

Chapter 21-1

Only after going downstairs did Liang Shi understand the complete meaning of that sentence.

It should be—you sleep on the bed tonight, I'll sleep on the floor.

But how heartless would she, a physically healthy Alpha, have to be to let an Omega who had just passed her heat period not long ago, just been discharged from the hospital, and whose body was still on the edge of danger, sleep on the floor?

Liang Shi couldn't do it.

Liang Shi felt that any decent human being couldn't do it.

After the three of them finished eating, Xu Qingzhu went to the study.

Xu Qingya also returned to her room to sleep.

Liang Shi had nothing to do and went back to her room to look things up.

She urgently needed to understand the "demons and monsters" around the original owner.

Those who had sent her disgusting text messages before, and those who posted in group chats about wanting to "play with her wife" together.

What kind of ghosts were they all?

She had already quit all the groups before, but the contacts remained. A bunch of people were sending her messages. Every time she refreshed, there were red notification dots everywhere—it was enough to drive someone with OCD crazy.

Liang Shi picked those with slightly more decent usernames to check, and they were basically all asking why she had quit the groups, or asking whether her sex life with her Omega was satisfying.

She didn't know if it was satisfying, but these people were all quite perverted.

She had originally wanted to get some information from here, but after looking through it, she found nothing useful, so she deleted many more contacts until the system warned her that she was deleting too many people and asked if her account had been hacked.

After deleting a large wave of people, she posted something on her social media.

【Spring grass Summer clouds
Autumn fallen leaves Winter snow

Everything seems full of life
Everything is full of poetry
Everything reminds me to live well
To love the world better

Most importantly
We should cherish the people around us
The happiness of the present moment】

It was like a lyrical poem, completely different from the original owner's previous social media style.

After all, the original owner used to post pictures of long legs, beautiful Omega and Beta portraits, or yachts, luxury cars, and socialite parties.

These were also different from Liang Shi's lifestyle.

Liang Shi had once thought that if she ever became suddenly wealthy, she would definitely keep a low profile.

She could buy luxury cars and mansions, but she would always remember to keep a low profile.

Don't flaunt your wealth.

Because once wealth is too ostentatiously displayed, it shows that the person isn't very smart.

When she posted this little poem, it caused quite a stir in her social circle.

Some people in her circle commented:

[Where did you copy this from? It's quite beautiful.]

[Teacher Liang, would you consider ghostwriting essays? My sister's essay is still 800 words short.]

[My god, are you planning to turn over a new leaf?]

[What stimulated you?]

[.....]

Liang Shi replied uniformly: 【Not copied, I wrote it myself.】

【Planning to turn over a new leaf and become a new person.】

The comment section was full of: [???

Obviously no one believed it.

But Liang Shi wasn't posting it for them to see—it was for Xu Qingzhu to see, and for herself to see.

She was Liang Shi, a Liang Shi who would work hard to live well.

The original owner had initially had a job, holding the title of Deputy Director of Human Resources at the Liang family company, but barely went there for a few days.

She was used to being a spoiled rich kid, racing cars and horses with Cheng Ran¹ and that crowd. When she was happy, she'd charter helicopters to fly to casinos for a round of gambling, losing millions in a single night was nothing.

Usually it was yachts, cruise ships, skiing—all kinds of entertainment activities done to perfection.

In college, her major was Chinese Language and Literature, a jack-of-all-trades major, but she attended a pretty poor university. She usually just scraped by during final exams, relied on finding people to attend classes for her, and even paid people to write her regular assignments. The academic standards of this school were very questionable.

She basically learned nothing.

Liang Shi was quite displeased about this.

Originally, she hadn't been able to attend university, and later wanted to take adult self-study exams multiple times, but because she had to seamlessly join film crews for acting, she never had time to study.

Even so, to better understand scripts, she constantly expanded her knowledge base. Learning never ends.

Because of her low education level, after becoming an actress, she was often attacked on this point.

It was quite painful.

If there was a chance, Liang Shi would still want to go back to school.

But currently, it was all just wishful thinking.

She looked up the Liang family enterprise—it was considered upper-middle class in Haicheng's upper social circles.

The main industry was high-end luxury goods, and they also owned some shopping malls and hotels, but had no connections with the government.

The southern land that Qiu Zimin mentioned should be a government-planned development area in the future, whether for building new shopping centers or new schools. For businessmen, as long as they caught the policy tailwind, making a fortune quickly was no problem.

Zhou Yi'an's family was in politics.

From ancient times to now, those in politics have always been one level higher than those in business.

It was understandable that Qiu Zimin wanted to connect with that line.

But to sell her?

Impossible.

Chapter 21-2

After finishing her research, Liang Shi also looked up Xu Qingzhu's family company.

