, and no one can pull anyone else out of the abyss.

Yu Wan's mother had taught Yu Wan this truth from an early age.

Yu Wan's family later gradually grew distant from the Qi family, and she rarely saw Yang Jiani anymore.

It was only when Qi Jiao was in her third year of middle school<sup>3</sup> that Yu Wan learned of the news that Qi Jiao had attempted suicide by jumping off a building. She was shocked when she got home, but her mother said she had been rescued.

That spring was particularly long. Snow was still falling in April, covering the branches that had already sprouted new buds. Qi Jiao stood on the rooftop of the school building and, with almost no hesitation, jumped.

But the rescue team arrived in time. She landed on thick cushioning mats and only injured her leg.

Yu Wan had even visited her once. By then, Yu Wan was already in university.

When Yang Jiani entered the hospital room, Qi Jiao would shrink back in fear.

After that came an early summer when the branches were growing wildly. Yu Wan saw her mother sitting dazedly on the sofa, holding a photo of Qi Jiao.

When Yu Wan asked what had happened, she learned that Yang Jiani had accidentally pushed Qi Jiao down the stairs. She had hit her head—and died from the impact.

Yu Wan's mother and Qiu Zimin had been going to see Yang Jiani at that time and witnessed the scene with their own eyes.

...

It was a sad and heavy matter to speak of.

If Liang Shi hadn't brought it up today, Yu Wan would have buried this matter in her heart for the rest of her life.

Yu Wan wasn't very clear about what happened afterward. She only knew that Yang Jiani had somehow found someone who looked almost exactly like Qi Jiao, who became the new Qi Jiao.

Apart from them, no one knew the real Qi Jiao was already dead.

After hearing all this, Liang Xinzhou's brows were deeply furrowed. He asked coldly, "Yang Jiani has a tendency for domestic violence?"

Yu Wan and Liang Shi both nodded in unison. "Yes."

Then Liang Xinzhou looked at Liang Shi. "In your memory..."

He suddenly stopped mid-question, not knowing how to ask.

But Liang Shi smiled and said, "I remember Qi Jiao. We were locked in the basement together. Yang Jiani..."

When mentioning this name, Liang Shi didn't describe her specific actions. She just smiled bitterly. "She's a madwoman."

"Why did she send you there?" Liang Xinzhou's voice was so cold it was nearly freezing. "When did this happen?"

"I can't remember clearly," Liang Shi said. "But there was definitely such a period. As for why, you'd have to ask the person involved."

Liang Shi was smiling, but it was a very distant smile. "Big Brother, I don't really want to make things difficult for you. So you can pretend you don't know about any of this, and you don't have to confront her on my behalf. But if you want me to pretend nothing happened, I can't do that."

The subtext was—you don't have to help me, but you can't stop me.

After a long while, Liang Xinzhou let out a deep breath. "Keep what I've given you. Do whatever you want to do. I won't stop you."

Liang Shi smiled lightly. "Then thank you, Big Brother. If you ever want it back someday, I'll return it to you."

"Have you thought about how you're going to do it?" Liang Xinzhou asked.

Liang Shi lowered her eyes and shook her head. "Not yet. There's still too little that I can remember."

Liang Shi didn't ask Yu Wan why she hadn't called the police back then.

A mother accidentally pushing her daughter down the stairs, causing accidental death... it was hard to say.

That Yang Jiani could be deranged enough to quickly find a replacement was beyond everyone's expectations.

Yu Wan said she had seen Yang Jiani at the Liang residence a few times afterward, but she never greeted her. She didn't even dare to look directly at that girl, for fear of having nightmares.

Liang Shi was quite surprised that Yu Wan could be so frank with her.

Before leaving, Yu Wan also advised her not to provoke Yang Jiani, because that woman was a lunatic.

No one knew what a lunatic might do.

Liang Shi agreed.

After returning home that evening and telling Xu Qingzhu about this matter, the two fell into a long silence.

Xu Qingzhu was probably thinking of Su Yao. That night, she video-called Su Yao for over half an hour.

After learning the truth, Liang Shi wanted to contact Gu Xingyue several times but kept putting down her phone.

Gu Xingyue must be in a difficult position right now. She didn't want to pressure her anymore.

---

Footnotes:

<sup>1</sup> Drinking with hostesses (喝花酒, hē huā jiǔ): A phrase referring to the practice of men visiting entertainment establishments where hostesses pour drinks and provide companionship. In the context of business culture, this was often associated with shady dealings, corruption, and infidelity.

