

Chapter 93-1

Gu Yixue quickly pushed Sun Chengcheng's WeChat contact card to Liang Shi. Coincidentally, that person's online name was also CC.

In that world, Sun Chengcheng's online name had been CC.

When Liang Shi was making small talk, she had even asked why she was called CC.

Sun Chengcheng said the last two letters of her name were CC, and it sounded nice when called.

Also, when she opened her contact card, she discovered her bio was: Oranges aren't the only fruit.

It was a pretty popular phrase online that Liang Shi had seen since the day she added her on WeChat.

As someone who didn't surf the internet much, Liang Shi didn't know what this phrase meant. At the time, she only thought it was clever, so she made small talk and asked: "Then what is?"

Sun Chengcheng would smile sweetly: "Oranges are."

During filming back then, their relationship was in a semi-distant state. After all, they were filming a dual female lead drama with subtle yuri undertones.

Just like how BL was filmed as socialist brotherhood in dual male lead dramas, there wouldn't be any obvious kissing or hugging. The most excessive scene was when the two of them put their arms around each other's waists. All the other sweetness was in the details. If the drama was filmed well, just having the two of them in the same frame was sweet.

Most importantly were the two people's eye acting, so Sun Chengcheng's eyes were the very bright type, including her appearance—sweet and sunny.

Liang Shi knew her own orientation. When she first took on this drama, she didn't really want to accept it. The director of this drama had been kind to her, and her agent Sister Wang also said that truth and falsehood mixed together—she just needed to be careful during filming. There was no need to pay too much attention to this matter. Were they never going to cooperate with female actresses in the future?

Moreover, male actors who liked the same sex also took on danmei adaptations, didn't they?

There was no need to pay too much attention. It was just acting, after all.

After hesitating, Liang Shi still accepted this drama. At the beginning, she very deliberately avoided Sun Chengcheng.

As someone who always had a sunny goddess persona, Sun Chengcheng particularly liked being intimate with people—linking arms or holding hands. Although she was only one year younger than Liang Shi, it always gave people the feeling that the two had a large age gap. In the drama, they were seven years apart, so no one in the crew paid attention at the time. Sun Chengcheng's agent even said that Chengcheng was like this in other crews too, particularly liking to play with older sisters.

Liang Shi:

At the time, because of that statement from her agent, Liang Shi's assistant Xiao Bai was angry for quite a while, feeling that the agent was speaking in a passive-aggressive way.

It was Liang Shi who comforted her and advised her there was no need to be angry.

As the saying goes, you don't hit someone who's smiling at you. During the filming process, Sun Chengcheng kept showing goodwill toward Liang Shi, so Liang Shi couldn't directly reject her. After all, they were dual female leads in the same drama. From when the drama finished filming to the promotional period during broadcast, and even including the aftermath after it finished airing, they had to cooperate.

So gradually, Liang Shi accepted some of Sun Chengcheng's goodwill.

She just didn't expect that right after the drama finished airing, Sun Chengcheng would make various implications about her in various interviews. Then one day, a marketing account broke the news that Liang Shi had sexually harassed Sun Chengcheng on set, followed by exposing Liang Shi's sexual orientation, with audio recording as evidence.

That day was because Liang Shi was at the wrap party. She had been forced to drink a lot of alcohol. When she was already tipsy, she had already said she wanted to go back, but Sun Chengcheng wouldn't let her. She kept passing her drinks, kept telling her it was the last glass, but it was one glass after another until she was drunk and dizzy.

Then Sun Chengcheng pulled her aside and asked her in a low voice: "Do you like girls?"

Liang Shi, having drunk too much, wasn't on guard. "So what if I do? Is liking girls illegal? Why should heterosexuals be praised while homosexuals can't? Has my liking girls hurt anyone?"

Normally she absolutely couldn't have said something like this, but that day she had drunk a bit too much. Plus, during the day she had heard someone say that so-and-so was ostracized because she liked girls, and her mood wasn't great.

So when Sun Chengcheng asked that question, she directly said all that. Her emotions got a bit heated.