Compared to the Liang family, the Xu family company was nothing worth mentioning—just a jewelry company.

But the Minghui Jewelry that the Xu family operated, if you counted back thirty years, was a renowned company in the industry. Every year they released one new product for each season—spring, summer, autumn, and winter—and before they even went on sale, they would be hyped to astronomical prices.

In the jewelry field, even Dongheng, which dealt in high-end luxury goods, couldn't compare to the Xu family.

Without exaggeration, thirty years ago, Minghui Jewelry was the industry benchmark, the unreachable goal of many jewelry companies.

But in recent years, it had declined.

Online, some even said that the decline of Minghui Jewelry was the decline of an era.

This showed how highly praised her family was online.

This company originally wasn't surnamed Xu. The previous generation's leader was surnamed Sheng, named Sheng Wang.

He had one son and one daughter. His daughter, Sheng Linlang, was Haicheng's premier socialite. There were rumors that the three major wealthy family heirs in Haicheng had all pursued her, but she chose the most unremarkable Xu Guangyao from among all her suitors—truly marrying down.

At that time, Xu Guangyao was merely a designer at Minghui Jewelry.

Everyone thought Minghui Jewelry should have been passed to his son Sheng Qinglin, but Sheng Qinglin was aloof and proud, becoming an internationally renowned architect at just 20 years old.

However, his girlfriend at the time was Su Yao, an internationally acclaimed jewelry designer.

This family business would never fall into Xu Guangyao's hands.

But life is unpredictable. When Sheng Qinglin was 25, he died in an accident, and his girlfriend went abroad for further studies, soon after which news of her marriage came out.

Old Master Sheng suddenly aged considerably and gradually lost interest in managing the company, slowly handing it over to Xu Guangyao.

Regarding Sheng Qinglin's death, there were various theories online.

Some said his girlfriend killed him because he had caught her cheating.

Others said Xu Guangyao killed him because Xu Guangyao benefited most from the whole affair.

But no one could reach a definitive conclusion.

Only those involved would know the truth.

After reading all this, Liang Shi felt many emotions.

She hadn't expected there to be such a twisted story behind Xu Qingzhu's family.

Just as she was browsing, her phone suddenly rang.

An unknown number appeared on the screen. She hesitated for a few seconds before answering.

A familiar voice came from the other end—it was Zhou Yi'an.

She laughed lightly, "Baby, you finally deigned to answer the phone."

Liang Shi: "....."

She'd have to change her number sooner or later.

"What do you want?" Liang Shi asked irritably.

"Can't I call you without a reason?" Zhou Yi'an laughed mischievously, but hearing her sigh and fearing she might hang up, immediately said: "When I was investigating you, I found out something. Don't you want to know?"

Liang Shi said coldly: "If you want to say it, say it. If not, forget it."

"It's about your lovely Omega. Do you want to..." Before Zhou Yi'an could finish, Liang Shi coldly interrupted: "Forget it if you're not going to say."

"Aren't you curious about who Xu Qingzhu's biological parents are..." Zhou Yi'an spoke urgently, but before she could finish, Liang Shi hung up.

Liang Shi firmly believed there was no such thing as a free lunch.

Zhou Yi'an coming to find her must have some ulterior motive.

Besides, what was so important about whether Xu Qingzhu's biological parents were found? As long as she had a good relationship with her current parents, that was enough.

Liang Shi promptly blocked that number.

After a while, her phone rang again.

She instinctively hung up.

But a few seconds later, it rang again.

She hung up again.

She guessed it was Zhou Yi'an calling from a different number.

This person was really annoying.

When that number called for the third time, she answered impatiently and said coldly: "Are you done yet?"

The other side was silent for two seconds: "....."

"If you call again, I'll report you for..."

Before she could say "sexual harassment," a clear voice responded: "Liang Shi."

Liang Shi: "?"

It wasn't Zhou Yi'an.

The original owner hadn't given anyone contact names.

"Yes." Liang Shi retracted all the curses she wanted to say and responded softly: "What's the matter?"

"Are you still coming to work at the company?" the other person said. "If you're not coming, I'll remove that position."

Liang Shi: "....."

Who was this?

She coughed lightly, "Um..."

The other person: "Mm?"

Liang Shi asked as humbly as possible: "May I ask who this is?"

The other person fell silent. Even through the phone, Liang Shi could feel his speechlessness.

A few seconds later, that clear voice said syllable by syllable: "Liang-Xin-He."

Liang Shi breathed a sigh of relief and said quite familiarly: "Second Brother."

Liang Xinhe: "?"

He snorted lightly, "Liang Shi, are you possessed by a ghost?"

Liang Shi: ".....???"