<sup>2</sup> Once you enter a wealthy family, you're in as deep as the sea (豪門一入深似海): A famous Chinese saying derived from a Tang Dynasty poem. It means that once you marry into a wealthy and powerful family, you become trapped in its complex web of relationships, obligations, and secrets, making it extremely difficult to leave or maintain your independence.

<sup>3</sup> Third year of middle school (初三): In the Chinese education system, this refers to the final year of junior high school, typically when students are around 14-15 years old.

Chapter 88-2

//

The night before joining the production crew, Liang Shi asked Xu Qingzhu to go out for dinner.

The location was set at a Western restaurant not far from their neighborhood.

Because there was a medical university nearby, many of the customers were college students—quite a few men and women alike.

The restaurant's popularity exceeded Liang Shi's expectations. This was already the best one she had found after checking reviews.

It perfectly met the System's requirements: cello accompaniment and aromatic red wine.

Liang Shi first pulled out a chair for Xu Qingzhu, then sat down across from her. When the server brought the menu, Liang Shi pointed at Xu Qingzhu. "Give it to her."

Xu Qingzhu didn't stand on ceremony either. She ordered skillfully, and Liang Shi simply said, "I'll have the same as her."

On the stage, the cellist wore a blue evening gown and elegantly drew the bow across the strings. The entire restaurant was enveloped in an atmosphere called "romance."

No one in the restaurant was being loud, but quite a few gazes fell upon the two of them.

This was probably because there were many students here, while one of them wore a casual-cut light-colored suit, and the other wore a dark suit jacket over a moon-white, low-cut, waist-hugging long dress.

Xu Qingzhu's long hair was let down. Before the food arrived, Liang Shi passed her the hair tie from her arm, but Xu Qingzhu shook her head. "Too lazy."

She said "lazy," not "I don't want to tie it up."

Liang Shi paused, then asked hesitantly, "Should I help you?"

Xu Qingzhu sat there, her slender back ramrod straight. Her voice was very soft, blending with the cello music—you couldn't hear it unless you listened carefully.

She said, "If you could."

Liang Shi smiled helplessly, thinking there was nothing she couldn't do.

It was a bit warm in the Western restaurant. She took off her suit jacket, leaving only the long dress underneath. Around her neck hung a blue necklace that resembled a sea of stars. Her brown wavy curls fell to one side, while the other side, with her ear exposed, sported blue tassel earrings that seemed to be from the same collection as her necklace.

Only after she removed her suit jacket did the bracelet on her wrist become visible. The ordinary silver bangle, not an outdated style, was worn by her with the quality of haute couture. Complementing the silver bangle was a blue bracelet.

Only the hair tie on her other arm was black.

Liang Shi's long dress was off-shoulder, with a layer of glitter powder on her collarbone that was particularly dazzling.

It was only after entering this restaurant that Xu Qingzhu carefully examined Liang Shi's outfit. She suddenly felt that her own professional attire was inadequate.

Liang Shi's ensemble could go straight to a red carpet event.

In this restaurant, it wasn't just Xu Qingzhu staring at her—quite a few people had their eyes fixed on Liang Shi.

Someone at the neighboring table even said, "That girl is so gorgeous."

"Hey... she looks familiar."

"Come on, every pretty girl looks familiar to you."

"No! I remember now—the one who trended last time!"

"Which one?"

"..."

After rummaging through their phone, they handed it over. "The lady in red from Qingyi University. She changed her clothes today, but she still slays me."

"If your girlfriend hears that, you're dead for real!"

"Which girlfriend are you talking about?"

"..."

The table not far away seemed to be friends who had come together, simply here to eat Western food. Two girls, and while chatting, their gazes never left Liang Shi.

As it happened, Xu Qingzhu had good hearing. Even mixed with the gentle cello music, every word of their conversation fell into Xu Qingzhu's ears without missing a single detail.

Xu Qingzhu had also seen that trending topic last time.

#Qingyi University Lady in Red#—which later spawned the hashtag #All the Beautiful People Enter the Entertainment Industry#.

Liang Shi's fan count had skyrocketed that day, and the "Mo Guang"<sup>1</sup> production crew had also gotten a wave of promotional buzz.

Xu Qingzhu had stared at the trending topic for quite a while. The comment section was full of: "Wifey, let me smooch<sup>2</sup>," "Big sis, let me smooch."

Looking at it made her feel...

She didn't know what she felt, but anyway, Xu Qingzhu drank a lot of water that day.

While those two were chatting, Liang Shi had already gotten up and walked over to Xu Qingzhu's side. All she could hear was the music.

The cellist's skill level was average—probably a part-time student from a nearby university's music department. It could only be described as passable, still a ways off from a professional cellist.