As a result, that audio recording appeared in a marketing account's exposé, and Sun Chengcheng's voice was mosaicked.

Only Liang Shi's could be heard clearly.

Having drunk that much, Sun Chengcheng probably thought Liang Shi didn't know at all who she had been talking to. But Liang Shi happened to be someone who, after getting drunk, would remember completely everything she had done. So when that audio recording came out, Liang Shi recognized it immediately.

She immediately called Sun Chengcheng, wanting to ask her why she did this. But after Sun Chengcheng answered, before she could even open her mouth to question her, Sun Chengcheng played the villain filing the complaint first and cried: "I'm sorry, Sister Liang Shi. I didn't plan to tell anyone about those things. Please don't blacklist me."

Liang Shi: "....."

Good grief.

Liang Shi was stunned at the time.

Afterward, Sister Wang arrived in time and hung up the phone. But the segment of Sun Chengcheng answering her call was also posted online. Now Liang Shi couldn't explain herself even with ten mouths.

Sister Wang said later that she had been too impulsive at the time. Why bother calling Sun Chengcheng?

Even if people in the industry knew who was behind it all, they wouldn't verify it because they knew there would be no result, and they'd only get themselves into trouble.

But Liang Shi at that time was experiencing such a thing for the first time. Actors who had worked with her all felt she knew how to advance and retreat, was courteous and polite, and had never been like Sun Chengcheng—immediately stepping on another lead actress after cooperating to increase her own buzz and heat.

In any case, after this matter about Liang Shi was exposed, she was scolded miserably.

Many people even went to the brands she cooperated with to demand they replace their spokesperson. As expected, within one day all her endorsements were dropped, and she still had to pay breach of contract fees.

The company would help her pay part of it, but the bulk still had to come from her.

Sister Wang only told her not to worry, that she would help with public relations. She told her not to look at the news or Weibo recently. In the end, afraid she would secretly look, Sister Wang even confiscated her phone.

Bored at home, she went to a bar. At the time, she was thinking indignantly—wasn't the entire internet saying she deserved to die for being in love?

Then she'd go make this reputation real!

Since things were already like this, she might as well be a romantic ghost.

So she went to the bar. The bar's alcohol was too delicious. She drank herself into oblivion. When she came out, she fell.

Splat.

She directly transmigrated into the Liang Shi here.

Recalling her experiences in that world, Liang Shi really hated Sun Chengcheng to the point where her teeth itched.

She had almost never had such an experience of disliking someone. Usually when she encountered things, she would just comfort herself—let things slide, after all, none of it was a big deal.

But this time, she really wanted to question Sun Chengcheng face-to-face: Where exactly had she offended her? Why did she have to be so ruthless? Using such despicable things to attack people was the most contemptible.

But the world didn't give her this opportunity.

After all, she had already transmigrated here, but she didn't expect to encounter Sun Chengcheng again here.

Had Sun Chengcheng also transmigrated, or were the two worlds merging?

Or was this just a parallel world's Sun Chengcheng, and the username and bio were just coincidences?

Was the person she saw that day on the "Afterglow" set Sun Chengcheng?

Since Sun Chengcheng had already gotten a role from Gu Yixue, why would she still appear on the "Afterglow" set?

That day, Liang Shi had only caught a glimpse of Sun Chengcheng, and hadn't seen her since. Later she even thought her eyes were playing tricks on her. But then she turned around and heard this name again from Gu Yixue.

Yet she still didn't know if it was the one she knew.

Too many, too many questions swirled in Liang Shi's mind, leaving her completely confused.

She had thought that she would never see the name Sun Chengcheng or this person ever again in this lifetime.

Chapter 93-2

Liang Shi searched online for information. Regarding the name Sun Chengcheng, many results came up in the search, but not one could match the Sun Chengcheng she knew, or the Sun Chengcheng who was going to co-star with her in "Heart's Path" this time.

However, when she scrolled to the third page, she saw someone with the ID "Sun Chengcheng Is Very Sweet" who had posted on Weibo: Hi, I'm Sun Chengcheng.....