Liang Shi stood behind Xu Qingzhu, using her ten fingers like a comb to run through her hair.

Xu Qingzhu's hair hadn't been styled much and was very smooth. She had never dyed her hair, but her hair color wasn't deep black—it leaned more toward brown, which particularly complemented her skin tone.

Liang Shi left two strands by her ears and gathered the rest in her palm, wrapping the tie around three times. Then she tugged at the roots to leave some slack so it wouldn't pull on her scalp.

---

Footnotes:

<sup>1</sup> Mo Guang (餘光): The title of the drama Liang Shi is filming. The Chinese title "餘光" literally means "peripheral vision" or "lingering light/afterglow."

<sup>2</sup> Let me smooch (貼貼, tiē tiē): A popular Chinese internet slang term expressing affection, admiration, or the desire to be close to someone. Literally meaning "stick together" or "cuddle," it's commonly used by fans to express their love for celebrities or attractive people they admire.

Chapter 88-3

Xu Qingzhu sat quietly. Only when Liang Shi was nearly done tying her hair did she tease, "Teacher Liang, with this outfit today, are you planning to walk the red carpet?"

She had a habit of pausing when she spoke, and that pause made her smile deepen. Her slender, fair hand lifted and landed on Liang Shi's waist, casually giving it a light pinch.

But Liang Shi winced in pain. She looked down at Xu Qingzhu, her hand naturally grasping hers. "What are you doing?"

Xu Qingzhu teased, "Your waist is really slender."

"Can't compare to yours." Liang Shi said as she set her hand down, explaining, "I didn't have to work today, so I did my makeup at home."

"Really beautiful." Xu Qingzhu praised without reservation. "You've got that female celebrity vibe now."

Liang Shi: "..."

She returned to her seat and raised her hand to brush the long hair hanging in front of her to her back. Even this casual gesture appeared enchanting and captivating.

"Teacher Xu, are you complimenting me?" Liang Shi asked very sincerely.

Xu Qingzhu nodded, raised an eyebrow, and smiled with curved lips. "Why wouldn't I be?"

"I misunderstood then." Liang Shi said, "Every time Teacher Xu compliments someone, it's hard to tell."

Xu Qingzhu: "..."

She glanced at Liang Shi, her voice slowing down, her pace unhurried. "Likewise."

"Such a nice atmosphere." Liang Shi was the first to call a truce. "Let's just eat properly."

"I didn't say anything." Xu Qingzhu's gaze happened to sweep across Liang Shi's collarbone. "Teacher Liang, how many coins can you balance on your collarbone?"

Liang Shi: "..."

"Want to try?" Liang Shi said provocatively.

Xu Qingzhu pressed her lips together. "We'll try when we get home."

Liang Shi lowered her head and chuckled softly, but her hair suddenly fell forward, nearly landing on her plate. Xu Qingzhu reached out to brush it back for her and asked, "Why don't you tie it up? Can't female celebrities tie their hair when eating?"

Liang Shi: "..."

"Do all you female CEOs have to tie your hair up when eating?" Liang Shi retorted.

Xu Qingzhu froze for two seconds, then nodded. "Yes, and it's my wife who ties it for me."

Liang Shi: "..."

Liang Shi's ears suddenly turned bright red.

She pinched her own earlobe. "Alright, Teacher Xu, let's eat."

In this round of passive-aggressive banter, she had lost.

It was mainly Xu Qingzhu's fault... she was too formidable!

Liang Shi comforted herself internally—these businesspeople would stop at nothing!

Their tactics were extremely despicable!

Xu Qingzhu smiled and raised her hand to ask a server for a hair tie.

She slipped the hair tie onto her finger, her tone teasing. "Miss Celebrity, do I have the honor of tying your hair?"

Liang Shi: "...Thank you, President Xu. The honor is mine."

Xu Qingzhu stood up, walked over to her side, and quickly finished tying her hair.

But the moment she finished, she suddenly leaned down, her arm resting on Liang Shi's shoulder. She tugged Liang Shi's off-shoulder dress up slightly to cover her shoulders a bit more. Her lips drew close to Liang Shi's ear, her breath spilling entirely into Liang Shi's ear, making her whole body feel hot and tingly.

To others, it looked like she was kissing her ear.

But Xu Qingzhu whispered to her, "Being able to tie Teacher Liang's hair is my honor."

Liang Shi: "..."

Her heartbeat accelerated in an instant. She couldn't even hear the elegant cello music in the restaurant anymore—she could only hear the sound of her own heartbeat.

Thump—thump—

Xu Qingzhu returned to her seat and smiled with curved lips. "Eat up."

Liang Shi quickly lowered her eyes, not daring to look anymore.

The elegant cello music soon disappeared, replaced by instrumental music playing through the speakers. The romantic atmosphere instantly diminished by half.

When the server came by again, Liang Shi politely inquired, "Where's your cellist?"

The server apologized, "Sorry, miss. The cellist had something at school and left. The replacement pianist won't arrive for another half hour."

Liang Shi said helplessly, "Alright."

Other customers were also asking about this one after another. Xu Qingzhu finished the steak on her plate and suddenly asked, "Do you really want to hear cello music?"

Liang Shi was startled. "Huh?"

Before she could say "Not really," Xu Qingzhu had already stood up and removed her suit jacket, revealing the white shirt underneath.

It was a loose fit that made her look even more slender. She undid her shirt cuffs, pulled down her hair tie, and unfastened the top button that had been buttoned all the way up, revealing a silver necklace and her delicate collarbone.

Liang Shi was stunned. The words she had prepared took a turn and were swallowed back. Almost without thinking, she blurted out, "How many coins can you balance on your collarbone?"

Xu Qingzhu: "..."

Xu Qingzhu's hand paused while rolling up her sleeve. She smiled lightly. "We'll see tonight when we get back."

Her words were flirtatious and enticing. Though her voice was still cool and clear, it sounded soft and lingering, stirring one's heart and mind.

Xu Qingzhu turned and walked to the counter, lightly tapping her knuckles on it, negotiating something unknown with the staff.

Then she walked toward the idle cello.

Xu Qingzhu sat there, positioned the cello, and gently drew the bow across the strings. A melodious cello piece began to fill the restaurant, even more soothing than before.

Liang Shi didn't know much about the cello, so she didn't know what piece she was playing.

But the melody was sometimes soaring, sometimes deep, sometimes like ten thousand galloping horses, sometimes like a babbling stream.

As the saying goes: experts see the technique, while laymen watch the spectacle<sup>1</sup>.

As a layman, Liang Shi simply felt the spectacle was wonderful.

To her ears, Xu Qingzhu's performance was much better than the previous one.

Xu Qingzhu sat within the spotlight, naturally exuding a quiet and gentle beauty that left people mesmerized.

When the piece ended, Xu Qingzhu set the cello upright beside her and bowed with the bow in hand to express her thanks. Applause erupted throughout the restaurant.

At the very front of the performance stage stood a microphone. Only after placing the cello properly did Xu Qingzhu walk to the microphone. She looked toward Liang Shi: "I dedicate this piece to Miss Liang. Thank you, Miss Liang, for tonight's dinner."

---

Footnotes:

<sup>1</sup> Experts see the technique, while laymen watch the spectacle (內行看門道，外行看熱鬧): A Chinese proverb meaning that experts can appreciate the skill and subtleties behind something, while non-experts can only enjoy the surface-level entertainment or excitement without understanding the deeper craft involved.

Chapter 88-4

//

Liang Shi was still lost in amazement at how well Xu Qingzhu could play the cello.

But on the way back, Xu Qingzhu actually had her pull the car over to the side of the road and went to a supermarket to get a bunch of coins.

Liang Shi: "..."

After returning home, Liang Shi stood in the living room and asked her, "Are we really testing this?"

"I said we'd try when we got home," Xu Qingzhu said. "I've already gotten the coins."

Liang Shi: "..."

Liang Shi pulled her off-shoulder dress all the way down, turning it into a strapless dress, fully exposing her collarbone.

Xu Qingzhu called out to her, "Bend over."

Liang Shi bent over. Xu Qingzhu placed coins on her collarbone. After placing three, there was still space. Liang Shi was waiting for her to place the fourth one when, completely without warning, Xu Qingzhu bit down on Liang Shi's collarbone.

Just like Liang Shi had done at the beach that day—the motion was gentle, teeth lightly grazing across her skin, biting slowly and tenderly.

Her lips fell on Liang Shi's skin, softly kissing and sucking.

A moment later, Xu Qingzhu pulled away, casually collecting the three coins. Her voice was the same as usual. "Test complete."

If you listened carefully, you could hear the slight tremor in the tail of her voice, her breathing unsteady.

Xu Qingzhu shook the coins in her palm, producing a crisp clinking sound.

Liang Shi looked completely dazed.

Xu Qingzhu said, "Returning the favor."

//

The day of the boot ceremony<sup>1</sup> was bright and sunny—rare good weather for late autumn in Haizhou City.

The location was in the suburbs of Haizhou City. Liang Shi packed her luggage simply and drove to the destination in high spirits.

She had experienced many boot ceremonies before, but this one was special.