Liang Shi clicked in and discovered it was a very long self-introduction, with a photo attached below.

She looked exactly the same as Sun Chengcheng from the other world.

Liang Shi remembered that before filming began, she had looked at information about her co-stars. Sun Chengcheng was properly trained in the profession, having graduated from the Capital Media University's Department of Performing Arts, and had been first in her major that year.

There were also several people in their cohort who had been child stars, so that cohort received special attention from netizens. Sun Chengcheng had broken into the scene with her photos.

But her path in the entertainment industry wasn't smooth. First she encountered a terrible management company, then she was swindled out of money by her agent and assistant. Despite being so young, she had experienced many things. It wasn't until she met a decent agent who brought her along that things improved slightly, and her reputation was much better than before.

Sun Chengcheng in this world was about the same—still properly trained in the profession, first in the performing arts department, had participated in graduation productions, looked spirited, and would be the type of female lead face that directors liked for school dramas.

Sun Chengcheng's Weibo didn't have many posts. The most recent one was posted the day before yesterday.

@Sun Chengcheng Is Very Sweet: Received good news today~ Happily spinning in circles.jpg, I'll share with everyone another day!

Below was a selfie with loose twin tails, Japanese-style makeup, heavy blush, and well-applied eye makeup.

In the entertainment industry here, this type of makeup was rarely seen, so it was quite unique. There were many people below fawning over her appearance, most appearing to be female accounts: "Sister, let's be close," "Wife, kisses"—such comments were countless.

But Sun Chengcheng replied very enthusiastically below, sending many emojis like kissy faces, love you, hearts, etc.

Liang Shi scanned her Weibo in a circle but didn't click follow.

She hesitated until late at night before finally clicking into that WeChat contact card and requesting to add her as a friend.

After applying, she sat there staring at the screen, scrolling through Weibo listlessly for a while. Using her alternate account, she quickly browsed through Sun Chengcheng's Weibo and discovered that she had registered this account one week ago.

This didn't make sense.

As a performing arts student, she should deeply understand the importance of fans in the traffic era, so she very likely would have registered a Weibo account during university.

To verify her speculation, Liang Shi even searched for other students. Even those who hadn't left school yet, who might have only guest-starred in a role in some production, had already registered Weibo accounts.

Every post Sun Chengcheng made after registering on Weibo was very calculated. She posted roughly once every other day, and when posting, she would include a selfie every other day. The selfie images were all heavily edited, from face to legs, with not a single flaw.

Sun Chengcheng's nose didn't look great, so she would apply heavy contouring on both sides of her nose and highlight the tip of her nose. Every photo-taking habit was exactly the same as in that original world.

Liang Shi felt somewhat disoriented. Just as she was thinking anxiously and uneasily, a WeChat message sounded, showing that she and Sun Chengcheng were now friends.

Liang Shi sat on this end. After waiting for one minute, she sent a message over: [Hello, I was introduced by Director Quella. My name is Liang Shi.]

Chapter 93-3

//

Meanwhile, on the other side of this city, in a certain upscale residential area.

Sun Chengcheng was sitting in a spacious room painting her toenails. The nail brush gently swept over, covering them with a layer of light pink.

The housekeeper brought over bird's nest soup and lightly knocked on her door. "Miss, your bird's nest soup is ready. You should eat it while it's hot."

"Got it." Sun Chengcheng's hand movements paused. "What about my parents?"

The housekeeper said in a low voice: "President Sun and Madam have already retired for the night."

Sun Chengcheng said: "Alright, then you can leave too. Come collect the bowl tomorrow morning."

"Yes, Miss."

The housekeeper respectfully left.

After the room door closed, Sun Chengcheng continued painting her toenail polish. But the phone on the bed vibrated slightly, causing her hand to shake and instantly paint outside the lines.

.....

How annoying.

Sun Chengcheng wiped away those marks with tissue and cursed the person who sent her a message in her heart. Then she picked up her phone and saw that it was a stranger friend request.

She looked through the profile. The name was just an "L," and the bio was a period.

A bit pretentious.

Sun Chengcheng never liked this type, so she waited until she finished beautifully painting her nails before picking up her phone again and unhurriedly clicking accept.

Then she elegantly sat there eating the bird's nest soup.

She had discovered one week ago that she had arrived in an ABO world, a world where everyone would grow glands.

Actually, for an old bookworm who had read countless Mary Sue novels and had many years of TXT reading experience, the ABO worldview wasn't unfamiliar to her. It was just that she had never read this type of book before. After all, as a TXT reader, she always read whatever others sent her.

However, she quickly adapted to this worldview.

She had transmigrated into someone with the same name as her. The original body was, like her, a performing arts student who happened to graduate this year. Although the original body was talented, she had become mute due to an accident.

After she arrived, she could speak. The original body was an Omega, so she was now one too.

Her father was the CEO of a bubble tea chain store, and her mother was a ballet dancer—much more prestigious than her original family.

But strangely, she entered this world when dreaming.

When she woke up, she would reappear in the real world.

She had deliberately calculated that the flow of time in this world was three times that of the real world. Because she was an unwavering eight-hour sleeper—even if there was a night shoot that required rushing work, she would maintain eight hours of sleep—and during the eight hours she slept, she could spend twenty-four hours here.

This dream felt too real, so real it was like playing an immersive game. And as a high-level player, she naturally had some advantages over others, such as her acting skills and her prophetic abilities.

She had obtained an album called "Entertainment Industry Dream Fragments." Each page of the album featured an important entertainment industry bigwig—investors with unique insight, future triple-crown best actors, international renowned directors, future best actresses, etc. The page about each of them had a strategy guide attached.

In other words, as long as she had this album, she could pursue strategies with these bigwigs, then become the entertainment industry's heartthrob, the hottest star, a woman standing at the peak of power.

When she saw this album, she was overjoyed. So this was compensating for her unsatisfactory reality by letting her achieve her dreams in the dream world?

She had gotten the script of a max-level boss returning to the newbie village!

But Sun Chengcheng wasn't happy for long. All the dream fragments disappeared, leaving only mysterious mosaics.

A system called "King of the Entertainment Industry" reminded her that she could only unlock the album's content by completing corresponding tasks. Her tasks were all very simple—go to bed early, wake up early, exercise, study hard at school, etc. After completing tasks for two days, she chose to unlock the international renowned director's strategy guide.

International renowned director Gu Yixue, English name/stage name Quella, the least favored illegitimate daughter of the Gu family, a genius misanthrope with unique artistic vision and scriptwriting abilities.

She was a lonely wandering spirit, a walker in the night, and an arsonist of hearts. There would always be people one after another, like moths to a flame, loving her.

She hated all bright things. Playing with people's hearts was her favorite thing to do.

She longed to become better but hated when others wanted to make her better. She was a complex contradiction.

Her favorite food was coconut, her most hated fruit was pineapple, her favorite flower was hyacinth, her most hated flower was rose.

Her favorite person was Shen Fenghe, her most hated person was Gu Chunmian. In her concept, Gu Chunmian was hypocritical, dissolute, and inhumane, so she most hated false gentlemen.

She most liked light brown eyes, most liked people wearing white dresses, most liked things mysterious and unpredictable like the wind, most liked romance and mystery, but also most longed to kill romance.

.....

An entire densely packed page was all introductions related to Gu Yixue. So on a rainy day, she wore a white dress, wore light brown colored contacts, kept her hair long and straight, and went to the street to "coincidentally encounter" Gu Yixue, successfully obtaining a role in her next production.

When she met Gu Yixue at that time, she was stunned, because her face was too beautiful—she didn't look like a misanthrope at all.

Apart from the occasional coldness and distance revealed in her eyes that could almost freeze people, most of the time she was romantic and carefree, just appearing somewhat dissolute.

But the information the album gave her also included a sentence describing Gu Yixue: She shuttles through crowds, yet remains detached from the world.