This was the first boot ceremony she had attended since coming to this world.

Aside from the temporary role she had helped with last time, her first role was an impressive Female Lead #3<sup>2</sup>—quite a high starting point in the entertainment industry.

Because the boot ceremony was scheduled for 9 AM and it took over an hour to drive from home to the destination, plus she needed to get her hair and makeup done after arriving, Liang Shi left early. On the way, she received a message from Xu Qingzhu: 【You left?】

Liang Shi replied concisely: 【Mm-hmm.】

Xu Qingzhu quickly sent back: 【Wishing Teacher Liang a successful start! o/】

Followed by a very cute emoticon.

Liang Shi was driving, so she sent her a voice message: "Message received. Thank you, Teacher Xu."

Xu Qingzhu had probably just woken up. Her cool voice carried a hint of laziness, still a bit nasally, sounding soft and adorable. "Focus on driving."

Liang Shi felt like a feather had tickled her heart. The corners of her mouth unconsciously curved upward. "Got it. I made you breakfast. Remember to eat before going to work."

"Mm." The voice messages Xu Qingzhu sent were all very short. After saying "mm," she seemed to think for a moment. It also sounded like she hadn't fully woken up. After a pause, she said, "Act well. Don't embarrass yourself."

Liang Shi: "..."

She sent a meme.

Xu Qingzhu didn't reply again.

Sunlight spilled onto her car. She cracked the window open slightly, and the not-too-cold autumn breeze blew in, making her hair dance.

After Liang Shi arrived at the set, a staff member led her to the dressing room. On the way, she received a phone call from Gu Xingyue.

Gu Xingyue's voice on the phone was so despairing it had lost all vitality, yet it was calm and cold. "Can you help arrange for me to meet Gu Zhaoyuan?"

—"I'm willing to make a deal with you."

Liang Shi hadn't expected to receive a call from Gu Xingyue at this time.

The set was bustling with people coming and going, the noise almost drowning out Gu Xingyue's voice on the other end. Liang Shi followed the staff member while covering one ear with her hand, asking, "What did you say?"

"I said." Gu Xingyue took a deep breath on the other end, as if mustering all her courage, and repeated, "I'm willing to make a deal with you."

Liang Shi suddenly stopped in her tracks. She asked nervously, "Where are you?"

Through the phone, Liang Shi could hear the howling wind.

The wind was very strong. Combined with Gu Xingyue's voice, it sounded like it had been crumpled up and thrown into the wind, ready to be scattered to pieces if you weren't careful.

Liang Shi immediately thought of a rooftop, but Gu Xingyue said, "Don't worry. I won't kill myself. Help me arrange a meeting with Gu Zhaoyuan, and I'll give you everything you want."

Liang Shi finally felt relieved. "That's good then. Don't act impulsively. I'll help you contact Gu Zhaoyuan and keep it away from Yang Jiani. Live well, okay?"

"Mm." Gu Xingyue's voice was very cold, completely at odds with her previously gentle image. "The bad people haven't died yet. I won't die."

Liang Shi felt there was more to her words, but there was no time to ask in detail. The staff was still urging her. She could only give a few quick instructions, then promised to call her once everything was arranged.

Gu Xingyue hung up directly after hearing this.

Liang Shi stared at her phone, feeling that Gu Xingyue must have gone through something.

Could it be that Yang Jiani had hit her again?

Liang Shi was currently in the suburbs and couldn't get back anytime soon. Just worrying wasn't helpful—she could only deal with the matters at hand first.

The staff called her to get her hair and makeup done. Liang Shi acknowledged and hurried inside. Suddenly, her foot caught on something. In that instant, her gaze inadvertently swept to the side, and she saw a familiar figure.

The person was wearing a Klein blue T-shirt paired with high-waisted jeans, long hair casually tied in a ponytail, with a pure and cute face.

Liang Shi would never forget that face in her entire life.

It was—Sun Chengcheng!

---

Footnotes:

<sup>1</sup> Boot ceremony (開機宴, kāi jī yàn): A traditional ceremony held in the Chinese entertainment industry to mark the official start of filming for a TV drama or movie. It typically involves rituals for good luck, offerings to deities, and a gathering of the cast and crew. "開機" literally means "turning on the machine" (i.e., the camera), signifying the beginning of production.

<sup>2</sup> Female Lead #3 (女三號, nǚ sān hào): In Chinese drama terminology, characters are numbered by importance. Female Lead #1 (女一號) is the main female protagonist, Female Lead #2 (女二號) is the second most important female role, and Female Lead #3 (女三號) is the third. Despite being third, this is still considered a significant supporting role with substantial screen time.