Currently, Sun Chengcheng had only unlocked Gu Yixue's profile card, because she felt that as a fledgling young actress, obtaining a female lead role from an international renowned director meant that her career in the entertainment industry was already halfway to success.

Sun Chengcheng was about to accumulate enough fragment points.

The next profile card she wanted to unlock was the investor with unique insight. Having obtained a role, she now needed to get money—mainly to get a mobile ATM.

The information this album provided about Gu Yixue was all very literary, so Sun Chengcheng couldn't currently confirm whether everyone's information was this literary or only Gu Yixue's.

She urgently needed to confirm this, because for her, what she needed more was straightforward and effective methods.

Although the strategy for Gu Yixue was successful this time, it didn't mean it would always be successful afterward.

The "King of the Entertainment Industry" system would also accumulate "Charm Value" as Sun Chengcheng continuously completed tasks. The higher the charm value accumulated, the higher her success rate in pursuing strategy targets.

Sun Chengcheng treated this as a gacha and strategy game to play. It was quite comfortable.

Most importantly, in this world, she enjoyed treatment like a little princess. The family here was so happy she could speak that they cried tears of joy, holding her in the palm of their hands as their precious darling. Compared to her previous world... it was completely different.

Sun Chengcheng felt that everything appearing in this dream was compensation for her reality. What she couldn't get in reality, she must obtain here.

Sitting at the table, she elegantly drank half a bowl of bird's nest soup, then felt her stomach was a bit full. As a female celebrity, she must strictly control her weight, so she didn't continue eating. The instant she put down her spoon, the phone beside her vibrated slightly. The person who had just added her finally sent a message.

Sun Chengcheng had only given them half a bowl of bird's nest soup's worth of time. She had been thinking that if this person didn't speak, she would delete them after finishing the bird's nest soup.

So wishy-washy, not a bit polite.

But the moment she saw the message, her pupils dilated in shock.

—It was Liang Shi?

Chapter 93-4

Sun Chengcheng checked the profile card again. It was very sparse information.

In the original world, Liang Shi's WeChat name had been "A Shi," and her bio was: Walk toward where there is light.

This was a completely different style.

Could it be someone with the same name but different surname?

Sun Chengcheng had inquired about Liang Shi's news through various channels and learned that she had become a vegetable. It was precisely because of this that her agent released a statement for her to leave the industry, using this to quell the public's anger.

However, after Liang Shi released her statement to leave the industry, someone—no one knew who—released news that her father had been in prison. Her agent conducted crisis public relations, which barely made her days slightly better.

But after Liang Shi's statement to leave the industry was released, Liang Shi's previously laid-back fans went crazy, practically slaughtering her comment section like a massacre. Cursing back and releasing damaging information was nothing to them—their combat power was much stronger than ordinary haters.

And the person most affected was Sun Chengcheng.

Because after the drama promotion ended, she had stepped on the actress she cooperated with in the same group. After that, no one dared use her anymore. Everyone stayed far away from her, afraid of getting tainted by association.

There were even bigwigs who said that if this drama had Sun Chengcheng, they wouldn't act in it.

Most of these bigwigs were famous actors who had cooperated with Liang Shi before. After the incident happened, they had all quietly voiced support for Liang Shi.

But because the online criticism was one-sided, everyone was afraid of being implicated, so few dared to speak up openly.

However, once the furor passed, even fools knew who had released that information. So they unanimously turned their arrows toward Sun Chengcheng, targeting her in various underhanded ways, causing Sun Chengcheng to lose several productions.

After this incident ended, although she was more famous online than before and netizens mostly pitied their "sister," few people dared to use her for filming.

Especially... Liang Shi's agent Wang Zhaozhao, whose methods were tough and resolute. She had released quite a bit of damaging information about her both openly and secretly. The information about her father having been in prison was also released by a marketing account at Wang Zhaozhao's request.

When her agent called Wang Zhaozhao, Wang Zhaozhao didn't leave any evidence, only saying: "What a shame. Such a good actress, how did she end up with damaging information?"

Overtly praising while secretly mocking.

It made Sun Chengcheng so angry she couldn't sleep all night.

Because of this incident, Sun Chengcheng's credibility in the entertainment industry plummeted. She only acted in a low-budget school drama. The male actor had also cooperated with Liang Shi before—he was a small supporting role in Liang Shi's previous drama, playing Liang Shi's younger brother in the show.

He looked pretty good, appearing obedient and gentle at first glance—the type Sun Chengcheng liked.

At the time, she was still thinking about hyping up a CP pairing in the school drama to boost her popularity. But when he saw her for the first time, he said two words right to her face: "Bad luck."

Sun Chengcheng: "?"

After that, the male actor told her both openly and secretly to stay away from him. Except after filming started, the guy could quickly get into character after cameras rolled. Although he had a cold face toward her before filming started, once he faced the camera he smiled like a spring breeze. This made Sun Chengcheng feel even more wronged, to the point where she wanted to cry in front of the camera.

So although it was the simplest and easiest-to-film school drama, Sun Chengcheng kept having NGs, unable to even display seventy percent of her previous acting skills.

Even so, every time she had an NG, that guy would coldly mock: "Can you do this or not? When acting with Sister Liang Shi before, she never had NGs. How did your acting even match Sister Liang Shi's back then?"

Sun Chengcheng: "....."

She got so angry on set that she slapped that male actor, and someone caught it on camera.

The person filming was a paparazzo. That paparazzo used to be especially good at following Liang Shi. Every time, he couldn't capture any damaging information about Liang Shi. He had almost become the publisher of Liang Shi's daily vlogs, posting every day: Liang Shi went to work, Liang Shi got off work, Liang Shi went to the supermarket, Liang Shi took her assistant to eat. One day he even posted a vlog of him eating with Liang Shi.

Being able to get along this well with paparazzi was truly rare in the entertainment industry.

Liang Shi was kind-hearted. After Liang Shi released her statement to leave the industry, even a well-known entertainment industry paparazzo reposted that Weibo post with genuine emotion: [The kindest person I've ever photographed. She was truly so gentle her entire person glowed. I'll always remember that snowy day when she saw me crouching in the grass. She gave me a hot water bottle and bread, told me to go home early, and even gave me a stack of small cards—toys that little boys particularly liked at the time. She said she'd seen me many times and had even found my wallet and seen photos of my son. She told me to give the toys to my son to play with. That stack of cards cost 2,999 yuan on the official website.]

[Being a paparazzo isn't a good profession. We often use any means necessary to make money. No celebrity likes us, but she was the exception. Actually, she didn't like us photographing her either, but she would always smile at us and never said a single bad word. One rainy day, I was standing across the street photographing her again. She treated me to hotpot and even joked that sometimes when she came home and saw paparazzi outside the residential area, she actually felt quite warm, because she knew paparazzi were just photographing her and wouldn't hurt her. Only those with a clear conscience have nothing to fear from being photographed without restraint.]

[She's someone all the paparazzi in the industry have followed for a round, but no one has captured any damaging information. She's also the celebrity we've photographed with the most shining points of humanity. I can put down everyone in this industry here—not one person can be as upright and honorable as her. If you disagree, come debate me. I have more or less some information on all of you.]

[It's just a matter of who she likes. What did she do wrong? Some people can like scumbags, can like trash, can like men who commit domestic violence, men who cheat, can accept widowed marriages—so what's wrong with liking a woman? Who does it bother? I've been following her for two and a half years. I've never seen her get close to women. Those of you making up fantasies can disperse now. She likes women, but she doesn't like just any woman.]

[I'm not doing this line of work anymore anyway. When I'm bored in the future, I'll only photograph one person—Sun Chengcheng. You'd better behave yourself.]

Such a long essay directly naming names, saying he would follow Sun Chengcheng.

Making her live cleanly. And the paparazzo very humanely said: "I think without harming others, just you—I'll only release your own damaging information. And I definitely won't look at pictures and make up stories. If you're capable, just live cleanly and honestly."

This kind of thing was unprecedented in the industry. Everyone thought that paparazzo had gone crazy.

But that paparazzo said: "Ah, you don't understand. It's just that after interacting with Liang Shi, I really can't accept such a person suddenly..."

The rest of the words weren't sent out, but Liang Shi's fans were all moved to tears.

The video that was filmed that day was posted online. The high-definition camera directly recorded the entire process. Sun Chengcheng slapped that male actor when filming hadn't even started. The male actor stood there stunned for a few seconds. "What are you doing?"

Afterward, the male actor posted passive-aggressively online: [I believe Sister Chengcheng didn't mean to hit me. She was just unhappy. I'm fine.]

The way to deal with a green tea is to be even more green tea than her.

The male actor had few fans, but strong combat power. Plus there were Liang Shi's fans. Sun Chengcheng was directly cyberbullied in a wave.

Facts proved that cause and effect cycle, and retribution is inevitable.

Extremely frustrated in reality, Sun Chengcheng now had this dream world. Every day she couldn't wait to sleep and enter this dream world. Here she could become a beloved person, could have a successful career, become a big star in the spotlight.

But she never expected... this world would also have Liang Shi.

Chapter 93-5

After seeing this name, Sun Chengcheng was stunned. She quickly searched online for Liang Shi. What came up was the promotional material for "Afterglow." The face on the poster was exactly the same as Liang Shi from the real world.

Then... did Liang Shi also have a dream world?

.....

Sun Chengcheng couldn't believe it. She decided to test things out first and replied: [Hello, I'm Sun Chengcheng. You can call me Orange.]

Liang Shi quickly replied: [Okay.]

No further words after that.

Sun Chengcheng stared at the screen. After being restless for a long while, she sent Liang Shi a message: [How old are you this year? What should I call you?]

Liang Shi: [Just call me Liang Shi. I'm twenty-five this year, married with no children. Is there anything else you want to know?]

From this reply message, she was a total show-off.

Completely different from Liang Shi in the real world. Sun Chengcheng relaxed a bit.

Sun Chengcheng sent her a voice message, with a pinched voice: "No more questions. Did Director Quella ask you to add me to build rapport? Then is there anything you want to know about me?"

Liang Shi sent a voice message back: "Yes, it was the director who said so, but I don't have anything I want to know about you. Say whatever you want to say. If you don't want to say anything, I'm going to sleep. Oh, and don't contact me before ten in the morning—I'll have wake-up grumpiness. Also, don't speak with a pinched voice. I find it uncomfortable to listen to. And I added you to get acquainted in advance, not to date you. There's no need to be so affected."

One voice message, delivered in one breath, highlighting the "show-off" image to the fullest.

After Sun Chengcheng finished listening, she was angry at first, but two seconds later she suddenly realized that this person couldn't possibly be Liang Shi from the real world.

This was at most an arrogant and rude "show-off." The voice when speaking, the pauses in breath, and this attitude were completely different from Liang Shi.

Probably just an NPC in the game world.

Purely coincidentally having the same face and name.

Sun Chengcheng felt more at ease now. When she replied to her, she was also more serious: "I'm not pinching my voice. I sound like this naturally. And you don't need to be so narcissistic either. I'm not interested in you. If you're willing to contact me, then contact me. If not, then forget it. We'll meet after filming starts anyway. I hope you won't regret it then."

"Oh ho? Do you have a face even prettier than Quella's? Or prettier than my wife? Would I even be interested in you? If there's no mirror at home, there's always a toilet, right? Take a look when you have time. Don't be so ordinary yet so arrogant." Liang Shi sent another long voice message.

Sun Chengcheng was quite angry. Meanwhile, after sending the message, Liang Shi confirmed—this was that Sun Chengcheng. Her tone of speech was still as irritating as ever. Many of her verbal habits hadn't changed.

However, Liang Shi had directly switched to a different persona for herself, letting Sun Chengcheng lower her guard first.
